DUPLICATE PARTS.

Parts wear out, and it's a FAR CRY to America or England. It may take you a long time to get that essential duplicate part from oversea. A man we know had experience of that recently. He had a foreign engine, and he had to send to the foreign factory for the part. They sent it out. It didn't fit. He sent it back. They tried again. It fitted, plus much filing and objurgation. The whole transaction took twelve months, and the engine had to lie idle. Had it been an "INVINCIBLE" we could have fixed him up within Twelve Hours with a duplicate part from our extensive stock.

It is an advantage to you to have an "INVINCIBLE," because you're right alongside the factory, and you deal direct with the makers, nor with agents.

The other day we got a rush order from the islands. A careless kanaka had dropped an important part overboard. They got the duplicate part by return mail, and it fitted to a nicety, because it was made on a jig, and was thus an absolute replica of the other part.

Then as to the QUALITY of the parts. We hope you were among the thousands who saw the display we had at the R.A. Show. We not only showed the "INVINCIBLE" Engines running, we also showed the separate parts of which we build them. These were taken out of just our ordinary stock. Well, they impressed all who saw them. They were so evidently GOOD. We have thousands of pounds' worth of similar stock at our works at Woolwich.

It will pay you to buy an "INVINCIBLE," the matchless Australian Engine. To be SURE, buy an "INVINCIBLE."

Town Office: 35 Pitt-street.

NIAGARA MARINE MOTORS.
The following has been received from Mr. J. Henderson, St. George-crescent, Drummoyne:—
"Dear Sir,—In reply to your recent inquiry, I can state that I am ABSOLUTELY SATISFIED in every respect with the 15-h.p. NIAGARA MOTOR I purchased from you last year. Being naturally desirous of obtaining best value for my money, I inspected every make in the market, then bought one of your outfits, as my long experience of oil engines has taught me what should be looked for in a motor to ensure satisfaction. The test of practical experience has endorsed my judgment, as I find the ENGINE ABSOLUTELY RELIABLE, and ITS ECONOMY IN OIL CONSUMPTION IS A SURPRISE to me." (Signed)
Comment is needless. Call and inspect.

EPILOGUE.—Continued.

Alas!—poor Philip! Elizabeth's black serge dress, and the black ribbon on her white sunhat were the outward tokens of a grief, cherished deep in her protesting, pitiful heart. Her brother had lived for some four months after her engagement to Anderson; always, in spite of encouraging doctors, under the same sharp premonition of death which has dictated his sudden change of attitude towards his Canadian friend. In the January of the new year Anderson had joined them at Bordighera, and there, after many alternating hopes and fears, a sudden attack of pneumonia had slit the thin-spun life. A few weeks later, at Mrs. Gaddesden's urgent desire, and while she was in the care of a younger sister to whom she was tenderly attached, there had been a quiet wedding at Genoa, and a very pale and sad Elizabeth had been carried by her Anderson to some of the beloved Italian towns, where for so long she had reaped a yearly harvest of delight. In Rome, Florence, and Venice she must needs rouse herself, if only to show the keen novice eyes beside her what to look at, and to grapple with the unexpected remarks which the spectacle evoked from Anderson. He looked in respectful silence at Bellini, and Tintoret; but the industrial growth of the north, the strikes of braccianti on the central plains, and the poverty of Sicily and the south—in these problems he was soon deeply plunged,—teaching himself Italian in order to understand them.

Then they had returned to Mrs. Gaddesden, and to the surrender of Martindale to its new master. For the estate went to a cousin, and when the beauty and the burden of it were finally gone, Philip's gentle ineffectual mother departed with relief to the moss-grown dower-house beside Bassenthwaite lake, there to sorrow for her only son, and to find in the expansion of Elizabeth's life, in Elizabeth's letters, and the prospects of Elizabeth's visits, the chief means left of courage and resignation. Philip's love for Anderson, his actual death in those strong arms, had strengthened immeasurably the latter's claim upon her; and in March she parted with him and Elizabeth, promising them boldly that she would come to them in the fall, and spend a Canadian winter with them.

Then Anderson and Elizabeth journeyed West in hot haste to face a general election. Anderson was returned, and during three or four months at Ottawa, Elizabeth was introduced to Canadian politics, and to the swing and beat of those young interests and developing national hopes which, even after London, and for the Londoner, lend romance and significance to the simple life of Canada's nascent capital. But through it all both she and Anderson pined for the West, and when Parliament rose in early July, they fled first to their rising farm-buildings on one of the tributaries of the Saskatchewan, and then, till the homestead was ready, and the fall ploughing in sight, they had gone to the Rockies, in order that they might gratify a passionate wish of Elizabeth's—to get for one beyond beaten tracks and surprise the unknown. She pleaded for it as their real honeymoon. It might never be possible again; for the toils of life would soon have snared them.

And so, after a month's wandering beyond all reach of civilisation, they were here in the wild heart of Manitou's wild land, and the red and white of Elizabeth's cheek, the fire in her eyes showed how the god's spell had worked.

* * * * *

The evening came. Their frugal meal, prepared by one of the Indian half-breeds, and eaten in a merry community among beds of unknown flowers, was soon done; and the husband and wife pushed off again in the boat—for the densely wooded shores of the lake were impassable on foot—to watch the moon rise on this mysterious land.

And as they floated there, often hand in hand, talking a little, but dreaming more—Anderson's secret thought reviewed the past year, and the incredible fortune which had given him Elizabeth.

Deep in his nature was still the old pessimism, the old sadness. Could he make her happy? In the close contact of marriage he realised all that had gone to the making of her subtle and delicate being—the influences of a culture and tradition of which he was mostly ignorant, though her love was opening many gates to him. He felt himself an inferior,—and there were dark moments when it seemed to him inevitable that she must tire of him. And then his self-respect, his pride, his patriotism, his passion—stood up and wrestled with his doubt. She was not less, but more, than he had imagined her. What was in truth his safeguard and hers, was the fact that at the very root of her life Elizabeth was a poet. She had seen Canada and Anderson from the beginning in the light of imagination—and that light was not going to fail her now. For it sprang from the truth and glow of her own nature; by the help of it she made her world; and Canada and Anderson moved under it, nobly seen and nobly felt.

This he half shrinkingly understood, and he repaid her with adoration and all the strength of his manhood. For her sake he was ready to do a hundred things he had never yet thought of, reading, inquiring, observing, in wider circles and over an ample range. For as the New World, through Anderson, worked on Elizabeth—so Europe, through Elizabeth, worked on Anderson. And thus from life to life goes on the great interpenetrating, intermingling flux of things.

It seemed as though the golden light could not die from the lake, though midsummer was long past. But up into its midst floated the moon, and as they sat watching it steal along the northern snow-peaks they talked of the vast undiscovered regions beyond, of the valleys and lakes that no survey has ever mapped, and the rivers that from the beginning of time have spread their pageant of beauty for the heavens alone; then of that sudden stir and uproar of human life—prospectors, navvies, lumbermen—that was now beginning to be heard along that narrow strip where the new line of the Grand Trunk Pacific is soon to pierce the wilderness—yet another link in the girdling of the world; and further yet, their fancy followed, ever northward—solitude beyond solitude, desert beyond desert—till in the Yukon it fell upon gold-seeking man, dominating at last a terrible and hostile earth, which had starved and tortured and slain him in his thousands, before she would let him tame her to his will.

And then—by happy reaction—it was the prairies again—their fruitful infinity—and the emigrant rush from east and south.

"When we are old," said Elizabeth softly, slipping her hand into Anderson's, "will all this courage die out of us? Now—nothing of all this vastness, this mystery frightens me. I feel a kind of insolent, superhuman strength—as if even I could guide a plough, reap corn, shoot rapids, catch a wild goat by the hair—and shoot my lances at the sun.'"

"With this hand?" said Anderson, looking at it with a face of amusement. But Elizabeth took no heed—except to slip the other hand after it—both into the same shelter.

She pursued her thought, murmuring the words, the white lids falling over her eyes:—"But when one is feeble and dying, will it all grow awful to me? Suddenly—shall I long to creep into some old, old corner of England or Italy—and feel round me close walls and dim small rooms, and dear, stuffy, familiar streets that thousands and thousands of feet have worn before mine?"

Anderson smiled at her. He had guided their boat into a green cove where there was a little strip of open ground between the water and the forest. They made fast the boat, and Anderson found a mossy seat under a tall pine from which the lightning of a recent storm had stripped a great limb, leaving a crimson gash in the trunk. And there Elizabeth nestled to him, and he with his arm about her, and the intoxication of her slender beauty mastering his senses, tried to answer her as a plain man may. The common-places of passion—its foolish promises—its blind confidence—its trembling joy;—there is no other path for love to travel by, and Elizabeth and Anderson trod it like their fellows.

Six months later on a clear winter evening Elizabeth was standing in the sitting-room of a Saskatchewan farmhouse. She looked out upon a dazzling world of snow, lying thinly under a pale greenish sky, in which the sunset clouds were just beginning to gather. The land before her sloped to a broad frozen river up which a waggon and a team of horses was plodding its way—the steam rising in clouds round the bodies of the horses and men. On a track leading to the river a sledge was running—the bells jingling in the still, light air. To her left were the great barns of the homestead, and beyond the long low cowshed, with a group of Shorthorns and Herefords standing beside the open door. Her eyes delighted in the whiteness of the snow, or the touches of orange and scarlet in the clumps of bush, in a note of crimson here and there, in the withered reeds pushing through the snow, or in the thin background of a few taller trees, the "shelter-belt" of the farm, rising brown and sharp against the blue.

Within the farmhouse sitting-room flamed a great wood fire, which shed its glow on the white walls, on the prints and photographs and books which were still Elizabeth's companions in the heart of the prairies, as they had been at Martindale. The room was simplicity itself, yet full of charm, with its blue druggeting, its pale green chairs and curtains. At its further end a curtain half drawn aside showed another room, a dining-room, also fire-lit—with a long table spread for tea, a bare floor of polished wood-blocks, and a few prints on the walls.

The waggon she had seen on the river approached the homestead. The man who was driving it—a strongly-limbed, fair-haired fellow—lifted his cap as he saw Elizabeth at the window. She nodded and smiled at him. He was Edward Tyson, one of the two engine-drivers who had taken her and Philip through the Kicking Horse pass. His friend also could be seen standing among the cattle gathered in the farmyard. They had become Anderson's foremen and partners on his farm of twelve hundred acres, of which only some three hundred acres had been as yet brought under the plough. The rest was still virgin prairie, pasturing a large varied herd of cattle and horses. The two north-countrymen had been managing it all in Anderson's Parliamentary absences, and were quite as determined as he to make it a centre of science and progress for a still remote and sparsely peopled district. One of the brothers was married, and lived in a small frame-house, a stone's throw from the main building of the farm. The other was the head of the "bothy" or boarding-house for hired men, a long, low building, with cheerful white-curtained windows, which could be seen just beyond the cow-house.

As she looked over the broad whiteness of the farmlands, above which the sunset clouds were now tossing in climbing lines of crimson and gold, rising steeply to a zenith of splendour, and opening here and there, amid their tumult, to show a further heaven of untroubled blue—Elizabeth thought with lamentation that their days on the farm were almost done. The following week would see them at Ottawa for the opening of the session. Anderson was full of Parliamentary projects; important work for the Province had been entrusted to him; and in the general labour policy of the Dominion he would find himself driven to take a prominent part. But all the while his heart and Elizabeth's were in the land and its problems. The town life of Ottawa was after all but a repetition, on a smaller scale, of the town life of Europe; Elizabeth threw herself into it with loyalty, but, for her, the true, the entrancing Canada was in the wilds. And for Anderson, who for so many years had met, as an explorer and engineer, Nature face to face, his will against hers, in a direct and simple conflict, the tedious and tortuous methods of modern politics were not easy to learn. He must indeed learn them—he was learning them; and the future had probably great things in store for him as a politician. But he came back to the Saskatchewan farm with joy, and he would leave with lamentation.

"If only I wasn't so rich" thought Elizabeth, with compunction. It was oddly true that in this land of rapid though still moderate fortunes the rich Englishwoman often looked with envy on her neighbours who had gone through the real hardships of the country, who had bought their Canadian citizenship with the toil and frugality of years. It seemed to her sometimes that she was step-child rather than daughter of the dear new land, in spite of her yearning towards it.

And yet money had brought its own romance. It had enabled Anderson to embark on this immense farm of nearly two square miles, to staff it with the best labour to be got, on a basis of co-partnership, to bring herds of magnificent cattle into these park-like prairies, to set up horse-breeding, and to establish on the borders of the farm a large creamery which was already proving an attraction for settlers. It was going to put into Elizabeth's hands the power of helping the young University of Strathcona just across the Albertan border, and perhaps of founding in their own provincial capital of Regina a training college for farm-students—girls and boys—which might reproduce for the west the college of St. Anne's, Bellevue, that wonderful home of all the useful arts that an ever-generous wealth had given to the Province of Quebec. Already she had in her mind a cottage hospital—sorely wanted—for the little town of Donaldminster, wherein the weaklings of this great emigrant army now pouring into the country might find help.

Her heart, indeed, was full of schemes for help. Here she was, a woman of high education, and much wealth, in the midst of this nascent community. Her thoughts pondered the life of these scattered farms—of the hard-working women in them—the lively rosy-cheeked children. It was her ambition so to live among them that they might love her—trust her—use her.

NOTES.

B.C.M.—March is an excellent issue. The annotated Lasker-Schlechter games 1-5 are of themselves good value.

Problem Labels.—Mr. Alain C. White in the last B. C. M. puts in a plea for the better labelling of problems—by always giving the original date and place of first publication, whenever it is reproduced, whether in a book, magazine, or column.

Calcutta Chess Tournaments.—Sixteen players entered, five Englishmen, one Russian, one Parsee, and nine Bengali Hindus—a mixed bag. Dr. Dutt won the first prize, with full points. Professor Nikhilnath Maitra, winner of the Calcutta Tournament of 1909, was runner-up.

Marconi Chess.—On March 16 and 17 last a "wireless" match was played between the Morea (London to Sydney) and the Royal Dutch mail steamer Orange (Rotterdam to Batavia). Mr. H. G. Lee, of Bath, for the Morea, played Mr. Lorgeon of Amsterdam, and defeated him on the 37th move.

Press Institute v Railway Institute.—Teams representing the above met at the rooms of the latter last week.

Press Institute: (1) Mr. Bignold, 1; (2) Mr. Wilkinson, 0; (3) Mr. Hales, 0. Total, 1.

Railway Institute: (1) Mr. Herford, 0; (2) Mr. Wallas, 1; (3) Mr. H. S. Hunt, 1. Total, 2.

The Railway Institute also ran a side line of billiards very successfully, winning 4 games out of 6. Billiard players may possibly claim the chess was the side line!

Sydney Suburban C.U.—The St. John's Chess Club wishes to know of any other numerically weak suburban club which will join with it to enter a combined team of B and C grade for the forthcoming suburban matches, the combination not to be less than seven players, according to the rules recently passed at the annual meeting of the union. The club desires it to be known that its weekly meeting night for the present is every Tuesday evening at the Record Reign Hall, St. John's-road. Visitors are welcome.

School of Arts Chess Club.—Last Thursday the Rev. G. Middleton presented the medals won by the A team in the Sydney and Suburban Chess Union competition of last year, and congratulated the winners, Messrs. Bradshaw, Tyler, Calvert, Cummings, and Mair, upon their prowess. The continuous tourney makes good progress. The principal scores to date are:—Messrs. Jonas 6-2, Gluck 7-3, Holmes 3-1, Bruce 4-2, Mair 6½-6½, Jester 5½-5½, Duplyn 5-5, Cummings 3-2.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

ROMAN SCIENCE.

Clarke and Geikie's version of Seneca's "Quaestiones Naturales" (Macmillan) puts into convenient form an interesting relic of science in the time of Nero. The translating has been done with much discretion, and the introduction and notes give the reader all he requires for an understanding of the text. Seneca was a Roman of Spain, born about the beginning of the Christian era. Except for a term of banishment to Corsica under Claudius he spent his life at Rome. When Nero was a delightful boy of eleven Seneca became his tutor, and brought him up on a mixture of Stoic and Pythagorean doctrine. Affection founded on philosophy ripened between the two, and often when Nero was poisoning an undesirable relative he must have called to mind the excellent precepts of his master. At first Seneca looked with disapproval on such proceedings, but later he amassed a colossal fortune, and led the simple life, eating herbs and drinking water. He was, in fact, afraid to eat anything else. It must have been with sincere regret that Nero, in default of more polite methods, had to send him a firm request to commit suicide, which he accordingly did in a manner worthy of a philosopher and a Stoic. He was a very able man, and had taken the dictum "Philosophus solus rex" quite literally. The early Fathers mistook him for a Christian, and Professor Dill still finds in him an immense and fascinating spiritual force. Perhaps a fuller vision might enable us to see why he helped Nero to poison his mother. But whether he erred or not on that occasion must not prejudice our judgment on his literary remains. Of that there is a considerable bulk, even if we exclude the ten tragedies of a homiletic character and the correspondence with St. Paul. He was an agreeable and facile letter-writer, always including the choicest of moral maxims in his remarks—the Apocolocyntosis, a skit on the deification of Claudius that reminds us of Petronius, shows us he could have made a reputation in irony—and he was also a scientist of no mean attainments in his age and place. It was indeed to science he turned for consolation when Nero began insidiously to attempt to poison him, and no doubt at this time the greater part of the "Quaestiones Naturales" was written. The book deals mainly with what we now call meteorology and physical geography, but there are also sections on earthquakes and comets. Seneca had read a great deal before he became a tutor, and though he had not the encyclopedic learning of Varro or the profound insight of Lucretius, he gives us a very fair idea of the science current in his time. No doubt he was mainly indebted to the "Meteorologica" of Aristotle, but he was also familiar with such other authorities as there were. It is true that Pliny, who, like Macaulay, read everything, does not mention him, but as a set off to that he remained the leading authority on science in the Middle Ages until the rediscovery of Aristotle. The uprightness of his moral maxims was the best possible evidence of the correctness of his scientific views. After the Renaissance he fell into neglect, and the present is said to be the first English version of the "Quaestiones Naturales" since the translation by Lodge in 1614 or thereabouts. With regard to the subject matter, there is little to say that Sir Archibald Geikie has not said in his sound and discriminating notes. It is a mixture of puerility and acuteness. The Romans had not the scientific temper, and the Greeks were ruined by the scientific imagination. The authors quite rightly avoid reading into the text modern ideas that are not there. Yet the text does not deserve the scant courtesy it has received in recent times. It is at least pleasantly quaint and curious, and where a common natural phenomenon is to be explained it is often nearer to modern views than we might expect. A careful comparison with Lucretius would be worth undertaking, more specially as Seneca does not seem to have been by any means familiar with the "De Rerum Natura," though he quotes it once.

CONTEMPORARY GERMAN VERSE.

An interesting little addition to Scott's "Canterbury Poets" is a volume of "Contemporary German Poetry" selected and translated by Mr. Bithell. Darwin, Walt Whitman, Baudelaire, Verlaine, Nietzsche; these are the names that obviously link up with the more modern movement in German verse whose lyrists, remembering Ibsen, live for strength and truth, and care for little besides. Inasmuch as both they and their work are practically unknown to us the selection here given will probably come as a surprise to most readers. The translator is thoroughly in sympathy with his poets, and he is a verse writer himself of no little distinction. The trail of the translator would spoil these fierce or tender little poems. Luckily it is seldom visible, and Mr. Bithell scores many a notable success. A brief introduction sketches the progress of German poetry from the disappearance of the chastely uninspired Munich school and the trumpet blasts with which about 1885 the young iconoclasts began their work. Dehmel's "ferocious masculinity" rings out with a clashing shock of consonants. He is at once the most virile and the most ruthless of the group. The new school includes more than one movement. It has its realists in Liliencron, Dehmel, and Bierbaum; its symbolists in Stephen George, Hoffmannsthal, and Rilke. Peter Baum gives it the dream of a fugitive soul split on a prism of sound; Else Lasker-Schuler gives it sleek supple beasts of passion prowling under half-hid moon. What they all agree in is their determination to cut themselves adrift from tradition; to see life and nature as for each one of them it is rather than as it is conventionally right that they should see it. The reader who knows nothing of them will find his time well spent on Mr. Bithell's anthology.

THE WORKS OF FIONA MACLEOD.

William Heinemann is issuing in a neat form a collected edition of the works of William Sharp, published under his "Fiona Macleod" pseudonym, of which the first volume includes "Pharais" and "The Mountain Lovers." The fastidious talent of the author had, before his all too early death, been ceaselessly at work refining his fine gold, and the new edition thus promises a certain amount of novelty. Born in 1855, of strongly Scottish parents, Sharp spent much of his early youth among the Gaelic-speaking fisherfolk and shepherds of the West Highlands; while on the objective side his intellect was being matured at Glasgow. After a voyage to Australia in search of health, he settled in London in 1878, and tried, as critic, biographer, essayist, and novelist, to make a place for himself in literature. He became a warm friend of Rossetti, Browning, Pater, and Meredith, and soon showed his possession of a vigorous style and a subtle insight. Amongst many other activities was the general editing of the "Canterbury Poets," and his discussion of Shakespeare's sonnets in that series is one of the best short pieces of criticism extant. In 1886, shortly after he had married, he suffered a serious illness, and in his subsequent enforced leisure the other phase of the man, the dreamer of dreams, came uppermost. A year or two later he spent a winter and spring in Rome, and produced a remarkable volume of unrhymed verse. On his return he began, in the quiet sunshine of a Sussex cottage, his incarnation as "Fiona Macleod," living the transmuted life of early memories and expressing in beautiful prose and verse his vision of the World Beautiful. "Pharais" appeared in 1894, and was followed in quick succession by the five volumes between that and the poems "From the Hills of Dream," which appeared in 1896. Then came another serious illness, but further volumes were issued in 1900 and in 1904. Two dramas and a volume of nature essays complete the "Fiona Macleod" cycle. Then, in 1905, Sharp died in Sicily. For twelve years the pseudonym was one of the mysteries of contemporary literature. "Her" identity was hotly discussed, but the secret was loyally guarded by the very few who knew. "A stretch of dew sweet moon-flowers glimmering white through the fog of a dust laden with sea-mist"—the phrase by which Sharp described "Pharais" is itself a brief epitome of his art. It is an art essentially feminine alike in the elusiveness of its intuition and the delicacy of its form. There is not a little of Rossetti in it, and something of Keats. Whether it really gains by its Celtic setting is perhaps open to question. The other world of Celtic legend, the quaint and uncouth Celtic names, are, after all, a rather mechanical aid to mystery. Sharp did not need them any more than Maeterlinck needs his nomenclature of romance, and we sometimes believe he was strangely lacking in that fierce Celtic faith that dominates Mr. W. B. Yeats. The mysticism of "Fiona Macleod," in a word, is nonessential; in Yeats it is the quintessence. "It is loveliness I seek, not lovely things"—the phrase fits what Sharp believed himself to be—it hardly fits what he was. He could find surcease of sorrow only in transmuted sense. His moon-lit magic world of mist and mountains and shrouded terror and pity in human hearts is the world on which the noon sun beats down pitilessly and unafraid. Sharp had been too long a critic. In middle age creation is never quite convincing to oneself, however it may satisfy others. Yet the perilous seas and fairy land forlorn of which Sharp dreamed, while only half believing in his dream, are beautiful enough with the sad, sensuous beauty of crimson roses fading in moonlight, and the faint, poisonous perfume of the unremembering stars. We would not willingly let it go.

NAUTICAL SCIENCE.

A book on navigation for the general reader is something of a novelty. Yet there must be many to whom that art is a fascinating mystery. Dr. Charles Lane Poor, Professor of Astronomy in Columbia University, comes to their assistance in "Nautical Science" (Putnam). This is a very instructive and readable book, explaining in simple language the astronomical facts on which the art of navigation is based. It is quite likely that many practical navigators will find here much that they do not know, for Professor Poor gets to the heart of the principles involved. The several chapters give a lucid account of the measurement, mass, and density of the earth, its motions; the sun, stars, and planets; the making of an almanac, and the whole business of finding one's position at sea. There are also several informing chapters on tides, a collection of useful tables, and a series of brief "notes and practical applications" designed for students. The book can be thoroughly commended.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

The publications of the Cambridge University Press are going far to place the study of English literature on a new and scientific footing. Such a splendid series of texts as the Cambridge English classics is supplemented by such a splendid monument of criticism as the Cambridge English literature, and with both go hand in hand annotated editions thoroughly modern in their scholarship. Mr. A. W. Verity's school editions of Milton in the Pitt Press series, issued between 1892 and 1896, are well known. In his new edition of "Paradise Lost," the whole text of the poem is brought together, and a considerable amount of fresh material is added to the notes. The brief life of Milton is excellently done, and then comes a useful account of the genesis of "Paradise Lost." Milton long wavered between the epic and the dramatic form, nor was he quite certain whether to write in Latin or in English. Rough drafts of a five-act tragedy still remain. No doubt it would have strongly resembled "Samson Agonistes." Milton had scant respect for Elizabethan drama. Mr. Verity's appendices discuss in a compact fashion the peculiar cosmogony of the poem, the character of Satan, the identification of fallen angels with the daemons of the air and heathen gods, the hierarchies of heaven, and the astronomy and astrology of the Renaissance. The net result is a very serviceable edition, which will no doubt take its place in schools and colleges for a long time to come.

Dr. Hugh Walker's "Literature of the Victorian Era" is a substantial student's book. The writer is somewhat archaic in his ideas. He even has an admiration for Hegel, and in some of his chapters there is an unnecessary amount of theology masquerading as philosophy. The proof sheets have, in fact, been read by Professor Henry Jones, of Glasgow. Apart from this there is a great deal of solid material in the book, and the author writes with a great deal of vigour and his obviously strong prejudices need not seriously disturb the student. The fact that a Scotch gentleman fails to appreciate Walter Pater will not greatly inconvenience the world at large, any more than his pessimistic summing up of the results of science will seriously disturb the pursuit of knowledge. The limitations of Dr. Hugh Walker's mind, indeed, ought to prove decidedly stimulating to a student with sufficient intelligence, and for that reason we recommend the book. The student who wants sound ideas ready made is hardly worth troubling about.

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE.

Maurice Low's "The American People," is described as a study in national psychology, but it hardly succeeds in becoming so. It deals mostly with origins and gives an interesting and readable account of the founding of the American colonies. But he is entirely obsessed by the idea that Puritan character lies at the root of modern America, and he elaborates this absurd thesis at great length. He tells us that buried deep in the nature of every American child there is an intense spiritual aspiration, overlaid, it is true, by the material, but against which the spiritual ever struggles. It is this innate idealism that revolts against the sordidness of politics and leads to self-criticism and self-reproach that is largely unwarranted. The Puritan, he says, is the heart of America, and the American is a Puritan Englishman developing new and larger virtues in a new and larger environment. (From Dymock.)

THE FRANCO-BRITISH EXHIBITION.

The illustrated review of the "Franco-British Exhibition" forms a resplendent summary of a notable exposition, the greatest ever held in London. The art of the photographer here brings no small portion of it before the eyes, and the imaginative reader can conjure up the vista of white palaces, the thronging crowds, and the thousand and one novel effects that were got together. Perhaps it does not seem so novel to us as it did to London, for never previously had London seen fibrous plaster on a large scale, and its possibilities were a revelation. What gives the present volume permanent interest, however, is the very full illustrating of the British and French art sections, in which a unique collection of treasures was housed. Hardly less striking was the furniture collection, and the best styles of all periods are here lavishly represented. The letterpress is well and brightly written by well-known experts, and the record as a whole is well worth having. (From Dymock.).

RECENT FICTION.

In "The Rust of Rome" (Cassell) the art of Warwick Deeping shows a noteworthy advance. The author's earlier books possessed style and imagination, but the imitative atmosphere of romance hardly succeeded in being convincing. The present novel does not abandon the romantic method, but it adds a new element of tragic realism, and the characters have become people instead of puppets. Ben Heriot came out of Reading Gaol on a raw day in April, an Oxford man with his future behind him. For a time, self-disgust seemed likely to end in suicide, but Heriot was a strong man, and he had the happy inspiration to bury himself in Hindleap Wood, and draw new strength from simplicity. But fate did not mean him to cut himself off from mankind. Near by lived Stephen Thorkell, unsuccessful author, his wife and his daughter Eve. Tragedy envelops the household. The wife dies. Thorkell shoots himself. The protection of Eve from a half-mad sensualist, Burgoyne, becomes a manifest duty for Heriot. He wins his way back to life when he breaks Burgoyne's neck. Beneath the Thorkell's house are the remains of an old Roman villa. In the ancient well the body of Burgoyne finds a resting place along with the dog he had poisoned. No one would say that as a rule murder is the proper basis for matrimony, but this was an exceptional case. Also helping Heriot back was John Lavender, a farmer's boy with primeval instincts. These situations are finely conceived and finely worked out, here with a Meredithian cast of dialogue, here with a touch of Thomas Hardy, everywhere with Murray Gilchrist's glamour of romance. Warwick Deeping deserves well of the discriminating reader. He is in no hurry, and he has a righteous scorn of the pot-boiler.

A new volume of Harrap's "Told Through the Ages" series is D. C. Stedman's "The Story of Hereward." The main source used is the chronicle "De Gestis Herwardi," but the author has looked up most of the early authorities. Although written up in the form of a story, Mr. Stedman's work is thus as nearly as possible an authentic reproduction of the old records. It is very well done, and indeed the whole series has outstanding merits.

F. Hopkinson Smith's "Forty Minutes Late" is a collection of short stories on the best American model. The author has been called by his friends the Thackeray of American fiction, and his works have the honour of a uniform edition in 15 volumes. He is excellent at little thumb-nail sketches of character, and he recounts commonplace occurrences with a certain compact vigour. The nine stories of the present volume fairly illustrate the versatility of the author. (George Robertson.)

Mabel Osgood Wright's "Poppea of the Post-office" (Macmillan) has had a wonderfully good record in America. It opens in the first winter of the War of the Rebellion, and the village postmaster is the proud possessor of authentic letters from Lincoln. Gilbert could not join in the war, but Lincoln assured him he would find a wrong at his own door to put right. And indeed on his doorstep he found a little child. She grew up to be Poppea of the post-office. A romantic story grows up, and the mystery of Poppea's parentage is well maintained until it is dramatically revealed. (George Robertson.)

James Blyth's "Thora's Conversion" (Long) is a book with plenty of good material in it of the kind the author knows well how to handle. Thora is a twentieth century product, the daughter of a Cambridge graduate who invented "Co-turto-maltox wine," and became a millionaire. Thora matriculated at Newnham in 1904, and became one of the newest of New Women, always ready to hold forth upon the sufferings of women under man-made law. "It's no good making a fuss, mother," said Linda. "I can't and I won't marry Sir Julius Solano." Thora had a convert, and Sir Julius was a Jew magnate. There is another protagonist, Bertha, the maid. Harry would no doubt have married Thora if she had not been quite so "new." As it was he made her furiously jealous in the old-fashioned way when he first loved and then married Bertha, the maid. The "harlequinade futilities of self-advertising females are now as abhorrent to Thora as to any reasonable man," and perhaps some day she will find a husband.

Edgar Jepson's "No. 19" (Mills and Boon) is a weird story of a young solicitor, who goes to live in No. 20, having made nine hundred pounds or so in a successful share gamble. Strange things take place in the garden next door. A beast creeps about, and hideous sounds are heard. Sometimes there is the acrid smell of the goat. The man next door was, in fact, a sorcerer, who practised the rites of the Abyss. Mr. Jepson has carefully read up the mysteries, and concocted a lurid romance.

SHORTER NOTICES.

A useful volume for students of the Old Testament is "The Law and the Prophets" (Macmillan), a translation of a work of the French theologian Westphal. The Lord Bishop of Winchester, in a brief preface, assures us that it is full of the new learning, and makes no surrender of the old faith. The author himself tells us that before we can teach Bible history we must revise it, and he thinks the times are ripe for this revision. He writes in a clear and lucid fashion, and his exposition of what he thinks essential in Bible history is easy to follow.

"The Temple Bible Dictionary" (Dent) is a volume of the popular order, written from an evangelical standpoint, with mild concessions to modern views. The articles thus have little or no critical value, and there is little that is novel or necessary about most of the entries. On the other hand, the dictionary gives in a compact one-volume form a good deal of the ordinary information Bible students have to look up, and it is very freely illustrated.

"A Quiz Book of Nursing" (Putnam), by Amy and Thirsa Pope, is compiled on the question and answer plan. We do not think much of this somewhat childish method, which appears to be popular in America, but the authors are trained nurses and teachers, and their book is full of excellent material. It may be commended to those in training as nurses as a common-sense and informing volume.

John Murray has begun the issue of an interesting half-crown series of standard literature, which in size and form represents a decided achievement in publishing. The material of the volumes announced has been wisely chosen, and the venture deserves every success. The first volume is the "Autobiography of Sir Harry Smith," first published as an expensive two-volume work in 1901. This is a fascinating story of military life between 1788 and 1846. The Peninsular War, the Washington expedition, the Waterloo campaign, and other matters of great interest crop up in the author's very brightly written pages.

NOTES.

A letter has been received from Mr. A. Jordan, the English draughts champion, stating his intention of leaving England for a tour of Australasia, playing all comers, on lines obtained by Wyllie and Richard Jordan, the world's champion. Draughts clubs or players in country towns desiring a visit by the champion should communicate with W. M. Mills, 27 Jamieson-street, Sydney. A number of checkerists met at the Queen's Hall, Pitt-street, to make arrangements for his reception and tour.

Harry Freedman, the noted Scottish expert, has expressed his intention of entering the tourney for the world's championship, to be held in London in 1911.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

When it was recently mentioned that a tour of the whole English-speaking world was to be undertaken by over 200 men and women singers of the redoubtable Sheffield Choir, it was felt to be almost too hazardous a proposal to arrive at fruition. But Dr. Charles Harriss, of Canada, is already stirring the musical blood of old England with his bold plans for careering through the whole of the British dominions beyond the seas in command of an army of harmonious Yorkshire people. He will sail about the last week of next March with the Sheffield Choir for Canada. With them will go their well-known chorus-master Dr. Henry Coward—who, together with Dr. Harriss, will conduct jointly the festivals to be given. The tour will last six months, and the oversea dominions will be visited in the following order:—Canada, New Zealand, Tasmania, Australia, and South Africa. Mr. H. N. Southwell, of Paling and Co., is already organising matters here as manager. The far-famed Sheffield Choir is due to arrive in Brisbane early in June of next year, and will be here a few days later.

Our London correspondent opens the month of March with an interesting account of the development of the grand opera season, as follows:—"The Beecham opera season at Covent Garden, now at the end of its second week, has found 'Elektra' by far its most profitable venture, and various extra performances have been arranged for. Other works produced to date include, besides 'Tristan and Isolde,' Miss Ethel Smith's 'The Wreckers' (a remarkable achievement by a woman, but played to a practically empty house), Mr. F. Delius' 'Village Romeo and Juliet,' 'Hansel and Gretel,' and Debussy's 'L'Enfant Prodigue,' the two last-named played at one performance to great enthusiasm, chiefly on account of Humperdinck's delightful work, which Sydney music-lovers will not have forgotten. The 'Village Romeo and Juliet' is a failure. The book is tame to the point of puerility, and Mr. Delius' music is far from being equal to the fine orchestral works which have recently given cause for considerable heart-searchings by musical Londoners. Hearing them they remembered that Mr. Delius, an Englishman, was so utterly neglected in his own country, that he domiciled himself in Germany, where for years he has been regarded as a composer of exceptional talent. 'Tristan' has had some splendid performances, and one excruciating one. Wagner's greatest music-drama has affinity in one respect with the child who when good was very very good, but when bad was horrid. It was horrid on Wednesday night last, by reason of changes in the cast. On the other hand, Herr Urlus of Leipsig, who had been singing 'Tristan,' and will return next week, is, despite a chilly reception from the London press, undoubtedly the best Wagnerian tenor I have heard. The voice is a magnificent one, and it is used with almost an Italian method. R. Fossbender has proved a fine Isolde, but we are looking for an almost ideal performance next week with Mme. Edyth Walker and Herr Urlus in the great roles. But even that cast needs Mme. Kirkby Lunn and Van Rooy for complete satisfaction."

Mme. Emma Calve, whose Sydney season still lies a month ahead, arrived in Melbourne on Monday, and was interviewed for the leading papers at the Grand Hotel. As a girl, Mme. Calve was the belle of Aveyron, Southern France, and on developing a voice made her debut in opera at Brussels as Marguerite in "Faust." Later, she found it possible to sing the mezzo-soprano music of "Carmen," and became the great representative of the character on the European stage, and later she created Santuzza in Florence, and was wonderfully successful in the same character in Paris. Messrs. J. and N. Tait have accordingly brought out an Italian tenor, Signor Galileo Gasparri, in order that the principal love scenes from "Carmen" and "Cavalleria Rusticana" may form part of the programmes.

Matheson Lang, the famous English actor, accompanied by his wife, Miss Hutin Britton, as leading lady, have sailed by the Ophir for Australia under engagement to Rupert Clarke and Meynell. These new artists are bringing with them Mr. Jerrold Robertshaw, an artist of considerable note, and three or four other people, as well as a private secretary and servants. Mr. Lang accepted a starring engagement in New York early this year at the New (millionaire's) Theatre, where he appeared as Charles Surface and in other classic parts. Like Mr. Oscar Asche, the newcomer represents the intellectual aspect of the stage. He is a graduate of St. Andrews University, and has lectured before the University of Oxford upon dramatic literature. His father is a first cousin of Dr. Lang, Archbishop of York. In London his successes have been as Hamlet and as Pete. In the latter character he will open in Sydney after the departure of Mr. Asche and Miss Brayton for Melbourne.

Important productions by the J. C. Williamson management will take place this evening both in Adelaide and Melbourne. In the former city "The Lion and the Mouse" will be replaced by the second of a cycle of sociological dramas which Charles Klein has planned in comment on conditions of present-day civilisation in the United States. The first-named play dealt with the dangers of the money-hunger and the millionaire's greed of power, whilst the new play, entitled "The Third Degree," emphasises the evils of police administration in New York, whereby a suspect is harried with questions for hours at a time, so that, under the stress of this modern inquisition, people have acknowledged crimes which they have never committed. Mr. Julius Knight and Miss Katherine Grey will appear in "The Third Degree"—a process referred to during the past week in connection with the Wolter murder case cabled from New York—at the Adelaide Theatre Royal. At the same time, the new Comic Opera Company will appear at Her Majesty's Theatre, Melbourne, in "The Dollar Princess," now running both in New York and in London (Daly's Theatre). The music is by Leo Fall, a German composer, whose cleverly-scored melodies have become the rage all over the Continent, rivalling those of Franz Lehar and Oscar Strauss, whilst the book, by Wilner and Greenbaum, has been adapted by Captain Basil Hood. The principal idea is that of an American millionaire who has a fancy for employing impoverished sprigs of the English nobility as his servants, whilst the love interest is a very modern version of "The Taming of the Shrew." The new piece will replace "A Country Girl," in which Miss Dorothy Court, Miss Olive Godwin, Mr. Herbert Clayton, and others appeared for the Easter holiday fortnight. Quite recently Mr. J. C. Williamson has purchased two other pieces. One of these is "The Brass Bottle," for which his agent, Mr. J. A. E. Malone, is rapidly organising a special company in London. This farcical play is founded upon F. Anstey's fantastic story of the same title, and shows how Horace Ventmore unwittingly releases an Arabian genie from a brass bottle, who thereupon, out of gratitude, provides him with a useless Oriental palace, an embarrassing troupe of dancing girls, and various other "sundries" which make for mirth. The new play has been running at the Vaudeville Theatre since last September. The new musical comedy "The Balkan Princess" has also been acquired. This is by the indispensable Paul Rubens, with libretto by Frederick Lonsdale, of "King of Cadonia" fame, and is the current attraction in London at the Prince of Wales's Theatre.

News of Australian students and artists abroad comes in the first place from our London correspondent (March 4), who states that Miss Elsie Stanley-Hall and Miss Florence Schmidt joined forces this week in a pianoforte and vocal recital with pleasant results, while another ex-Sydneyite, Mr. Reginald Gooud, had on Saturday last an important appearance as bass soloist in Bach's stupendous 'Mass in B Minor,' sung magnificently by the Alexandra Palace Choir, by far the finest choral organisation in London." From the American exchanges it is learned that Miss Irene Dillon, who figured brightly here in the "Mother Goose" and "Humpty Dumpty" pantomimes, is appearing in "Dick Whittington" at the Majestic Theatre, Boston. The "Boston Journal" of January 5 remarks that "the part of the heroine was taken by Miss Irene Dillon, who sang well and danced lightsomely, and wore a number of handsome costumes to great advantage."

HEARNE'S BRONCHITIS CURE.

THE FAMOUS REMEDY FOR COUGHS, BRONCHITIS, PNEUMONIA, PLEURISY, ASTHMA, & CONSUMPTION.

Those who have taken this Medicine are amazed at its splendid healing power. Sufferers from Bronchitis, Cough, Croup, Asthma, Difficulty of Breathing, Hoarseness, Pain or Soreness in the Chest, experience delightful and rapid relief, and to those who are subject to Colds on the Chest it is invaluable, as it effects a complete cure. It is most comforting in allaying Irritation in the Throat, and giving Strength to the Voice, and it neither allows a Cough nor Asthma to become chronic, nor Consumption to develop. Consumption is not known where "Coughs" have, on their first appearance, been properly treated with this medicine. No house should be without it, as, taken at the beginning, a dose or two is generally sufficient, and a complete cure is certain.

BRONCHITIS AND PNEUMONIA CURED BY HEARNE'S BRONCHITIS CURE.

AFTER OTHER TREATMENT HAD FAILED.

Mr. W. G. Hearne. Dear Sir,—From a strict sense of duty I feel that I should publish the following statement, so that others may know what to do when the awful fact is evident that a life is in danger of being lost:—In September, 1906, my little girl, aged at that time 3 years, contracted measles, and in the following October was attacked by Bronchitis, Pneumonia, and Congestion of the Lungs. She was attended by a legally qualified doctor of high standing, but his treatment was not successful in arresting the progress of the illness. On Saturday, the 21st October, 1906, he said that her life was in danger—that there was very little hope for her. For eight days and nights she had been prostrated by cough, pain, and fever, and was lying like a statue, unconscious. At this stage I was persuaded by a friend to obtain Hearne's Bronchitis Cure, with its auxiliary medicine for the fever and congestion of the lungs, as directed in the Catalogue of Medicines which accompanies each bottle of the Bronchitis Cure. I gave the medicine as directed, and there was an improvement from the first dose of Hearne's Bronchitis Cure. The improvement continued after each dose of the medicine. In a week she was perfectly free from the Pneumonia, Congestion, Cough, Pain, and Fever, and was well except that she was still weak. In a fortnight she was quite recovered, and is now in splendid health, and stronger than ever. Any person asking for the information about this grand medicine can be supplied by me, or by any of my neighbours, who have witnessed its wonderful effects. It absolutely snatched my child from an early grave. Yours gratefully,

D. GARDINER.

BRONCHITIS.

A SUFFERER 73 YEARS OF AGE. THOROUGHLY CURED BY TWO BOTTLES OF HEARNE'S BRONCHITIS CURE.

IMMEDIATE RELIEF.—EFFECTS WONDERFUL.

Mr. Hearne. Sir,—I was very ill with Influenza and Bronchitis. A friend of mine persuaded me to try your Bronchitis Cure. The first dose gave me immediate relief, and after taking the second bottle I am thoroughly cured. Its effect on me has been most wonderful. I am 73 years of age, and I trust that you will make use of this statement by publishing it for the benefit of humanity generally. Yours most respectfully,

THOMAS R. TRESIZE, Reedy Creek, Victoria.

CONSUMPTION.

TOO ILL TO LEAVE HIS BED.—A COMPLETE CURE.

Mr. W. G. Hearne. Dear Sir,—I am writing to tell you about the wonderful cure your medicine has effected in my case. About three years ago I began to cough. At first the cough was not severe, but it gradually got worse, and I became very weak, and troubled with night sweats, pain in my chest, and great quantities of phlegm. On several occasions there was blood in the expectorated matter. I had been treated by a doctor, who pronounced my case to be consumption, and various other treatments had been tried, but without benefit. It was at this stage that I heard of your Bronchitis Cure, and sent to you for a course of medicine. When it arrived I was too ill to leave my bed, but I commenced taking it at once, and gradually improved. I am glad to say that the two lots of medicine you sent have effected a complete cure, for which accept my very best thanks. Yours gratefully,

I. BLAIR, Westminster Bridge-road, S.E., London.

PNEUMONIA AND PLEURISY CURED BY HEARNE'S BRONCHITIS CURE.

AFTER OTHER TREATMENT HAD FAILED.

I, Prudence M'Kee, of Carr-street, South Geelong, in view of the importance of a person making it quite clear what treatment was successful in curing a serious and complicated case, when the medicine, directions, and treatment of a legally qualified doctor had failed, state as follows:—

My son, Henry M'Kee, then aged 8 years, had been attended by a legally qualified doctor, who pronounced him to be suffering from Pneumonia, Pleurisy, and a stoppage of the passing of urine. Under the doctor's treatment the child gradually got worse, and the doctor pronounced the case hopeless. He told me that the child could not live. At this stage I obtained from Mr. W. G. Hearne, chemist, of Geelong, a bottle of Hearne's Bronchitis Cure, and gave it to the child according to the directions which accompany each bottle of it. The child improved after the second dose of Hearne's Bronchitis Cure. He continued to improve each day from each dose of Hearne's Medicine alone, and within three days he was free from the Cough, Pneumonia, and the Pleurisy, and the urine was passing satisfactorily. He was out of bed at the end of a week, completely recovered, and he is now in perfect health.

PRUDENCE M'KEE.

Carr-street, South Geelong, 6th February, 1908.

BRONCHITIS AND PLEURISY.

A SEVERE CASE CURED BY TWO BOTTLES OF HEARNE'S BRONCHITIS CURE.

AFTER OTHER TREATMENT HAD FAILED.

Mr. Hearne, Chemist, Geelong. Dear Sir,—Some months ago in Sydney I suffered from a severe attack of Influenza, and was confined to my room for about a week, at the end of which time, feeling somewhat better, I got up and tried to transact my business as usual. But I got up too soon, for the very next day I had a relapse, and suffered tortures from what the doctor told me was Pleurisy and Bronchitis. The pain from the former in my chest and shoulders was frightful, and for four long weeks I was confined to my bed under the care of a well-known Sydney doctor, and all the time his medicine gave me but temporary relief. The landlady of the hotel (The Cleveland) where I resided told me of a medicine—Hearne's Bronchitis Cure—from Victoria, which had cured her of a bad attack of bronchitis and pains in the chest, and begged me to try it. I did so, and, in thanks and gratitude to you, tell you that, after the second bottle, my cough had ceased, but, what is more astonishing, the pains from pleurisy entirely left me, and in about a week I was able to attend to my duties as usual.

Yours faithfully,

J. BRAHAM, Melbourne "Punch" Office, Melbourne.

PREVIOUS TREATMENT FAILED.—CURED BY THREE BOTTLES.

Mr. Alex. J. Anderson, of Oak Park, Charleville, Queensland, writes:—"After suffering from Asthma for seventeen years, and having been under a great many different treatments without benefit, I was induced to try Hearne's Medicine for Asthma. After taking three bottles of this medicine I quite got rid of the asthma, and since then, which was the beginning of 1893—15 years ago—I have not had the slightest return of it. The medicine quite cured me, and I have much pleasure in recommending it."

Speaking in February, 1908, he says:—"I am keeping very well. Never had the slightest return of the asthma."

"Hearne's Medicine cured me of Asthma, from which I had been suffering for twenty-five years, during which time I had used almost every patent medicine on the market—including asthma inhalations—without getting a cure. It was eight years ago that the cure was effected by Hearne's Medicine, and I now feel stronger than I have felt for years—in fact, I feel splendid."

C. WISEMAN, Meredith, Victoria.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS! The great success of HEARNE'S Bronchitis Cure has induced a number of unprincipled persons to make imitations, each calling his medicine "Bronchitis Cure," with the object of deceiving the unsuspecting, and so getting a sale for an imitation which has none of the beneficial effects that HEARNE'S Bronchitis Cure has. Consequently it has become necessary to draw your attention to this fact, and to request you in your own interests to be particular to ask for HEARNE'S, and see that you get it.

HEARNE'S BRONCHITIS CURE, Small Size, 2/6; Large Size, 4/6. Sold by all Chemists and Medicine Vendors, and by the Proprietor, W. G. HEARNE, Chemist, Geelong, Victoria. Forwarded to any address when not obtainable locally.

NOTICE.—Hearne's Bronchitis Cure No. 1A does NOT contain any Morphia or any Opium whatever. It is equally beneficial for the youngest child and the most aged person.

LIFE IN LONDON AND THEREABOUT.

(CHRONICLED BY HENRY W. LUCY.)

WESTMINSTER, March 4.

Out of what threatened to be a disastrous storm the Government barque has suddenly slipped into smooth water. There is every prospect that up to the 24th inst., when the Commons adjourn for a four-days' Easter holiday, the situation will remain unchanged. Meanwhile the House, meeting at its accustomed hour, has fallen into the pretty way of adjourning at 8 or 9 o'clock, having meanwhile accomplished a prodigious amount of business in the direction of grappling with the financial chaos consequent on rejection of the Budget. Continuance of this idyllic state of things is strictly limited. On the 29th inst, immediately on return from brief holiday, the Premier will introduce resolutions abolishing the veto of the House of Lords with respect to financial affairs, and limiting it in relation to ordinary legislation. They will, of course, be passed through the Commons by the full majority of six score, which nominally stands to the credit of the Government.

As certainly the Lords will make short work of them. Thereupon, in accordance with a pledge publicly given from his place in the House of Commons last Monday, the Premier will approach the Sovereign with demand for guarantees that a bill founded upon the resolutions shall be carried through the Lords. It is exceedingly doubtful whether these will or can be forthcoming. The only available guarantee would be a promise to create peers sufficient to out-vote the Opposition. That was all very well in Reform days, when a couple of score would have served. Nothing less than 500 will bring the present majority in the Lords to a spirit of reasonableness. Even in these times of powerful, swiftly, surely moving machinery, that is a stupendous job.

The probability is that his Majesty will shrink from putting his hand to the work. Whereupon, in fulfilment of his alternative pledge, the Premier must call upon his Majesty to dissolve Parliament. The only hope of avoiding such a calamity, which, apart from political interests, would deal a serious blow to the trade of the country, is found in the fact that no member and no section of the present House wants a general election—least of all the Opposition led by Mr. Balfour. Last Monday, with the Irish Nationalists standing aside, the O'Brienites ready to deal a blow that would finally destroy the Budget, they might have turned out the Government. They refrained, and are now being daily scolded by the fire-eaters in their press. As they are reminded from this quarter, they have lost their only opportunity, since Ministerialists are now united in anticipation of the tussle with the Lords coming on immediately. These peculiar circumstances are, however, not likely to prevail, and we may look for a general election in May.

Private information enabled me when writing on December 10th to announce that Mr. Herbert Gladstone would receive a peerage before leaving to undertake the Government of South Africa. I remarked that such an event was "contrary to the traditions of the family as established by its great founder. Twice Queen Victoria pressed an Earldom upon the acceptance of Mr. Gladstone, and twice he begged to be excused acceptance of the honour." I understand that a consideration that has weighed with the new Governor-General in the matter was one that influenced Mr. Arthur Peel when on quitting the Chair of the House of Commons he accepted the usual Viscounty. Whilst in both cases the illustrious head of the family had not only declined a peerage for himself, but was believed to have expressed a wish that his heir should not merge the family name in a title, in both cases the coronet was worn by a junior son. There is to-day a Mr. Gladstone, of Harwarden Castle, representative of the elder branch, as there is, alack, a Sir Robert Peel, though not of the historic, but now dismantled home at Drayton Manor. Thus Mr. Gladstone's example and injunction will be observed, whilst his third, perhaps, favourite, son will have earned a peerage as a reward of personal merit and long public service.

The creation of two new peers at a time when Ministers are pledged to a campaign against the House of Lords designed for the destruction of their legislative supremacy is a striking anomaly. Actually it is not so quaint as it looks. A Viscounty is the natural appanage of the Governor-General of South Africa, whilst Mr. Ivor Guest's elevation to the peerage merely anticipates the course of nature that, if he survives his father, will eventually place him in that position. As a matter of fact, Lord Wimborne, like Lord Spencer, is practically on the shelf. Neither of these bulwarks of Liberalism in the Lords has for some years been in a condition to take part in public affairs, nor is it likely that either will sufficiently recover to resume his former position. They have accordingly been what is known in the army as seconded, Lord Spencer brother and heir, long known in the Commons as "Bobby" Spencer, and Lord Wimborne by calling to the House his eldest son.

The self-denying ordinance which precludes the Government from scattering peerages with accustomed liberality is rather hard upon some of their faithful supporters. I have personal knowledge of two who had good reason to believe that before the close of the last Parliament they would have received the reward of generously paid party services. At the opening session of last Parliament they were put off with the representation that it was not usual, and might be inconvenient, to bestow peerages immediately on coming into office. The proper time would be in anticipation of a dissolution, or immediately thereafter. When that period was unexpectedly reached, the Government were pledged to clip the legislative wings of the Lords. Whilst denouncing the hereditary peerage as a danger to the State, it would have seemed hardly decent to add to their number. This objection presented itself once more at the meeting of the new Parliament, and will doubtless prevail to its close, to the disappointment of some deserving commoners, who have paid in advance the customary toll.

A story is just now current in London Society which, from its circumstantiality and its monstrous conclusions, would suffice to take away the breath of people less habitually trained in scandal. Some weeks ago there suddenly died in Paris a well-known member of the House of Commons, heir to a great peerage. It was said that he succumbed to a sudden attack of pneumonia. The body was brought home, and interred near his ancestral home, among general expressions of profound grief at the sudden cutting off of a still young life, which had before it promise of high distinction. It is now gravely whispered in drawing-rooms and told at dinner tables that this explanation is a pure invention. What actually happened, one is assured, is that the noble lord, having observed on the part of a friend rough treatment of a wife recently married, remonstrated with him. The result was an angry scene, followed by a challenge to deadly combat. Accepting it, the two made a tryst in the neighbourhood of Paris, and at the first round the well-meaning friend was shot through the heart by the erring husband. In order to hush up scandal, the story of death by pneumonia was, by common consent between the two families concerned, concocted, and published.

This is pretty well as it stands. The climax is reached by the further assertion that one of the duellists is a member of the present Cabinet, who, apparently, having killed his friend, returned to his office in Downing-street, quietly took up the threads of administrative business, and may be seen any night on the Treasury Bench in the House of Commons. The wildest invention of a reckless romancer never soared above the bold heights of this story. Twice within the past week I have been asked by persons otherwise apparently sane, whether I have heard it, and whether I think there is anything in it.

THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL.

(BY M. M.)

Dr. Johnson said Sheridan was the author of the two best comedies of his age; Lord Byron considered "The School for Scandal" the best comedy in the language. Leaving Shakespeare's work out of the question, that may be true. At any rate, Sheridan is one of the very few dramatists who satisfy the critics and who delight the crowd in their own day, and who having done that, hold the stage for more than a century. Some London litterateur—the thing could hardly be done with the material available on this side of the line—might write an interesting article on the number of times "The School for Scandal" has been revived, and the money it has brought to various managements.

The play was produced first on May 8, 1777. In that year and the two following it was produced 73 times, and realised £15,000. That sounds poor to-day, for a trumpery rendering of a risky adaptation from the French is performed far oftener, and brings in far more money in modern London. But in those days the figures were extraordinary. The popularity of "The School for Scandal" was so great that the receipts for the nights on which it was staged make the takings of the nights when other plays were submitted look miserable. But temporary popularity is a very small matter, save of course as regards the bank account of the lucky author. All manner of plays, good, bad, indifferent, have been the rage of the season. "The School for Scandal" is singular in that it has never lost its hold on the public. Even in the case of works which live there is generally a temporary reaction from the exaggerated appreciation of contemporaries. But Charles Lamb, who was two when Sheridan's comedy appeared, saw it just when the reaction, had there been one, should have been strongest, and devoted a delightful essay to an appreciation of it. "The School for Scandal" has kept the stage from 1777 to the present day. When the writer visited London as a boy, he saw its four hundredth consecutive performance at the Vaudeville. About the same time it ran two hundred nights at another London theatre, and it was being played from January to December by a company travelling the provinces. Mr. Sichel refers to its latest triumph, when it was revived by Mr. Beerbohm Tree and Miss Lohr won fame as a great Lady Teazle in 1909.

What is the secret of such success? Envious contemporaries harped on the fact that "The School for Scandal" was "a manager's play." Of course that counted for much on the first night. Leading actresses will take minor parts to please a manager to which they would not stoop to oblige a Shakespeare who didn't happen to have a share in the Globe. But Sheridan ceased to be a power in Drury Lane more than a century ago. So we must seek some other reason in the wealth of material Mr. Sichel has provided. First and foremost is the painfully prosaic fact that Sheridan worked at this particular comedy as not one playwright in a hundred works at his masterpiece. There is a tradition that Sheridan was a very lazy man. The tradition has helped to undo a number of rather clever young simpletons. Sheridan was lazy. His father and his preceptor pronounced him "a most impenetrable dunce." He had attacks of indolence almost incredible in their severity. For example, one of the Bath papers published a story which he considered cruelly unjust to Miss Linley, to whom he was engaged, and to himself. He went to the editor of the rival paper, whom he asked to republish the libel, and so pave the way for his full explanation of the affair. The editor reprinted the scandal, but Sheridan never summoned sufficient energy to forward the promised explanation. He said of himself that he could be lazy like a lizard; he could. But, as Mr. Sichel tells us, he could also work like a racehorse. He never learnt to spell. He wrote wether and whether, were and where, wich and which quite indiscriminately. When he assumed a position requiring knowledge of finance, he devoted a few hours to arithmetic, of which he knew next to nothing. But, after a fashion of his own, he worked far harder than the ordinary man. He first outlined "The School for Scandal" at Bath years before it was staged. Then, and right through life, he would lie apparently doing nothing, whilst as a matter of fact he was labouring the dialogue of a scene or a passage in a speech till every word was the aptest ingenuity could discover. He used to tell his sister, "The comedy is finished; I have nothing to do but to write it."

After all, the writing was to Sheridan a long and arduous task. When it was done he endorsed the MS., "Finished, thank God," to which Hopkins, the prompter, added a pious "Amen." Simpletons concluded that Sheridan devoted his days and nights to pleasure, and dashed off the final scenes of his masterpiece inspired by strong tea or stronger port. As a matter of fact, his rough sketches of characters and scenes fill several notebooks. He outlined two distinct plays. He gradually reduced them to one. He named and renamed his dramatis personae; he polished sentences as a lapidary polishes diamonds. An idea occurs first in the rough, one unnecessary word after another is cut away, till at last we have a witticism, every facet of which glitters, and which to cut further would be to destroy.

Very few authors have laboured a comedy as Sheridan did "The School for Scandal." But hard work does not ensure success, or countless laborious dunces would have achieved immortality. Sheridan was a genius, and was singularly happy in his theme. Mr. Sichel tells us that his hero wrote the play with a set determination to make an end of scandal. Even a genius of five and twenty could hardly be so absurdly sanguine. But probably Sheridan did hope great things, for in his prologue to the comedy Garrick, wrote:—

> Is our young bard so young to think that he
> Can stop the full springtide of calumny?
> Knows he the world so little and its trade?

With Garrick Sheridan may have held, "Cut scandal's head off, still the tongue is wagging," but whatever his theory he wrote with feeling and with purpose. It was in Bath, the home of the languid, passe, valetudinarian gossips, that he wooed and won Miss Linley. He and she suffered much at the tongues of those he pillories as Sneerwells, Candours, and Backbites. The manners of those days were not nice, the prevailing criticism of them was distinctly nasty, and Miss Linley lay painfully open to attack. She was a beauty possessed of a voice said to be worth £3000 a year—a far bigger sum then than now. Her parents were aggressively vulgar people. The girl sang at entertainments arranged by her father, and had a host of admirers. The people of the eighteenth century questioned the virtue of a woman on the stage instinctively. More than that, Long, a wealthy man of 60, wanted to marry her when she was sixteen. Her parents asked for generous settlements, and those conceded were ready to sell her in the conventional way. Miss Linley made an appeal to Long. She told him that the marriage would make her wretched. He took on himself the onus of breaking off the engagement, and paid £3000 that she might escape the reproaches of her mercenary parents. Further, Miss Linley felt some girlish affection for a commonplace, married rake named Mathews. At sixteen a girl may be pardoned for not detecting the nastiness lurking under compliments paid her by an old friend. When she did detect it, she resented it; Sheridan fought two duels with Mathews, eloped to France with the young lady, and married her privately. Here was matter to set people incomparably kindlier than the Sneerwells and Backbites talking.

So far as wit can scotch scandal, Sheridan scotched it. He studied the various artists in character wrecking and pilloried them. Snake breaks ground with a description of Mrs. Clackitt, who has "a free tongue and a bold invention, but her colouring is too dark, and her outlines often extravagant. She wants," he says to Lady Sneerwell, "that delicacy of tint, and mellowness of sneer which distinguish your ladyship's scandal." Lady Sneerwell says: "Wounded myself in the early part of my life, I have since known no pleasure equal to the reducing of others to the level of my own reputation." Mrs. Candour, "with a very gross affectation of good nature and benevolence," is more dangerous than any other practitioners of the school. Backbite and Crabtree, like all male scandalmongers, are wholly despicable. The school still exists, but so far as it is possible to judge from the memoirs and diaries of those days, it is held in check by a healthier public opinion. Sheridan's denunciation of scandalmongers, "In maiden madness, virulently bold," sounds somewhat strained to modern ears. So far as he helped to create the healthier public opinion he added to the happiness, as by his wit he undoubtedly added to the mirth, of nations.

"AS YOU LIKE IT."

REMINISCENCES.

(BY WM. HOLMAN.)

"The Forest of Arden." Where is it? In France, in Warwickshire, or in Dreamland? What magic is in the name, and how many pleasant memories are conjured up in the minds of old playgoers, as they think of Rosalind and Orlando, Jacques and Touchstone, and the rest "who fleet the time carelessly as they did in the golden world."

No wonder "As You Like It" is acted by nearly every Shakespearian company that visits our shores, for its charm is perennial, and, moreover, it affords an exceptionally effective part for an actress who is not only "more than common tall," but possessed of more than common grace and vivacity. The beautiful poetry and witty prose of the dialogue, the many familiar passages, its varied and attractive list of characters, even the most subordinate being "characters" in the true sense (not merely parts), and worthy of earnest acting, the charming songs, one of them at least being probably equal to any ballad ever written, and above all the unique situation of the disguised Rosalind and her boy lover when they meet in the forest; all these qualities combine to render it the most delightful of pastoral comedies.

We have been fortunate in several notable productions of "As You Like It" in Sydney of late years. During Mr. Spong's brief season as manager at the Criterion in June, 1894, he introduced his beautiful and accomplished daughter Hilda as Rosalind. Her success was brilliant, and gave great promise. The production was also notable for two of the most exquisite representations of woodland scenery that I remember, although it must be admitted that Mr. Asche's production nearly, if not quite, equals it in this respect, and Mr. Musgrove's production was not far behind.

When almost new to this city (about 1890) I had the pleasure of seeing the renowned beauty actress, Mrs. Brown Potter, in this part—costumed in a varied assortment of Mr. Worth's "dreams." She played almost as well as she looked, which is saying much, and she had the additional advantage of the handsomest and best of Orlandos in Kyrle Bellew. Later we have had two very capable, though not specially brilliant, Rosalinds, in Janet Waldorf (an American) and Norah Kerin (presumably from the Emerald Isle), the latter aided by very splendid mounting and a good all-round caste, including W. H. Denny as Touchstone, Charles Kenningham as Amiens, and Dora Rignold as Celia (considerably taller, both physically and histrionically, than her Rosalind). This lady also gave us during her brief stay exquisite performances of Viola in the "Twelfth Night," and Oberon in "Midsummer Night's Dream."

Of the Orlandos I have seen, including Walter Montgomery, W. H. Kendal, Hermann Vesin, George Melville, and Kyrle Bellew, the last stands out as the best. Son of a great elocutionist (the Rev. J. M. Bellew), endowed with special advantages of feature, figure, and voice, this gentleman, the ideal Romeo of his time, was specially excellent as "the youngest son of old Sir Rowland"—that flower of woodland chivalry.

Mr. Asche's is certainly the most original Jacques I have seen. It is undoubtedly effective, but rather, I fancy, in spite of the apple-munching, the long robes, and the bald-head, than because of them. Some actors of Jacques remind one of Hamlet or the Stranger: this one reminded me of Apemantus in "Timon of Athens." By-the-by, why does not Mr. Asche play Falstaff, a part for which his figure, voice, and humorous power would seem eminently to fit him?

Mr. Vezin was a favourite, and almost the only, Jacques, for many years, and played it with Marie Lytton and Kyrle Bellew at the Aquarium Theatre, Westminster, Lionel Brough being the Touchstone—a fine quartet. I also dimly remember the renowned Samuel Phelps as the melancholy philosopher, and the part was, of course, specially effective in the hands of this most versatile of Shakespearian actors. There has always been some controversy as to how the "Seven Ages" speech should be delivered, some actors favouring a tone of melancholy reflection throughout, tinged with a certain contempt, as he contemplates the vanity of human life; others incline to a more declamatory, descriptive, and even mimetic manner, as if speaking chiefly to amuse the Duke, who is clearly indicated in the text as being fond of listening to Jacques' moralising, and regretting having been absent, when his friend commented upon the sobbing deer. This has always been the most popular rendering, and to my mind (if not overdone) does not appear forced or unnatural, but "Who shall decide when doctors disagree?"

The present production at the Criterion stands out well for all-round completeness. The text is admirably arranged, and gives more of Shakespeare than usual. The meaningless and inartistic transferring of the First Lord's speech to Jacques is avoided; Sir Oliver Martext and the two Singing Pages are restored; Celia is allowed to speak her own lines at the end of Act I.; the general cast is worthy of the principals—Orlando, Oliver, Silvius, and Touchstone are played well; Adam, Corin, and William specially well; the scenery and costumes are beautiful and appropriate; and, above all, we have a Rosalind of great beauty, charm, and spirit. The only weak point appears to me to be the rendering of the vocal music. One misses Charles Kenningham's splendid reading of "Blow, Blow," and "Under the Greenwood Tree"; and surely a local quintet might have been found capable of doing fuller justice to Bishop's fine glee, "What shall he have that killed the deer?" The deer, by the way, was conspicuous by his absence from this scene, as was also Jacques. I hope that when Mr. Asche and his excellent company visit us again Sir John Falstaff will be of the party. Bottom, too, should be worthy of this artist's consideration; but, unless I am mistaken, he did play that part a year or two back at the London Adelphi.

Mr. Holman begins his interesting review of Rosalinds of the local stage with Miss Hilda Spong, in which connection he may be assured that that artist's subsequent career quite justified his admiration of her earlier efforts, since for more than ten years past she has been playing comedy lead in New York, and other great cities, at a high salary, varied by occasional tours with companies of her own. But had the veteran actor-elocutionist extended his reminiscences a decade further back, they would have embraced the appearance of Essie Jenyns, undoubtedly the finest Shakespearian actress Australia ever produced. Miss Jenyns' "Rosalind" was remarkable for its distinction, a quality which characterised all her classic impersonations. Youth, a tall, willowy figure, star-like eyes, and a silvery voice were all the priceless possessions of Essie Jenyns at the time marriage deprived the Australian stage of its brightest ornament. But it was not by these physical gifts alone that this Rosalind, Viola, Portia, and Ophelia drew all the town, realising a great fortune for W. J. Holloway, the experienced and able actor-manager of an otherwise "usefully competent" combination. The vivacity and the youthful fire of the young actress were tempered by a serious charm, a note of cultivation and thought, that is rarely met with, and no account of "As You Like It" in Australia can be held complete that does not include her name.

THE ENCAMPMENTS.

THE FIELD ARTILLERY.

This year the field batteries have had, including their share of the Kitchener camp, 10 days' training, except those men who were unable to remain the whole time; and this is satisfactory, though it is to be hoped that in future the law, as well as the patriotism alike of employers and employees, will conduce to prevent any absenteeism.

The efficiency of citizen field artillery is one of the most difficult problems that the military authorities have had to face. Even the well-organised militia batteries of Great Britain, now called Royal Field Reserve, have not been looked upon with favour; and those of the Territorials have been pronounced by Lord Roberts to be worse than useless. Captain Archdale, D.S.O., R.F.A., in a treatise upon the system, observes:—"N.C. officers and artificers constitute the greatest difficulty. Reliable men capable of looking after a sub-section are exceedingly hard to find. It is almost impossible to train them sufficiently during the short time the annual training lasts. For the preliminary drill a good riding-school is the chief essential. Gunners can be trained on the barrack-square, but drivers require three weeks' riding-school, before they can be sent out with a team." In connection with this subject it is to be observed that the axiom that it takes two years to make a gunner (that is, a "Tommy" gunner) is intended to apply to the regular service where the training is constant. What then must be the difficulty in the citizen force where the instruction is fitful and at intervals?

Last year a number of Territorial field batteries were exercised at driving drill on Salisbury Plain, and then sent in turn to shoot for two days at Okehampton. In an inspired article in the "Army and Navy," commenting upon this, it is observed:—"It is more than probable that the public will be asked to compare results of shooting with those of Regular batteries. Without going too deeply into artillery technicalities, it may be pointed out that once a battery is in position, provided the gunners have an elementary knowledge of laying and fuse-setting, and the battery commander has a gunnery instructor at his elbow to edit his orders, it is quite easy to hit a target that waits as long as you want, and does not shoot at you. This epitomised the practice of the Territorial batteries, always excepting that of the Honourable Artillery Company, a corps which is possessed of advantages denied even to regulars. The gun detachments on the whole were fairly good; there is, in fact, no mystery connected with laying and firing a gun slowly. The driving and riding were naturally very indifferent; and the average battery when limbered-up was only capable of very slow movement over easy ground, and unable to manoeuvre much, except in column of route. Limbering-up guns and hooking-in horses presented great difficulties, enhanced of course by the fact that the horses were unaccustomed to the work. But it was not to be expected that amateur officers could command artillery in or out of action."

This criticism seems severe, but is, no doubt, justifiable; yet it should be remembered that the officers receive much more, and the men, at least, as much, instruction as ours, and that moreover the batteries have the immense advantage of constant association with "training brigades" of Royal Field Artillery. The article is not wanting, however, in recognition of such merits as the "Terriers" possess, and it especially recommends that all first appointments to commissions should be by promotion from the ranks. At the exercises already referred to the two horse batteries of Hon. Art. Company were easily first; and this is attributed in great measure to the fact that such of their officers as have not served in R.A. have all risen from the ranks. There is much to recommend in this system. A young man appointed direct to militia artillery will have everything to learn, and will probably be years before he is properly abreast of his work; whereas if he has passed the ordeal of the ranks, and obtained stripes, he will be familiar with the drill and routine and the ammunition work, he will have commanded a sub-section, and obtained a good insight into the duties of a section-leader.

The establishment of 16 days' annual continuous training is, without doubt, the first essential step in the right direction. Beyond this, however, there should be frequent week-end camps, and advantage taken of Monday public holidays for that purpose. There should be whole-day parades for the purpose of practising field manoeuvres, signalling, driving drill, and waggon drill. Every officer, non-com. officer, driver, and mounted man should be required to attend riding school until dismissed with a certificate of proficiency, and this should be demanded as an essential preliminary before the issue of a commission. In fact, no candidate for such should be accepted who is not a good bold rider, nor should any man be promoted to sergeant unless possessing this qualification. Every officer and sergeant should be required to pass through a short school of artillery, and to obtain a first-class certificate; and they should be encouraged to attach themselves as much as possible to long R.A.A. courses of instruction. There can be little doubt, also, that R.A.A. batteries as a nucleus to the militia brigades should be established and stationed in Sydney, Melbourne, and Brisbane, and half-batteries in the other States.

Our material is excellent: our officers are keen; our men intelligent; and all make the most of the opportunities afforded them. But it is always with the scientific branches of a citizen force that the real trouble arises, from the simple reason that they essay duties which tax the undivided attention of even the purely professional soldier. Very much, however, may be done if expense is not grudged.

ENGINEERING IN THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

The British Empire covers such a wide area, and its relations to the other countries of the world are so complex, that the relative importance of its various parts is apt to be wrongly estimated, as position often counts for more than size. For instance, Singapore is the gateway of the Pacific, and as such is a strategical point, round which radiate the three divisions of the British Eastern fleet—the East Indian, the China, and the Australian squadrons, which are based respectively on Bombay, Hongkong, and Sydney. In time of war Singapore would be the central rendezvous of these three squadrons for coaling, victualling, and refitting, as well as for offensive movement. These considerations, no doubt, led the Government to acquire the Tanjong Pagar Docks, and to develop the accommodation in Singapore Harbour. A loan of £5,000,000 was raised in 1907, under the provisions of the Loan Ordinance, which authorised the Colonial Government to borrow a sum not exceeding £7,861,457 for works in the Settlement. A report recently issued by the Colonial Office states that good progress has been made with the harbour works, and details are given of some of the operations, a total of £45,934 (the equivalent of 393,654 dols) having been paid to the contractors during the year for work done during 1908. The total number of men employed was 1388, including 130 Europeans. Progress was made during the year with the new Lagoon Dock, and the reconstruction of the wharfs at Tanjong Pagar. Tenders for this work were received in 1907, and Messrs. John Aird and Co.'s tender of £598,700 was accepted. The wet dock is to have an area of 24½ acres, providing 3837ft of additional quay-wall, with a minimum depth alongside of 30ft. The various sections of the work are being rapidly pushed forward. The plan and appliances provided by the contractors are most complete, and leave nothing to be desired, and it is expected that the rate of completion of the permanent works will increase rapidly. Three prominent contracting firms are now at work in Singapore under contract with the Government—viz., Sir John Jackson, Limited, Messrs. John Aird and Co., and Messrs. Topham, Jones, and Railton; while the Westminster Construction Company is also carrying out contracts with the Singapore Municipality for the construction of a new reservoir at Kabang, filter-beds and a clear water tank at Woodleigh, and have completed their contract for the abutments of the new bridge at the mouth of the Singapore River. It may be noted that the year under review in the report was an exceptionally bad one for the trade of the colony; not only was the depression throughout the world felt here, but, as was pointed out by both the chairman of the Chambers of Commerce of Singapore and Penang, the depression was accentuated by the fact that many of the Chinese firms who had speculated in tin and exchange by means of "long credit" were unable to weather the depression. The results were disastrous, the loss in Singapore alone being estimated at four to five million dollars.—"Engineering."

LAW REPORT.

HIGH COURT.

In the matter of the appeal of J. and J. Lonsdale and Co., Limited, from the decision of the Supreme Court of Queensland, in the case of J. and J. Lonsdale and Co., Limited, v Thomas Edward White, application was made by Mr. Blacket, on behalf of the respondent White, for an order expediting the hearing of the appeal so that it might be ordered to be set down for hearing at Brisbane on April 25, or alternately for hearing at Sydney on such date as the Court might see fit. Mr. Rolin appeared on behalf of the appellant to oppose the application.

His Honor ordered that the hearing of the appeal should be expedited; that security should be given not later than April 22, and (by consent) that printed copies of the transcript should be lodged and served not later than the 22nd inst, and that the respondent should undertake to incur no further costs before the 13th inst.

Australian Agricultural Company v Newcastle Municipal Council.

Mr. Knox, K.C., Mr. J. L. Campbell, Mr. Windeyer, and Mr. Barton, instructed by Messrs. H. J. Brown and Mitchell (of Newcastle), through their agents, Messrs. Andrews, Moseley, and Manning, appeared for the Australian Agricultural Company, appellants; Mr. Blacket and Mr. Piddington, instructed by Mr. W. H. Baker (of Newcastle), appeared for the Council of the Municipality of Newcastle, respondent.

This matter came before the Court in the form of an appeal from a judgment of the Supreme Court given in July of last year. The Council of the Municipality of Newcastle sued the Australian Agricultural Company for the recovery of £50 as the amount of fair rental charge upon the defendant in respect of rails owned by it, which had been laid on, over, or under, or through the public places under the control of the plaintiff. The case was tried before Mr. Justice Cohen, who formally entered a verdict for the plaintiff for £50, with leave reserved to the defendant to move to set aside the verdict. The case was taken to the Full Court, which held that the only question for consideration, in view of admissions made, was whether the defendant company was liable under section 209 of the Local Government Act to pay a fair rental charge on the rails laid by the company. The Court held that the defendant company was liable, and discharged the rule, with costs.

The High Court was asked to upset this finding.

The appeal stands part heard.

GRAZIERS AT LAW.

Baker v Richmond and another.

Mr. Mocatta and Mr. Mitchell, instructed by Mr. W. P. Blackmore, of Bellingen (by his agents, Messrs. S. F. Blackmore and Son), appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Bradburn and Mr. Curtis, instructed by Mr. H. L. James, of Bellingen (by his agent, Mr. A. J. M'Donald), for the defendants. This action was brought by William Baker, of Grafton, grazier, against Alfred Richmond and John Daley, of Pine Creek, in the same district, farmers and graziers, to recover certain cattle belonging to him or £330, representing their value, and £70 for their detention. The particulars of the plaintiff's case have already been given.

Defendants pleaded that the cattle were not the property of the plaintiff, and that under the agreement with Thompson they were entitled to detain the cattle until the charges for agistment were paid. Defendant Richmond in his evidence said that, as far as he and his partner were concerned, Thompson was considered to be the owner of the cattle. When he saw plaintiff on October 1, Baker said he owned the cattle, and showed him the butts of his cheque-book and a receipt, in proof of his statement, but witness said that what was placed before him was no criterion of plaintiff's ownership. Witness also stated that about October 1 cattle were worth only 35s to £2 per head. This was, however, contradicted by the plaintiff when called in reply.

Mr. Curtis submitted that there was evidence that Thompson was either the agent or partner of the plaintiff, with express or implied authority to make the contract of agistment.

His Honor, in summing up, said he did not think the jury would have much difficulty in coming to the conclusion that the cattle belonged to the plaintiff, bearing in mind that that was one of the things he had to make out. He ruled that the cattle were detained against the will of the owner, and also that there was no evidence adduced which could possibly justify the jury in coming to the conclusion that the defendants were entitled to detain the cattle in spite of the will of the owner. It was, no doubt, a very hard case that defendants, who had given their grass to another person's cattle, should get nothing for it. Possibly they had a remedy against the person with whom they made the contract, but that was not the question here. Having refused to give up the cattle on the demand of the owner, defendants, under the circumstances of the case, were liable, and it would be for the jury to assess the amount of damages to which plaintiff was entitled.

The jury, after a short consideration, found that the number of cattle detained was 47, valued at £4 per head. They also allowed a nominal amount of 1s as the damage for detention.

IN EQUITY.

(Before the Chief Judge, Mr. Justice A. H. Simpson.)

INTERPRETATION OF A WILL.

Mr. Harvey, instructed by Messrs. Stephen, Jaques, and Stephen, appeared for the plaintiffs, Hugh Andrew and William Stewart Andrew; Mr. Lingen, by Messrs. Norton, Smith, and Co., for defendant, Mary Stewart Darling.

This was an originating summons for the determination of the question whether, under the will of the late John Andrew, Mrs. Darling was entitled to one-third of the net profits of Berrembed station, near Grong Grong, or only to interest at 4 per cent. on one-third of the capital value of the station three years after the testator's death, when the estate was directed to be converted.

Plaintiffs also asked for an order, permitting them to purchase the defendant's interest in the station property at the price mentioned in affidavits; and in respect of this portion of plaintiffs' case, His Honor sanctioned the sale of the station as from December 31, 1909, at £46,574, the purchasers to shoulder all liabilities to outside persons and the Crown, defendant's share, £15,524, to bear interest at 5 per cent. from December 31, 1909, until paid over or allocated. The matter was then allowed to stand over generally for the appointment of a new trustee to whom Mrs. Darling's share should be paid.

The other part of the case was then proceeded with.

(Before Mr. Justice Street.)

DISPUTE BETWEEN FATHER AND SON.

Barnes v Barnes.

Mr. Harvey, instructed by Mr. C. M. Boyce, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Lingen, instructed by Messrs. Pigott and Stinson, for the defendant. The suit was one brought by Harold Ebsworth Barnes, against his father, James Barnes, to obtain a decree of the Court that he was a partner with defendant in a bakery business carried on at Henderson-road, Alexandria. Plaintiff also asked for an injunction to restrain the defendant from excluding him from the partnership.

Defendant denied that any partnership existed, and said he purchased plaintiff's business at Cowper-street, Waverley, outright, paid his debts, and afterwards engaged him in the business at Henderson-road as a workman on weekly wages.

The evidence on both sides having closed, counsel addressed the Court.

His Honor said that the onus was upon the plaintiff of satisfying the Court that his case had been made out on the evidence. He must establish the balance of probability in his favour as to the truth of the story he told, and the only evidence as to the existence of the partnership was his own. For various reasons, based upon his demeanour under cross-examination, and the unsatisfactory way in which he answered certain questions relating to his knowledge of particular circumstances, he was not prepared to place any reliance upon plaintiff's statement where uncorroborated. He thought his conduct subsequent to the transfer, and also that of the defendant, was entirely inconsistent with the story plaintiff had told. There was also the fact that the alleged partnership was not registered under the Registration of Firms Act.

Suit dismissed, with costs.

INDUSTRIAL COURT.

(Before Judge Heydon.)

WATERSIDE-WORKERS' BOARD.

The matter of the nomination of a representative of the Free Labourers' Association on the Permanent Waterside-workers' (Deep-sea and Wharf-labourers) Wages Board was again before his Honor. Mr. Hill, who was originally nominated, not being acceptable to the parties, had not formally withdrawn, but the name of Mr. Alexander Orknie was suggested as a substitute should he withdraw. His Honor adjourned the matter until yesterday, so as to enable the secretary of the Free Labourers' Association to be present for examination.

Mr. Tighe, instructed by Mr. Barker, appeared for the Permanent Waterside-workers' and Free Labourers' Association; Mr. W. M. Hughes, instructed by Mr. Beeby, for the Sydney Wharf-labourers' Union; and Mr. Nathan for the Sydney Stevedores, Wool-dumping, and Lighters' Association.

Archibald Richardson, of 27 Jamieson-street, Sydney, in answer to his Honor, said that he was secretary of the Free Labourers' Association, and that he had sworn the affidavit, produced on March 31 last.

To Mr. Hughes witness said that his association met on March 26 at 8 p.m., the meeting being called by advertisement in the "Herald." It was attended by about 40 persons, supposed to be members of the Free Labourers' Association. On the statement of the doorkeeper, they were vouched for. Mr. Orknie was employed shovelling coal. Witness was deriving his living solely from his duties as secretary to the association. The advertisement calling the meeting was addressed only to free labourers, and not to employers. Witness had not a roll of the members of his union, but the way he knew whether a man was a member or not was by a ticket and receipt. All members had not paid, but all had promised to do so when able. Witness kept a minute-book, which was in the office.

Mr. Hughes: Have you the minute-book with you?

His Honor: I don't see why their minute-book should be brought here any more than the Wharf-labourers' Union's minutes-book.

Mr. Huges: Very well, your Honor.

Witness (continuing) said that Mr. W. Herley was chairman of the meeting, at which a resolution from the Permanent Waterside Workers was read suggesting the appointment of Mr. A. Orknie should Mr. Hill's nomination not be acceptable. In the event of neither of those names being acceptable it was agreed that Mr. J. Hickey, president of the Free Labourers' Association, should be nominated. Since the meeting another member had joined the association. The association was satisfied that Mr. Orknie's nomination should be supported, he being unanimously accepted. Any representative satisfactory to the Court would be satisfactory to the association. Provided they secured representation, they would be satisfied with either of the gentlemen recommended.

His Honor said, on the close of the examination, that he would reserve his decision.

HOTEL, CLUB, AND RESTAURANT BOARD.

This matter was in respect to the reconstitution of the Hotel, Club, and Restaurant Wages Board. Mr. W. C. Shipway appeared on behalf of hotel and restaurant employers; and Mr. James John Morrish, secretary of the Hotel, Club, and Restaurant Employees' Nnion, for that body. In this matter two boards are to be constituted, one for hotels and restaurants, and the other for clubs.

Mr. Shipway nominated for the Hotels and Restaurant Board, on behalf of the employers, Joseph Alfred Pullbrook, Aaron's Exchange Hotel, Gresham-street, Sydney; and Philip Hart, Central Railway Cafe, Sydney; and Mr. Morrish nominated as employees' representatives Frank Simmonds, 171 Cathedral-street, Sydney, and Louis Hermann Dinte, 94 Paddington-street, Paddington. For the Clubs' Board William Johnstone, secretary of the Atheneum Club, Castlereagh-street, was nominated as employers' representative, and Otto Pfaffiin, Belmont-road, Mosman, as employees' representative. Mr. G. C. Addison was nominated as chairman for both boards.

His Honor said that he would recommend the nominations.

The following nominations were made in respect to the Hotel, Club, and Restaurant Employees' (Newcastle) Board:—Alexander William James Watt, of the Grand Hotel, Newcastle, and T. G. Thomas, of the Criterion Hotel, Ltd., Newcastle (for the employers); and Alfred Gandin, 11½ Hunter-street, Newcasale, and James O'Connor, porter, Grand Hotel, Newcastle (for the employees); with Mr. G. C. Addison as chairman.

The nominations will be recommended by his Honor.

DISTRICT COURT.

Defendant pleaded never indebted, and said that she never authorised the sale referred to.

Mr. James, instructed by Mr. W. H. Drew, appeared for the plaintiff; Mr. Blacket and Mr. Flannery, by Mr. H. J. Aspinall, for defendant.

The case is part heard.

POLICE COURTS.

ALLEGATIONS AGAINST POLICEMAN.

CHARGE DISMISSED.

Yesterday, in the Summons Division of the Central Police Court, before Mr. Maitland, D.S.M., Constable Timothy Malone was proceeded against on a charge of having assaulted Daisy Amy Margaret Von Alliman on March 2.

Mr. E. R. Abigail appeared for complainant; and Mr. J. W. Abigail for defendant.

Complainant stated that she was a married woman living at West Kogarah. On March 29 she came into Sydney, and called at her husband's place of employment, a coffee palace in Liverpool-street. Witness missed the last train, and after placing her baby on a bed at the coffee palace, she went out into the street. Her husband came out on the verandah with her, and while talking with him defendant came across the road and caught hold of her by the left arm. Witness said she still had the bruises on her arm. Defendant, witness stated, pulled her round and asked her what she was doing there. Witness did not answer at first, but said that she was only speaking. Defendant then said, "You are a well-known character; you are nothing but a common ——. Come with me." Complainant's husband asked defendant how dare he call her by such a name, upon which defendant caught hold of him and wrestled, giving her husband a couple of punches. Defendant then handed witness's husband to another officer, and he was taken to the lockup. Complainant produced her marriage certificate.

Evidence was given by Valentine Albert Von Alliman, complainant's husband, and a night porter at the Cosmopolitan Coffee Palace in corroboration. Witness said that he told Malone that if his wife went to the station, he would go too. Malone then punched him across the mouth. He was taken to the station, Malone adding, "I'll give it to you, you ——." Witness also said he was struck on the cheek while on the way to the cells. Other evidence in support was also called.

Timothy Malone, a constable, denied the charge. He stated that he never put his hand on the woman. He had had the vicinity under observation for some time. On the night in question, witness said he heard the proprietor of the coffee palace refuse the Allimans admission. They then went on the footpath, and witness heard the man call the woman a liar. He asked Alliman what the matter was, and also inquired his name. Alliman said, "Find out." Witness again asked Alliman his name, and received the reply, "You don't want my name; my character is cleaner than yours, you dirty ——." As Alliman still refused to give his name, witness arrested him. The woman hung on to the man, and had to be pulled off by Constable Conley. As she expressed her determination to go with the man, whom she said was her husband, she was allowed to accompany him to the station. Alliman made no reply to the charge. Witness denied assaulting either of them. Alliman refused to be searched, and would not furnish any particulars of himself. The man was excited, and appeared to be under the influence of drink. The woman was not arrested. Witness said he never saw the man before so far as he knew. He did not know him as a night porter at the coffee palace.

To Mr. E. R. Abigail, witness denied that he was a quick-tempered man. His reason for making investigations in this matter was because he heard the man and woman being ordered out of the house, and the man call the woman a liar. Witness said he had been in the service for nine years, and had never before been a defendant in a police court case.

Constable S. Conley gave corroborative evidence. He stated he was with Malone at the time. Constable Mark Scott, who was in charge of the Central station on the night, said that defendant had asked him to examine Alliman, who had said that he (defendant) had struck him on the eye. Witness could not see any mark. Constable Scott also said that Malone could not have struck Alliman in the passage on the way to the cells.

The case was dismissed, with £3 3s costs.

ARTILLERYMEN AND POLICE.

Leslie Livermore, 25, and Thomas Keane, 21, both artillerymen, were charged at the Central Police Court yesterday charged with being drunk and disorderly, with having assaulted the police. Keane was also charged with using bad language and assaulting a civilian. Constable Newton gave evidence that the accused, at about 11.15 on Thursday night were in Castlereagh-street drunk and creating a disturbance. They refused to move on when requested, and Newton arrested Keane, who resisted violently. While the constable was handcuffing Keane Livermore joined in the tussle, striking and kicking the officer savagely. Keane escaped with the handcuffs on one wrist, and Newton then proceeded to arrest Livermore, who was taken to the station. Constable Kelly and Sergeant McIntosh went in pursuit of Keane in a motor car, and succeeded in running him down in College-street. A citizen named Joseph Andreoli, who went to Newton's assistance in the first instance, was struck by Keane on the head with the handcuffs. Andreoli also lost a sovereign purse and three sovereigns in the struggle.

Sergeant Mankey informed the magistrate (Mr. Love) that an officer was in court who would testify to the accuseds' good behaviour so far as the barracks were concerned. The police did not know them.

In answer to the magistrate the sergeant said that none of the officers was injured sufficiently to cause him to relinquish duty. The sergeant, however, suggested that the charge was more serious than ordinary, in so far that both accused were soldiers, and should, therefore, assist the law.

Livermore was fined 10s or 48 hours for being drunk and disorderly, and 20s or seven days for resisting the police. Keane was similarly fined for being drunk, etc., and 20s or seven days for language. For the assault upon Andreoli he was ordered to pay £5, or suffer two months' imprisonment.

Both accused were sentenced to three months' hard labour for assaulting the police. Mr. Love, in imposing sentence, said that the case was one to which leniency could not be applied, and the police must be protected.

CITY CORONER'S COURT.

A COAL-LUMPER'S END.

A verdict of accidental death was returned in the case of Edward Boland, a coal-lumper, who fell from a plank at Darling Island, when unloading coal from the Wairuna on Monday last.

The coroner, Mr. Stephen Murphy, stated that better safety appliances should be provided for coal-lumpers while working on the steamers. He would make a recommendation to that effect to the authorities.

THE SYDNEY SHOW.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—A Queenslander has seen your article in the "Herald" of March 25 re the question, What to do with the people at future shows for want of room? He, therefore, with all due respect, would submit that seating room for thousands of people could be made by continuing the seats that are now at both sides of the official stand back over the street that is outside the wall along there, thus putting a roof over this street, which would make it a covered way for people to get under if rain came on. Then seats ought to be put round the other parts of the show ring, right out to Bent-street, and over it in the same way, if required, and it could be made a covered way. These seats ought all to have a roof over them, and it would pay to have them so, for wet weather would not then keep the public away.

Of course this would cost money, and could not well be done until the ground is vested in the society for the public, as is pointed out by the secretary. At the last show things were not as they ought to be, for more than half the people who went there could not even see the parade ring. Human nature cannot be expected to go on year after year paying for what it does not get; so this time next year the men and women who have been paying may say, What is the use of spending our money to get into the show ground when we cannot see the parade ring? These are the people, one may say, who keep the show going, therefore everything should be done to give them full value for their money, and have things in such a way that every man, woman, and child can see what is going on in the parade ring.

For these reasons the show ground ought to be at once vested in the society for the people, so that they could spend the money required in making the ground what it ought to be.

I am, etc.,

April 5. M. MOFFATT.

ACUTE NERVOUSNESS AND PALPITATION OF THE HEART.

OFTEN THE BEGINNING OF SERIOUS ORGANIC HEART AILMENTS.

There was no uncertainty in the testimony given by Mrs. Caroline Sadler, who lives in Charlton-street, Wickham. She said to the reporter:—

"I have told many of my friends in Newcastle about the dreadful time I had, and how, by taking this wonderful remedy, I became cured.

"It was nothing more nor less than Clements Tonic that remedied my ailments, and I always say that I owe the rest of my life to that splendid medicine. My liver was in a very bad state. I placed myself under medical care. I despaired of ever feeling well again. It was after a very bad turn, when I thought it was all over with me, that my husband got me some Clements Tonic. By-and-bye I took such a turn for the better that I could scarcely realise I was the same person who so recently had been sick unto death with liver disorders, which other medicines could not mend. In a month or five weeks I felt like one born again, for instead of being weary and melancholy all day, as had been my custom, I began to move about with an energy surprising.

"Twice I had rheumatic fever, which left my heart weak, but Clements Tonic strengthened that organ, and caused the palpitation to be a trouble of the past, besides making me sleep and eat so well that before long I was as hearty as possible."

(Signed) CAROLINE SADLER.

SCIENCE NOTES.

W. G. P.

KELVIN AND HIS WORK.

Professor Sylvanus P. Thompson's brilliant "Life of Kelvin" (Macmillan) recalls some of the most interesting advances of physical science in the nineteenth century, and, leaving aside the more strictly biographical elements, it may be useful to refer to some of these in this column. Kelvin was born in 1824, came, quaintly enough, second in the Mathematical Tripos of 1845, worked for a time in the famous Regnault's laboratory at Paris, where a remarkable group of young physicists were gathered together, and in 1846 succeeded to the chair of Natural Philosophy at Glasgow. A curious feature of the election was that Kelvin had to read a trial essay, much as young Scotch ministers have to preach a trial sermon. This essay was in Latin, and Kelvin burned it the same day. Kelvin was then 22. On November 1, 1846, he read his first introductory lecture—and he used the same manuscript for the same lecture for over 50 years.

THE BEGINNINGS OF THERMODYNAMICS.

In 1838 Joule, a young Manchester brewer, began the line of investigation that led him to the mechanical equivalent of heat. His British Association paper in 1843 was received, however, with stony silence, none of the wise men of that time being able to realise that there could be a definite relationship between work and heat. He read further papers in 1845 and 1847, when the president of the section wanted the paper "taken as read," with merely a short verbal explanation by the author. Young Kelvin alone realised the importance and the truth of Joule's results. Even Stokes was not converted until long after. It was thought that Carnot's principle precluded the transformation of heat into work, and Carnot's influence long caused Kelvin himself to suspend his judgment. In the meantime Rankine and Clausius had taken up the subject, the former in 1849 enunciating something very like the modern doctrine of heat as a mode of molecular motion. Both Joule and Clausius had already deduced an absolute zero of temperature from the dynamical properties of gases; and Clausius saw that the theories of Joule and Carnot were not mutually exclusive. Kelvin's paper on the dynamical theory of heat, in 1851, brought together the new doctrines in a masterly manner, and clearly stated the two fundamental laws of thermo-dynamics, those of equivalence and transformation. Helmholtz had already published his celebrated paper on the conservation of energy, and Kelvin in 1852 added to it the necessary appendix of the dissipation of energy—although the sum total of energy in a system is constant, the available energy becomes smaller with each transformation. It was while the foundations of thermo-dynamics were thus being laid that Thomson and Joule noticed the cooling of a gas escaping through a small orifice—a minute fact that was to revolutionise the commercial production of low temperatures. Another important fact brought out was the lowering of the freezing point under increased pressure.

ELECTROMAGNETISM AS A MOTIVE POWER.

In the early fifties the possibilities of electricity as a motive power were keenly discussed. It was then known that electric motors could be driven by voltaic batteries, but the cost was shown to be prohibitive. Electric power was argued to be sixty times as dear as steam power. Groves, Tyndall, Smee, and other eminent men, all, in 1857, condemned the idea of electric motive power as commercially impossible. Thomson, however, pointed out that the intrinsic efficiency of an electric motor might be far higher than that of the best thermal engines. None the less he concluded, "Until some mode is found of producing electricity as many times cheaper than that of an ordinary galvanic battery as coal is cheaper than zinc, electro-magnetic engines cannot supersede the steam engine." Faraday had discovered the principle of the dynamo in 1831, but its significance had not dawned on the keenest intellects.

THE VORTEX ATOM.

In 1858 Helmholtz published a short but extraordinary memoir on the integrals of the hydrodynamic equations which express vortex motion. Thomson seized on the results of his analysis with the intuition of genius, and proceeded to develop a general theory of vortex motion, finding a useful analogy in the behaviour of smoke-rings. He showed that such rings possess many of the qualities of material atoms—permanence, elasticity, the power to act on one another through the intervening medium. His first paper on this subject was written in 1867. He showed that not merely were vortex rings in a perfect fluid indestructible, but that they might be linked or combined in various ways to form various orders of atoms. At this theory Kelvin worked heart and soul for many years, seeking to fit it into a comprehensive kinetic theory of matter. In 1887 he enunciated a vortex theory of the ether, showing how an assemblage of vortex rings would resist distortion, and so serve as a medium for the propagation of wave motion. It is one of the finest monuments to Kelvin's scientific temper that he ultimately abandoned this favourite child of his scientific imagination. By 1890 he was satisfied that matter could not be explained directly in terms of ether, and his suggestion then was to bring in electricity as a "fluid-go-between." At that moment Kelvin just missed the conception of the electron. After half a century of strenuous effort Kelvin declared he knew no more of the relation between ether, electricity, and matter than he knew in his first session as professor. But his 50 years' search for a theory of matter is none the less his greatest contribution to science. The modern theory of matter developed by Sir J. J. Thomson, Sir Joseph Larmor, Lorentz, Heaviside, and others assimilates the bulk of Kelvin's work, and owes much of its inspiration to it. An electron-atom is in effect a vortex ring, including an electric charge as a part of its constitution.

THE CATALOGUE OF KELVIN'S WORK.

Perhaps the most surprising thing in Professor Thompson's "Life" is the bibliography with which it closes. Long as the "Life" is it merely touches on a few of the landmarks in a scientific career unequalled in its output of solid work. For the most part Kelvin's word cannot readily be summarised for the non-scientific reader. Many of them relate to the development of mathematical methods, and most of them are an attempt to give mathematical form to physical theory. Thermo-dynamics, electricity, and magnetism, and the general doctrine of energy, occupied him throughout his life, and by his calculations as to the age of the sun's heat, his work on variation in climate, and in other ways he had a considerable influence on the geological speculations of the 19th century. Wave motion interested him keenly, and his contributions to the study of tides are of great importance. Gyrostatic motion, with its simulation of elasticity, struck his imagination when he was 15, and his studies of it culminated in one of his many novel conceptions of the ether. It was his or our good fortune that he lived through all the early stages in the technical applications of electricity, and to his inventive genius modern applied electricity owes a long range of what are now indispensable instruments. Electric telegraphs, testing apparatus, the measurement of electrical quantities, the modern compass, and modern sounding machine are all what they are largely as a result of Kelvin's activity—an activity which in both pure and applied science continued right down to the end of his life.

Not long ago a lawyer of considerable prominence took up the game of golf. Some of his friends volunteered chapters of advice, while another presented to the beginner a book of rules. After completing his first round the counsellor was asked if he had mastered the rules. The perspiring lawyer realised the sarcasm of the remark, but proved equal to the occasion. "The rules? Oh, they are quite simple," he replied. "There are two I know of, and to my mind they are the most important. You must hit the ball with your club, and after you have hit it you must find it, of course, before you hit it again. It will take an honest man several weeks to master these two rules. After driving the ball you must hit it wherever it lies. Good lies are as important in golf as in fishing. Losing a ball costs you two strokes and at least 50 cents. Hitting a caddie with the ball is justifiable homicide."

GENERAL BOOTH.

Few, if any, would contradict the declaration that the one Englishman best known in countries outside the British Empire today is the General of the Salvation Army. Not only has he received honour from nearly all the crowned heads of Europe, but his work through his devoted and unflagging followers is known amongst the humblest of almost every nation under the sun. Such notoriety has not been easily won. General Booth was misrepresented, maligned, doubted, and persecuted before he secured fame. The period of distrust and pronounced opposition has happily passed away, and his admirers can rejoice that in a ripe old age he now sees abundant fruit springing from his early labours. To-morrow (April 10) the General will be 81, and from latest reports appears to be as eager as ever for fresh achievements. Some men have won laurels only to live long enough to blight them by blunder or indiscretion. Others, like Lord Nelson, have died in the hour of victory without experiencing any of the glory victory brings. To the chief of the Salvation Army has been granted the good fortune of moving forward to climax after climax of unchecked success. The hand of fate has not blotted out his lucky star. Ripened, and although enfeebled by age, he is now one of the most vigorous spiritual forces of the day, whilst what he has written and said and the institutions he has founded proclaim him an authority on all to-day's big social problems. Reporters rush to get his opinions when things in religious and social spheres are taking new shapes, and statesmen look up and rub their eyes when he taps his social kaleidoscope.

There are very few in these days who do not acknowledge General Booth to be possessed of great foresight and organising skill. Arnold White says, "The business arrangements and the interior working of the Army are excellent." Sir Walter Besant, writing with almost the same point in view, remarks: "How was the founder to create the spirit of obedience and discipline? There seemed no other way than to copy the ranks and degrees of an army. In an army there is not only the obedience of every man to his superior officer—there is the authority of every officer over his subordinate officer. Discipline and obedience become the concern of every single man in the Army."

It was because the General saw he could work a military system permeated with a democratic spirit that he allowed the army principle to come into existence instead of copying the methods of the Churches. Perhaps the best plea the Army can put forth for its present form and method of action is the success attending its efforts. Although General Booth is an old man, his organisation, in point of view of age, is scarcely out of swaddling clothes, so to speak. And that so much could have been accomplished in such a short time speaks volumes in favour of the organisation. At the present time the Army has over 16,000 officers constantly engaged in its work, and, in addition to this number, about 6000 persons without rank are permanently employed and paid for their services. There exist 36 training colleges for the training and educating of officers, who are supposed to be ready to go to any part of the globe. Fully engaged in institutions for dealing with social derelicts, outcasts, criminals, etc., there is a finely trained staff of over 2000 men and women. The Army is established in 8000 places, manages 15 naval and military homes, has 530 day schools, gives scope for the talent of 20,000 bandsmen, and publishes 70 distinct periodicals, with over a million copies per issue. Such figures as these tell their own tale.

A FADED GOLD MINE.

HOW THE METAL WENT.

SOME INGENIOUS PRACTICES.

For obvious reasons it would not do to mention the gold mine where the following incidents occurred, but this much may be said:—The mine is situated in New South Wales, on a goldfield that has been prominently before the public for many years; that it was equipped with a costly power and crushing plant; that it produced large yields of gold in its early history; that afterwards the gold yield gradually lessened, though the quality of the quartz did not diminish; that the richer the bonanza stone was the smaller was the battery yield; that ultimately the shareholders, tired of not getting any reward for their expenditure, closed the mine down; that it was then let on tribute to a number of parties, with the result that the reefs in the different levels, which did not return more than 10dwts a ton when the company worked them, suddenly, under the tributers, increased to two, three, and even four ounces of gold a ton.

The time then arrived when a larger tribute than usual was let—a tribute embracing a number of shareholders, who employed miners to work a certain portion of the mine. Very soon this tribute company, as it may be termed, began to find that the quality of the ore become poorer and poorer, just as it had with the parent company, until it ended in the tribute company deciding to finish its labours with a small crushing of six tons of ore, which, so the manager said, could be culled so that it would average at least 10oz to the ton. The actual result was 13oz from the six tons of stone. This broke up the tribute, and it left the mine once more abandoned to small co-operative tribute parties.

Now comes the sequel. The directors of the parent company were satisfied that their gold was being stolen, but they could not pot the thieves. Shortly after the mine shut down the manager, with one of the directors, went through it, carefully examining the timbers to see that they were in a sound condition. In their wanderings they came across a bundle of postal consignment tickets hidden amongst the timbers. These, as it was afterwards proved, were similar to the tickets used for consigning gold through the post to a bank some hundreds of miles away. It was subsequently discovered that the bank in question had received many parcels of gold, consigned through the post, the parcels being addressed on tickets exactly similar to those found in the mine. The parcels also came from the same township.

At times the reef, from 5in to 8in wide, would be worth from 200oz to 300oz a ton for a few feet in length. It is quite understandable that it required only a few ounces of such stone to be filched each day to yield a considerable amount of gold a week.

That there was something wrong with the mine is shown by the fact that one tribute party got permission to crush some of the mullock dump on the surface, but when the first crushing yielded over 2oz of gold a ton, the surprised manager closed down on the concession, started men to pick out the quartz from the mullock, and got out two good crushings for the company.

Extreme ingenuity is shown in gold-stealing from mines. Candles have been hollowed out, and rich specimens concealed in them, the miner being allowed a certain number of candles a week for private use. Acting in collusion with the blacksmith the heads of picks have been bored out, then plugged, the hollow carrying the secreted gold. If the picks were tempered soft, they came to the surface several times during a shift, when the contents of the hollowed hands would be removed, the plugs put back, and the picks sent below to be charged again. Another practice was to conceal rich specimens in the clay holding a candle, throw the clay away on coming to the surface, and collect the "tobs" after dark. A hollow boot-heel was also popular. Another way was for the men below, working in collusion with the trucker, to put the specimens in a "tucker" bag put in the bottom of a truck loaded with mullock. On going to the mullock tip, the bag came to the surface, and was thrown to a certain spot, where it was collected at dark. This became such a regular practice at one particular mine that the manager erected an electric arc-light, which made the mullock-tip at night as bright as day.

But perhaps the most ingenious scheme was that adopted by a battery workman who rode to work on a bicycle. He was detected filling his long bicycle pump with cyanide solution, tapped off from a vat of gold-bearing sand. A visit to his house revealed several gallons of the solution ready to be run over some zinc shavings on which the gold would be deposited.

SKIN, SCALP, HAIR, AND HANDS.
The constant use of Cuticura Soap, assisted when necessary by Cuticura Ointment, not only preserves, purifies, and beautifies the skin, scalp, hair, and hands, but prevents clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, inflammation, irritation, redness, roughness, and other unwholesome conditions. All who delight in a clear skin, soft, white hands, a clean wholesome scalp, and live, glossy hair, will find that Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment more than realise every expectation. Sold throughout the civilised world.—Advt.

IN THE GARDEN.

POPPIES.

Poppies may be divided into two principal groups—annual and perennial. These plants, which have ornamental foliage, are most showy and profusely flowering, and worth a prominent position. There are both single and double flowering varieties, and although the individual blooms last but a short time the plants continue to flower for a lengthy period. Many have brilliantly coloured flowers, flaked, mottled, and striped in a remarkable manner, while others show a charming combination of colour even in the same bloom. Poppies are hardy, easily cultivated plants, and will grow in any friable, good garden soil, but thrive in moderately rich, deep sandy loam. From seed sown now in the coast districts plants will bloom in early spring, and with small sowings of the annual varieties at intervals until July there will be flowers till midsummer. In the colder parts of the State the first sowing should not be made before August, and this may be continued with the annual kinds at intervals until October to ensure summer and early autumn flowering plants. Poppies should be grown in masses to produce the most gorgeous effect, but when grouped at intervals in mixed flower borders they show, when in bloom, to great advantage. As the seedlings often suffer from being transplanted, the best results are mostly obtained by sowing the seed very thinly and evenly, lightly covered with soil, where the plants are to flower. If the seedlings grow thickly the weaker ones should be thinned out; for each plant should have plenty of room to induce lateral growths, and consequently more flowers. The most popular annual varieties have been raised from such species as Papaver rhaeas the corn or wind rose, and P. somniferum, the opium poppy, and include amongst others the charming flowering carnation, danebrog, picotee, ranunculus, and Shirley strains.

Two of the best perennial species for Australian gardens are P. nudicaule, the Iceland poppy and P. Orientale, the Oriental poppy. The former grows from 1ft to 18in high, having finely divided leaves and large, rich orange, white, or yellow flowers. There are several varieties with very beautiful single and double blooms of various colours, the bright orange scarlet ones being particularly fine. The Oriental poppy is a handsome plant, and certainly the most stately of all the poppies. It grows from 2ft to 3ft high or more, has distinctly ornamental leaves, and very large, deep scarlet flowers, each from 6in to 9in in diameter. At the base of each petal there is a black blotch which gives the flower a singularly attractive appearance. There are several varieties of this species, having very beautiful and showy flowers of various colours. All these perennial poppies can, in addition to being raised from seed, be increased by carefully dividing the roots of established plants when at rest.

LILY-OF-THE-VALLEY.

The lily-of-the-valley is one of the most easily cultivated plants, yet many fail to grow it satisfactorily. Sometimes the plant is killed by too much attention, and it is frequently planted in unsuitable positions. In a natural state it grows in sheltered valleys, under the shade of trees, and the closer these conditions are followed the greater success will attend its cultivation. The lily-of-the-valley is a universal favourite, and its perfumed white flowers are, under favourable circumstances, produced in profusion. It does well in the cooler but better in the colder parts of the State, and should be planted in deep, light, rich moist soil, in a position where it will have partial shade. A bed formed on the south side of a wall or under trees where the light is not entirely excluded are ideal places to grow the plant to perfection. The time has arrived for planting the "crowns" to flower early next spring. The "crowns" should have a few roots attached to them, and be planted three inches apart and left covered with soil to the depth of about half an inch. After planting the surface should be top-dressed with 1in or 2in of leaf mould or well-decayed natural manure, and this should be done annually after the foliage has died down. Treated in this way the plants will keep in a vigorous condition for years, and will produce a profusion of fine flowers every spring.

NOTES.

Carnations that were layered last December will now be sufficiently rooted to bear transplanting to the positions where they are to flower. If care be taken in severing them from the parent plants and favourable weather be chosen for the operation the layers will not suffer much by the removal. Under ordinary conditions such plants will flower freely next spring.

In the coast districts, where cinerarias are grown in the open, it is a suitable time to plant them in positions where they are to bloom. If seed was sown at the time advised in this column, the seedlings may now be successfully transplanted. They thrive in deeply worked, rich, sandy loam, in sheltered situations, and show to the greatest advantage in bloom when grown in masses. Cinerarias should be planted about 18in apart, and if the colours are arranged to harmonise they will produce a very fine effect in spring.

If the buds on the early-flowering varieties of camellia are too numerous thin them, leaving two or three on each shoot, which is easily done by giving them a gentle twist between the finger and thumb. Those left will develop into much finer blooms through this little extra attention. The plants will be much benefited by an occasional watering of weak liquid manure at the roots in dry weather, especially if the soil in which they are growing is not too fertile.

BUSHHOUSE.

If extra shading has been used on the bush-house during the hotter months it will be advisable now that the sun's rays are not so intense to remove some of it. This, however, must be done with discretion and, if possible, on dull days, so that the plants shall not suffer from the change. When plants are grown under too dense shade in the cooler part of the year the growth becomes weak. See that the drainage of all pot plants is efficient, for if heavy rain is experienced and the soil becomes water-logged it will have a serious effect upon the plants. All the watering should be done early in the day, and the syringing early in the afternoon of bright, sunny days. Syringing should still be liberally applied to azaleas, palms, rhododendrons, and strong-growing ferns in order to keep insect pests in check. Neglect will permit insects such as thrip, to multiply and disfigure the leaves and fronds, from which it would take some time to recover, even under skilful treatment. Seed of the improved varieties of mimulus, popularly known as the monkey flower, may now be sown in light, rich soil, and when the seedlings are large and strong enough they may be transferred singly to flower-pots or half a dozen planted at equal distances in an earthenware seed pan. With ordinary cultivation their singular, beautiful and richly-coloured flowers are produced in great profusion. Seed of the allied delightfully perfumed musk plant may also be sown and grown under similar conditions. If the seed of schizanthus, commonly known as the butterfly or fringe flower, be sown now the resulting plants will freely produce their showy flowers of various colours in winter, when blooms are scarce.

VEGETABLE GROWING.

When the weather is favourable and the soil in a good condition continue to transplant from the seed beds to the open such plants as borecole or kale, broccoli, Brussels sprouts, cabbage, cauliflower, kohl rabi, and endive. Where root crops, such as beet, carrot, parsnip, swede and white turnips, that were previously sown in drills have come up too thickly, thin the plants, so as to allow those that are left a better chance to develop into fine vegetables. When the surface soil is dry, earth up the early autumn crop of potatoes, and some of the earlier-planted cabbages should now receive similar attention. Plant out more celery for succession in trenches that have been well enriched with manure or spent hops. If the seedlings are strong and vigorous they should be planted 12in apart in the centre of each trench. Water the plants copiously at the roots in dry weather, and occasionally overhead. Some of the earlier-planted celery will now be ready for earthing-up, but in performing the operation care must be taken that none of the soil falls into the heart of the plant. Leeks in seed beds, when strong enough, should be transplanted to the open, and if extra large ones are desired they should be set out 1ft apart in shallow trenches 18in apart. When hoeing a little soil should be distributed round each plant until the trenches are full. This will blanch the lower part of the stems, a condition which many housekeepers prefer to the green state. Beds of all the hardier perennial kinds of culinary herbs may now be formed, and the roots of spear mint may be put in shallow boxes nearly filled with soil, to be placed in the glasshouse later on to provide green mint in winter. Onions may now be largely sown, and if extra large bulbs are desired sow the seed in beds, and when the seedlings are large enough transplant them in rows. Sow broad beans (on strong soils), carrot, leek, lettuce, peas, parsnip, radish, spinach, white turnip, and mustard, cress, and watercress for salading.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

J.J. (Leichhardt).—The breeding of Pekings and Muscovys as you suggest is correct, but there is really very little to be gained by the cross. The big money-making duck farms in some of the Sydney suburbs rarely trouble with mule breeding. Experimenting with crossing breeds is interesting, but for practical purposes, the Muscovy, Aylesbury, Peking, and Rouen give ample choice in varieties, as marketable commodities, while for eggs a good strain of Indian runners will prove the most profitable.

Tempe.—The roup powder, which you see advertised in the English paper, is really more of a spice than a medicine, and usually consists of equal parts of powdered aniseed, fenugreek, liquorice, and ginger. A teaspoonful is mixed in the soft food for each ten fowls. It is useful to poultry in the cold, wet, English winters, but there is really very little use for such stimulation here.

E.E.—From your description of the symptoms, it would be impossible to tell what your fowl's ailment was. Should any others become affected and die, a specimen should be sent to the Microbiological Department.

The secretary of the Richmond River A. H. and P. Society forwards the schedule for the 24th annual show, to be held at Casino. The classification for fowls is extensive, prominence being given to old English game, which are much bred in that district, and largely by arrivals in recent years from the Hawkesbury districts.

"Mustard Feeding for Fowls," is the title of a pamphlet forwarded by G. Shrimpton and Sons, Clarence-street. It gives details of a feeding test in England to determine the efficacy of mustard in fowls' food, to promote laying. The detailed results are quite in favour of the mustard. Now that eggs are 2s a dozen, anything that encourages laying without impairing the health of the fowls will be welcomed by poultry-keepers. The booklet will be forwarded free to all applicants.

A practical article on the artificial brooding of chickens, by A. L. Wyndham, of the Wagga Experimental Farm, appears in the current issue of the "Agricultural Gazette." As poultry breeding is successfully carried on at the Bomen establishment, the methods adopted should be of interest to poultry men. Orchardists, who are usually poultry-breeders as well, will also find a valuable contribution on the insectivorous birds of New South Wales. The birds illustrated are termed "Friends of the Man on the Land," and the Australian boy who aims a pea rifle or catapult at one of them is told in plain terms that he is unworthy of his country.

The following are the head-lines of two page advertisements which appeared in an American poultry journal the present year:—"A Living from Poultry, 1,500.00 dollars from sixty hens in ten months on a city lot 40ft square. Two pound broilers are raised in eight weeks on less than a square foot to the broiler. Six months-old pullets laying at the rate of 24 eggs each per month, on a space of two square feet for each bird." "Money in Poultry, 3,600.000. Net profit from 30 hens in one season on a lot 24 x 40. It is not an experiment—it has been done, etc." The one firm hails from New York, and the other from Kansas, the remarkable thing being that both are offering their systems for one dollar. If the profits in the hen business are anything approaching the above, it possibly explains America's abundance in millionaires.

In a late issue of the "American Agriculturist," Mr. A. G. Gilbert, manager of the poultry department of the Canadian Experimental Farm, expresses the opinion that the cramming of fowls is not gaining popularity in the Dominion. He writes:—"I have no sympathy with the cramming or forcing method of fattening chickens. I do not think it will ever be generally adopted by the farmers. Our large purchasing concerns have tried it and abandoned it. Our Government fattening experts say it is not necessary. The finishing of the chickens by crammer or crate for a special market will mostly be carried on by the second party, and will always be more or less limited. Farmers must be wholesale producers, and as such will get their properly fed and cared for birds of suitable types off their hands as quickly as possible. They cannot afford to specially coop and feed their chicks, except to special customers, who will pay them the highest retail price. The number of these farmers will always be limited, because they require to be in the neighbourhood of city markets. When they deal with the middleman they will receive only the wholesale price. They cannot afford to produce the retail article to sell at a wholesale price. It is not business, and farmers are too sharp not to tumble to this."

The South Australian 1909-10 egg-laying competition concluded on the 30th ultimo. Mr. Bertelsmeier's pen winning in the white Leghorn section with 1531 eggs, one egg less than Mr. Padman's score at the Gatton competition which closed the same evening. The 1531 made at Roseworthy is exactly the number scored at the same place in the 1907-8 test by Mr. Kinnear. The winning pen was 150 eggs higher than the West Australian pen, which secured second. Mr. Padman's pen at Roseworthy was over 200 eggs below his winners at Gatton, and was a few eggs lower than Cowan Bros. of this State, whose pen laid 1330 eggs, or just on 222 eggs per hen. The Wharepaki yards, also of New South Wales, averaged 215, and occupied a good position at the close. Messrs. Cowan Bros. had a pen of orpingtons in both the Queensland and South Australian tests, and scored 190 and 194 per hen respectively, filling the tenth place at Roseworthy, amongst 56 competitors. Queensland now leads all the tests with an average of 205 eggs per hen. When Mr. McIntosh, at Rockdale, put up over 195 at the "Herald" test, a few years ago some people could scarcely credit it. Now the figures have been passed in two States.

Some time ago reference was made to the annually increasing price for eggs, every country in the world partaking in the rise and attributed not to reduced production but a rapidly increased demand for human consumption, and as an essential in many of the textile and other industries. The annual report of the poultry trade of England for 1909 just issued, emphasises the above. The report says:—The reduction in imports of foreign eggs recorded during the last four years has continued at an increasing rate, as shown below. Inquiry reveals that this is due to the rapid growth of consumption in Germany, which is now the largest importer of poultry produce in the world, and she is tapping our sources of supply, a position we are quite content she should occupy so long as home producers take advantage of the opportunity thus afforded.

The trade and navigation returns for 1909 record that the number of eggs imported into the United Kingdom from all countries was 17,710,441 gt. hds., or 2,125,252,920, which was a decrease from the total of 1908 of 499,629 gt. hds., or 59,955,580; or 857,460 gt. hds. (102,895,200) less than in 1907. The high-water mark in value of imports was 1903, since which time there has been a steady decline. The figures for 1909 show a reduction as compared with 1903 of 2,138,458 gt. hds., or 256,661,820, which is more than 16,000 tons. The supplies credited to Germany come from Southern Russia, and Canadian supplies are practically no longer of account.

For several years the declared average values have steadily advanced. In 1908 these were 5s 10d per great hundred. Below are the figures since 1900:—

1900	6/5½ per gt. hd.
1902	6/7¾ per gt. hd.
1904	6/9 per gt. hd.
1906	7/6¼ per gt. hd.
1908	7/10½ per gt. hd.
1909	8/2 per gt. hd.

or an advance in the nine years of 1s 8½d per gt. hd., due to increased demand and improved methods of marketing.

The imports of poultry are only given in value, and show a reduction for the year of £14,000. The goods come chiefly from Russia, France, and Austria-Hungary. A few years ago America threatened to be a formidable competitor in the poultry trade, but within two years the exports to England have fallen off by over £50,000, and it is believed that in a few years the production will only meet that country's requirements.

CAUSE OF RHEUMATIC PAIN.
"For a number of years I was a martyr to chronic rheumatism, and suffered untold agonies from pain and consequent weakness. My joints were swollen to nearly twice their natural size. My appetite became capricious, and I was much reduced in flesh. The slightest change in the weather would intensify the agonising pains. My limbs were so sore that I could bear not the slightest touch. I tried many so-called cures, but never did I receive permanent relief until Warner's Safe Cure was brought to my notice by a friend in whom I had entire confidence. The medicine seemed to agree with me perfectly. I could feel a change for the better from week to week, and the pain gradually left me. Soon I was perfectly cured. My joints were reduced to their natural size. I am now as strong in the joints as the average woman, and do not tire readily with exertion. I can enthusiastically endorse Warner's Safe Cure."
This graphic description of the effect of Warner's Safe Cure in cases of rheumatism is from Miss B. Cole, 47 John-street, Windsor, Vic. Rheumatism, gout, lumbago, sciatica, gravel, stone, and bladder troubles are disorders caused by the retention in the system of uric poisons. When the kidneys are acting efficiently, these poisons are duly expelled. Warner's Safe Cure acts directly by restoring the kidneys to health and activity. A descriptive pamphlet will be sent, post free, by H. H. Warner and Co., Limited, Melbourne, Vic.—Advt.

THE MARCH REVIEWS.

BRITISH POLITICS.

All the "Reviews" after their several factions are full of electioneering and its dismal results. In the "Nineteenth Century" Harold Cox writes very sanely about the denial of self-government. He says, truly enough, that the electors simply did not know what to do. To most of them Mr. Lloyd George and the Liberalism he stands for were alike odious, and Mr. Asquith and the more sober wing of the party were plainly unable to suppress the Lloyd George policy. On the other hand, they feared and disliked tariff reform. Their only choice was a choice between things that they did not want. They were, in effect, disfranchised. There is a great need, says the writer, to arouse the sensible and moderate majority, so that it shall cease to bear the whips and scorn of party managers. In the same review Mr. W. S. Lilly says his feeling is one of amazement mixed with shame. He proceeds to pour out a righteous scorn on universal suffrage, and on the asininity of democracy in general. The existing Parliamentary system, he says, is hopelessly rotten, and cumbers the ground. "There is a feeling abroad, not only in this country but in others—France, Germany, Italy, the United States, and our colonies—that Parliaments are played out." The Bishop of Ossory follows in much the same strain. A madder way of settling complicated problems than majority rule he cannot conceive, and a bishop needs a powerful imagination. In the course of his criticism he makes at least one profound observation. While the main task of progressive politics consisted in the breaking down of exclusive privileges democracy was a success. That is why, reading half the lesson of history, we believe in it. But once it reached the stage of constructive statesmanship its inherent weakness—the counting of heads, not the weighing of brains—sterilised it and made progress hopeless, until we find some way of distinguishing the over-man from the herd. The Bishop finds the solution in the regeneration of the Lords, and a progressive degeneration of the Commons. In the "Contemporary" Mr. E. T. Cook does the best he can with the "Liberal majority," but he is obviously seriously depressed, and Colonel Pedder accounts for its smallness by dark hints of wholesale intimidation of rural voters. In one dreadful case a labourer's wife was visited 15 times by insidious aristocrats, and Colonel Pedder assures us that such "protracted persecution" secured many Liberal defeats. In another case the Tory candidate had the use of 90 motors, while the Liberal champion could only muster four—an injustice of Providence that seems to subvert any scheme of natural theology. Colonel Pedder in a temper is really quite ridiculous. The best summing up of the situation is that by Sydney Brooks, in the "Fortnightly."

JOURNALISM IN GERMANY.

In an amusing and suggestive article on "The German Press Bureau" ("Contemporary"), G. V. Williams says there is no civilised country except Austria where the press is on so low a level as in Germany. Journalism is the last resource of the professionally destitute, and it is all argument and no authority. Political parties are split into innumerable fragments, and only the partisans of each fragment read its journal. Thus Berlin, with three million inhabitants, has twenty-eight dailies against London's fourteen, and nearly all of them are ineffective and impoverished. Most of them are too poor to have a decent telegraphic service, or to gather news for themselves. Hence the power of the Press Bureau Department of the Foreign Office, which supplies such "information" as it sees fit.

INDIA AND CONSTITUTION.

In the "Nineteenth Century," which this month is the most generally interesting of the "Reviews," Ameer Ali says that the constitutional reforms in India, while they will not allay unrest, appeal strongly to the general good sense and loyalty of the people. The educated classes and the classes with a stake in the country, have been given a substantial, though nominally only an advisory, part in the management of its affairs. The experiment has been made in good faith, and it must be regarded as one of the most momentous events in the history of India. It only remains for those who claim to be the leaders of public opinion there to make the best use of the machinery provided for them. The great difficulty lies, not in the presence, but in the absence of Nationalism.

WOLFE'S MISSING JOURNAL.

Recently Mr. Beckles Willson wrote an exhaustive "Life and Letters of James Wolfe," in which he mentions the journal entrusted to Captain Bell, a journal that had since disappeared. Shortly after publication of the book Mr. Willson received a letter from the Rev. Evelyn Burnaby, of Chippenham, concerning some Wolfe papers in his possession. There are six small volumes, of which the sixth is a transcript of the long lost journal. The entries are mostly very brief, but they throw some interesting sidelights on Wolfe's dissatisfaction with his colleagues. The young hero was utterly alone, and had to strive single-handed against the forces of jealousy, inertia, and incompetence. Townshend was openly hostile; Murray dilatory and critical; Monckton tepid and unscientific; Saunders, Durell, Holmes, and Rous quite hopeless. Wolfe carried the Quebec campaign on his own shoulders ("Nineteenth Century").

ARE WE LOSING OUR HANDS?

Sir Frederick Treves puts this astonishing question in the "Nineteenth Century." He says that neolithic man was keener of sight and hearing than ourselves, and had greater powers of endurance. A resurrected caveman would win the Marathon race hands down. Nay, the modern flint knapper is miles behind the Stone Age in his art. We have come to depend so much on the extrinsic aids of machinery that the hand is falling into disuse and degeneration. We cannot write as well as our fathers, or sew as well as our grandmothers. The script of the ordinary letter-writer is a worse puzzle than the Rosetta stone—but what about the physician's prescription? Indeed, Sir Frederick, commenting on the amazing advances of surgery, declares that as a pure handicraft it has fallen back notably from the 18th century level. Weaving, lace-making, embroidery, are all disappearing arts, and the hand-made boot has become a rarity. Sixteen machines do what the old shoemaker did with his fingers. Needle-making by hand was a fine art in cave-dwellings. The craft has vanished. Mechanical aids rob the carpenter of his skill, and more striking still is the disappearance of line-engraving. The cult of the hand is left to the virtuoso violinist and the facile manipulator of the three-card trick!

THE TUMULTS IN PRUSSIA.

The writer on Imperial and Foreign Affairs in the "Fortnightly" has some good paragraphs on the tumults in Prussia. The Prussian franchise system has long been recognised as the citadel of reaction, and there can be no hope for steady and effectual reform until that citadel is levelled. The Government promised to bring in a reasonable scheme of franchise reform. But Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg disappointed those who thought he had a leaning to liberalism. He revealed himself as a philosophical reactionary of the most rigid type, saturated through and through with faith in the whole Prussian ideal of Government, based on bureaucracy and police. In the twentieth century he was not afraid to use with conviction the language of the eighteenth. In the Empire, he said, they could not have party Ministers; Prussia could not let herself be towed into the waters of Parliamentary Government, while the powers of the monarchy remained unbroken. The writer admits the cruel archaism of the Prussian franchise, but he points out that German methods have given the Empire an efficiency no democracy has attained; and this fact will, he thinks, long prevent the socialists from gaining the ascendancy.

STATE JEALOUSIES.

FOSTER FRASER'S IMPRESSIONS.

A VIGOROUS INDICTMENT.

In one of his series of Australian articles appearing in the London "Standard," Mr. J. Foster Fraser deals largely with the inter-state jealousies, especially those of the little sections of Melbourne and Sydney residents who are forever decrying one another's belongings. He says:—

Australia presents a paradox. There is a breezy, buoyant Imperial spirit. But the national spirit is practically non-existent. This seems strange. Yet the explanation is simple enough. The population in all the States has been drawn from one common source—the British Isles. There is a warm and generous love for the motherland. When the Australian uses the word "home" he does not mean his home. He means England. Men who have never been out of Australia, and whose fathers were native born, will regret they have "never been home." And that one word "home," more than arguments about the advantages of Imperial trade or demonstrations in favour of Imperial cohesion, has soaked into the brain of the Australian, and he appreciates—not always by reasoning about it, but with the regard a son has for his father—that "home" is his country just as much as is Australia, and that what affects the Englishman affects him. Hence the growing spirit of Imperialism throughout the continent.

But you drop from Imperialism to something like parochialism in Australia with very little of the national spirit intervening—though it exists and must increase. Here is the reason. The old settlements were made on the seaboard long before the coming of railways. For all practicable purposes the States might have been so many islands. The only communication was by sea. Indeed, to-day there is no railway communication between Western Australia and the eastern States. It takes almost as long to go from Fremantle to Adelaide as it does from Liverpool to New York. Western Australia is part of the continent, but as there is no railway communication, it is just as much severed from the rest of the continent as though an ocean flowed between.

Now, this was very much the state of things in olden days between New South Wales, Queensland, Victoria, and South Australia. Though of common stock, each State was an absolutely independent community. Each State was fired with ambition to make it the most favoured land. The people had their independent Parliaments; separate Governors were sent out by the Crown. The States passed their own laws with no more consideration for each other than British legislation displays for uniformity with French legislation. When railways came each State laid her own roads and on a different gauge. To-day you find railways running to economic nowhere, to the edge of a State, and then stopping, for there is little linking up with the railroads in the neighbouring State. The great traffic is between Melbourne and Sydney. But when you get to Albury, the town lying between Victoria and New South Wales, it is necessary to change trains, because the gauges are different in the two States. You are tumbled out of one train late at night to go searching for your "sleeper" in the other train. Everybody grumbles. Everybody says it is ridiculous that such a thing should be on the main line between the two principal cities in the country. But New South Wales will see Victoria hanged first before she goes to the expense of altering her gauge, and Victoria is not going to change her gauge to that of New South Wales. Had there been a national spirit this would have been altered long ago.

The old spirit of State rivalry, amounting almost to enmity, but waning—and must be destroyed by the machinery of federal government—is, however, sufficiently pronounced to-day to rouse the scorn of every sensible man. The humour of the situation is that every man you meet in Sydney or Melbourne will agree with you on the general principle. "Yes," says the Sydney man, "you are quite right; but I am sure you do not find the jealousy in Sydney to anything like the same extent you do in Melbourne." "Of course," says the Melbourne man, "this parochial feeling to which you refer would soon disappear if it were not for the absurd jealousy of Sydney over Melbourne's prosperity." Each State is able to provide for the patient, listening visitor, like myself, convincing statistics that in regard to one point or other that State is more prosperous per head of the population than the neighbour State or any part of the world.

In my journeys I heard too much talk about State advancement and too little about Australia's advancement. Here was a marked difference from what I have noticed in Canada. There a man is proud of Ontario or British Columbia or Manitoba; but first, last, and all the time he is a Canadian. To say there is absolutely no Australian national sentiment would be an injustice to plenty of representative men. And the ordinary Australian, if the question were put to him, would insist there is a national sentiment, and very likely be indignant with myself for suggesting that it is infinitesimal. Talk to such a man, and, although he will begin with phrases about what a very magnificent country Australia is, it is only a few minutes before he is enthusiastic about his own State and making disparaging comments upon the other States. When a young farmer leaves Ontario and goes west to the wheat stretch beyond Winnipeg there is delight that he has gone to another part of Canada to make it fruitful. When young farmers move from Victoria to Queensland there are wailing regrets in Victoria, as though they had emigrated to a foreign land.

Australia has now a Federal Parliament—and great good to the nation must come as a consequence. But the State Legislatures will continue, controlling the land and the railways for instance. So the Federal Parliament has not much power at present. As a matter of fact, there has grown up such a fear in the States that federal government will decrease their importance, that they may be called upon to contribute money one of these days for great public services, not to the benefit of Australia—very few will consider that proud aspect—but for the benefit of some other State. It is just as though the taxpayers of Birmingham objected to pay for naval defence on the ground that they could not be subjected to naval attack.

The capital of each State is the meeting place of the State Legislature. But where is the Federal Legislature to take up its permanent habitation? At present it is in temporary assemblage in Melbourne. For it to remain there would put Sydney into hysterics of indignation, and for it to be removed to Sydney would almost provoke a civil war in Victoria. To satisfy all parties it was put into the original Constitution to build a Capitol removed from either of these towns. It will be at a spot called Yass, in New South Wales. But to prevent heartburning among the other States a piece of territory is to be ceded, and it is to be disinfected, as it were, from New South Wales by being made an independent spot—like Washington. Yass is little more than a name. It is an extremely picturesque spot. But it is not on the road to anywhere, except scenery. That in coming though distant times a beautiful and worthy capital will be at Yass I doubt not. But that this generation or the next generation will see it is nigh impossible. Who is going to live at Yass? Permanent officials and politicians—the latter only during the parliamentary session. There will be no diplomatic circle, as at Washington, to be the nucleus of a cultured community. It is hard to conceive that society people in Melbourne and Sydney and Adelaide and Brisbane—with all the pleasures those cities can afford—will go and dump themselves in a ragged, raw, unfinished place as Yass is sure to be for many years. The one good thing about it is that the creation of Yass will break down the local jealousies.

OUR NEW STORY.

Next Monday we commence a narrative of thrilling interest by that most versatile of romancers, A. W. Marchmont. It is called "At the Call of Honour," and is one of the best efforts of the author since, as a young Oxford man, he abandoned a brilliant career in journalism for a still more brilliant career in romantic fiction. His earlier stories, "By Right of Sword," "When I was Czar," and others, found for him an immediate and wide popularity, and more than one of his novels, in a dramatised version, has been a distinct stage success. "At the Call of Honour" begins with a betrothal and the reading of Sir James Anstable's will. All his money was left to Helen Armstrong and Ralph Anstable, provided only that they married. The only drawback was that the two were complete strangers, that Ralph loved Rita, and that Helen was somehow dreadfully entangled with some ferocious Italians. All this grew out of the fact that in early life Sir William had been a tutor in the family of the Prince of Potenza. Stephen Ross, who plays a large part in the story, did not know he was a member of the ruling family of Potenza. It is plain we have here all the element of high romance, and very skilfully does Mr. Marchmont work it out.

NORTH COAST RAILWAY.

DELAYS IN CONSTRUCTION.

QUESTION OF RESPONSIBILITY.

AN OFFICIAL EXPLANATION.

The Engineer-in-Chief for Railway Construction, Mr. Hutchinson, is prepared to admit that in the acquirement of certain lands covered by the first section—West Maitland to Dungog—of the North Coast railway, there was some delay occasioned for which no responsibility could be attached to the contractors. He is not, however, of opinion that the department can be held responsible for more than about three months of the time prescribed for the completion of this work. The contract, which was for two years, should, in the ordinary course of events, expire on the 28th instant. An extension of three months would bring in the end of the half-year; but, from what can be ascertained, it will be nearer the end of the year before the rails are laid over the whole 33½ miles.

Railway construction in other parts of the world would appear, from Mr. F. B. Brown's letter (published in the "Herald" on March 15), to be much more expeditious. Dealing with the necessity for mining railways, Mr. Brown points out that in South America large tracts of the roughest country imaginable have been surveyed and railways completed in less time than it has taken New South Wales Government departments to decide whether it would put in a line from Hermidale to Nymagee. He was amazed to see what had been accomplished there by narrow-gauge railways. In June, 1908, a proposal was made to run a railway from Arica to La Paz, in Bolivia, a distance of 480 miles, passing through the great copper district of Corocoro, at an elevation of 14,000ft above sea level, and costing £3,000,000 sterling. "Messrs. Jackson and Sons, of London, have to-day," says he, "constructed and finished 146 miles of the line."

If 146 miles of narrow-gauge railway can be made in one year and nine months, should it take two years and nine months to build 33 miles of standard gauge, forming this first section of the North Coast railway? Mr. Hutchinson was asked to explain this phase of construction. His reply was that everything depended upon circumstances. In the first place, narrow-gauge and standard-gauge railways were not quite comparable. There might have been occasion for rushing the line in Bolivia, which did not apply here. Work that had to be rushed was much more costly. The contracts for the North Coast railway, he explained, had not been let without full regard to the possible position of State finances. The supply of material and labour must also be given every consideration in differentiating between contracts. Here the State had given a seven years' contract to Lithgow for the supply of steel, and this might not always be available in the midst of labour trouble. Then again competent labour had been very scarce. Engineering difficulties, too, were all important. In this first section of the North Coast railway the piercing of the Wallarobba tunnel, 330 yards long, now accomplished, gave a great deal of trouble, the stone met with being particularly hard, and lying at awkward angles, whereas in parts the material was so soft that heavy timbering had to be used.

An application, it is explained, has been made by the contractors for an extension of time, and when dealt with by the Minister, all these things will be considered. In so far as delays were occasioned by the department, or through no fault of the contractors, they will have to be allowed for. But, if sufficient reasons cannot be advanced, no extension, beyond this period, will be exempted from the penalties set out in the conditions of contract.

The completion of this first section (all in) is estimated at £443,000, and the cost of connecting Taree with Maitland (116 miles) is put down at £1,627,340. At present there are 3600 men, 500 horses, and many waggons and carts employed upon the three contracts; in addition, there are many men engaged procuring piles. The contract time for the completion of the second and third sections is February and January, 1912, respectively. It is proposed to open the line in sections until completion, at Grafton.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In reference to the remarks made by me at the annual dinner of the Local Government Engineers' Association of Australasia on the establishment of a board of works to supplant the obsolete organisation of the present Department of Public Works, permit me to state that I am profoundly disappointed that Mr. Lee, Minister for Public Works, should in his interview published in Saturday's "Herald" have attempted to side-track the national import of my remarks by fitting the cap so tightly on the Government Architect's Department. If he will kindly refer to the reports published in the daily press he will find that he has no justification for his statement, my criticism being directly applied to the Department of Public Works, not to a particular section thereof.

At the inception of my remarks I would state that this is a question of principle, and not of individual members of the staff, many of whom I know personally as gentlemen of the highest professional ability and of gentle courtesy; and when I refer to an individual it is because the statement of my case leaves me no alternative. I feel also that the staff would render better results under happier circumstances with a board of works than under the present system.

The duty of a Minister for Works, after Parliamentary sanction has been given for carrying out public works, is to give Executive authority for so doing, and there his duties should rest, holding those responsible who are legally appointed to carry them out. The public does not expect such professional knowledge on the part of a Parliamentarian as would entitle him to specialise and manage the various sections of the department.

The ludicrous position at present is that the whole department is "run" by a "ghost" called the Under-Secretary, the Minister being merely a figure-head dependent on inspired and controlled by officialdom, and justifying my remarks on the extremely bureaucratic nature of its administration.

The public is entitled to know more about the manner of expending the immense sums of money entrusted to this department, and this would be practicable under a board of works. One notices that the information supplied to the public consists of carefully prepared minutes that savour of officialdom in a high degree.

It is only fair to the public that when such colossal sums are expended as much daylight as possible should be allowed on the administration; and by daylight I mean the power and influence of the daily press, which in Sydney is of remarkably high intelligence and of solid judgment, qualified to treat these questions in a proper manner.

How funny it would be to see a Minister of the Crown take his seat in the chair of the president of the Savings Bank and direct personally, in detail, the multitudinous and responsible duties connected with that position; and yet it would only be analogous to that presented by the Minister in reference to the Department of Works; only we know the "ghost" behind the mask on whom he is dependent, and we know also that this system is fraught with the greatest possible public danger, as we saw recently in the Lands Department disclosures, and the scandalous "Fortifications" disclosures in connection with the Public Works Department a few years ago.

Sometimes, in years gone by, when I have felt a desire for light literature, I have turned my attention to the Estimates of the Expenditure of the Government of New South Wales, with a particular leaning towards those of the Public Works Department, and have been highly interested in the peculiarly secret and mystic manner in which they are prepared. I have tried to prepare an ordinary balance-sheet thereon, but this would defy the capabilities of the historic Philadelphia lawyer; and then I have turned for relief to the clear-cut, business-like balance-sheets of the Railway Department, Water and Sewerage Department, and Harbour Trust, and wondered why the Public Works Department's finances should require such secret and mystic manipulation; so I will ask to be corrected if some of my figures require amendment.

I remember one "Particulars of expenditure of the Government Architect's Department, 1900-1901, 41, v 3, 1902.

Including salaries, £7306 3s 10d, the expenditure was £47,839 7s 9d. This shows the cost of professional services to be over 15 per cent., and as 5 per cent. is the recognised professional charge in private practice, I claim that for the public to be charged 260 per cent. more than a private architect would receive for such services is either gross extravagance or requires a great amount of explanation, which I am asking for; incidentally, I would ask if an item is included in the above expenditure for rent, office requisites, lighting, etc., which is a serious charge in private practice.

In reference to Mr. Lee's remarks objecting to designs for our national buildings being submitted to public competition, I may well ask why this State should not employ the genius of the most gifted of her sons instead of turning out the regulation designs by the yard in a Government mill. Every civilised community does so; and why should New South Wales resort to such obsolete and costly methods?

It may be in the recollection of many of your readers, that in reference to several cases of water supply to country towns the department persistently refused to allow competent engineers in private practice to carry out water schemes, and forced on them designs of its own, that have proved utter failures, saddling the municipalities or the country with great cost. What is the secret influence that can enforce such an injudicious method and compel everything to go through the departmental mill?

Amongst many I will refer to those of Goulburn, Bathurst, Junee, Gundagai, Mittagong, and Lithgow. Goulburn, estimate £28,000, cost £70,000 proposed additional cost, about £20,000, to raise height of reservoirs and duplication of portions of plant, and now the water is no good; it is estimated that £60,000 will be required for a proper gravity supply. Bathurst water supply, estimate £38,000, cost £100,000; and it is found that the machinery is completely inadequate to supply the town. Is it a fact that at Mittagong, where a new reservoir has recently been erected to replace the brand new one that burst a short time ago, the machinery requires duplicating, as it is inadequate, and has never been able to fill the reservoir—a serious matter in case of fire?

Is it a fact that at Lithgow there is no service reservoir in the town, which means a service in the pipes only, with no pressure in time of fire, and no reserve supply? I believe the department purchased a site for a reservoir, which has proved to be of too high a level for the pumping machinery.

Why does the department insist on its dual control of the Water and Sewerage Board, entailing financial loss on the community and defective professional skill?

Compensation and gratuities to officers, employees, and others, etc.	5,000	0	0
Equipment, travelling, transfer, removal, and other allowances and pay for temporary service	28,000	0	0
Rents, cleaning, caretaking, and numerous what are called outside petty cash expenses	10,000	0	0
Less chargeable to loan vote, £10,000; ditto, Public Works Fund, £10,000	20,000	0	0

Question: Does it cost £129,434 to supervise £239,310 worth of work, and, if not, what do the figures represent? And, would the department give a lucid balance-sheet to the public?

The totals for the Labour Bureau, Metropolitan and Hunter District Boards of Water Supply and Sewerage are given separately, so I will not add them on either side.

Amount appropriated for year ending June 30, 1910.

	£151,578	0	0
Less chargeable to loan vote .. £10,000 Less chargeable to Public Works vote .. 10,000	20,000	0	0

Question: Does it take £131,578 to supervise £227,200 worth of work? and, if not, what do the figures represent? and would the department give a lucid balance-sheet to the public?

In reference to Mr. Lee's remarks about my "destroying the whole Public Works Department by substituting it with a board," and "that the system had been built up upon the experience gained year after year," etc.

I have heard many skilled professional men state that the department is a relic of the old Crown colony days, unique in modern times; that it has grown up like "Topsy;" that the system is obsolete and should in the interest of the people be controlled by a board of works. May I also point out that it did not destroy the railways, water and sewerage system, and Harbour Trust, by placing them under boards.

Why, then, should it destroy the Public Works or Lands Department by so doing?

As regards the style complained of by Mr. Lee, it was obligatory under the circumstances in order to draw a reply from the Ministerial head of the department; if other means had been at my disposal I might have adopted another course. Feelings of patriotism, and the duties that I owe in my public position as the head of an important institute, compelled me to force this matter before public opinion with the best means that I had at my disposal.

In the interests of the State, may I appeal to you to obtain some information on the administration of this department.

I am, etc., JOHN F. HENNESSY,
Acting President Institute of Architects.
April 5.

Works Department in Reply.—The Minister for Works yesterday issued a reply to the criticism cast upon his department by Mr. Hennessy, the acting president of the Institute of Architects. He points out in respect to the allegation regarding expenditure in the Government Architect's branch that the rate compared with total expenditure would not exceed 6 per cent.—much less 260 per cent., or even 18 per cent., as alleged. When dealing with the total expenditure it is said that Mr. Hennessy omitted all other expenditure save that from the Consolidated Revenue Fund. Mr. Lee mentions that the rate per cent. in 1906-7 was 8.01; in 1907-8, 6.97; and in 1908-9, 6.51. He goes on to say that those figures "should furnish a complete reply to Mr. Hennessy's reckless and inaccurate statements regarding the cost of supervision." After referring to the country towns' water supplies, the statement concludes thus: "The matter of designs for national buildings being submitted to public competition has been so thoroughly threshed out in the past that Mr. Lee considers it useless to reopen discussion on the subject, but, judging by Mr. Hennessy's inaccurate diagnosis of the Public Works accounts, he is not likely to be consulted as an authority."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—During my Easter trip to Sydney I visited the Mitchell Library purely for "general inspection" purposes; and having read the recent criticisms appearing over the signatures of various correspondents in the columns of the metropolitan press on the harshness of the regulations governing the admission to and inspection of the institution, I feel that it is only just to the authorities and staff of the library to testify to the courtesy that was extended to me. I went there without any letter of introduction, or instrument of authority, or credentials of any kind; and yet, so far was I from encountering any difficulty or delay, either in entering or inspecting, that I can safely say I never won admission to any public institution of the kind with more facility, nor was ever treated with more consideration or courtesy by any staff of officials in the State. Indeed, the term "officials" seems harsh when I remember the almost personal interest in, and attention to, my wishes of which I was the fortunate recipient. I filled in a card at the door, stating my name, profession, and address, and that I desired admission for the purpose of inspecting the library, and that was all that was required of me before entering. After that, books that I wished to see were brought to me; the system of cataloguing, indexing, and shelving was explained, works of interest were pointed out, and, in short, everything that could be done to make my inspection of the institution enjoyable and useful to me was done with that prompt percipience of one's wishes which in itself is a courtesy of the first magnitude.

I do not intend in this letter to add anything to the vast tribute of praise that has already been written and printed re the Mitchell collection itself, and the noble building in which that collection is housed. But I do wish to state that my visit—a red-letter event in itself—was made a hundred-fold more pleasant by the courtesy to which I have referred. I cannot understand the harshness of the criticisms before referred to. They must, I fancy, have been written without practical experience on the matter; or, if not, then that experience must have been very different from mine.

BACKACHE, GRAVEL, AND KIDNEY TROUBLE.

"Sharp pains, as though a knife was running through me."

"I suffered for two years from backache, gravel, and kidney troubles, and was so bad with the sharp pains that at times I felt as if someone was running a knife through me," writes Mrs. Edith Potter, Robsart-street, Parkside, Adelaide, S.A. "I could not stoop, and when I was down could not get up again. I always felt so ill that I wanted to shut myself up in a room, and not see anyone.

"I had been treated in a hospital, and took all kinds of medicines, until I was sick of the sight of pills and medicines. One day a friend called to see me, and told me of a wonderful cure she had heard of, and asked me if I would try the same pills. I said: 'Oh, I have tried everything.' But, she said, 'I am sure you have not tried Dr. Sheldon's Gin Pills, and I want you to try them at once,' so to please her I said I would. She got me a bottle, and I began taking them, and continued doing so for a week, and the effect was marvellous. The pains left me, and now I am quite well. I can never be thankful enough to Gin Pills."

For Backache and all Kidney Troubles, use Dr. Sheldon's Gin Pills. One of these pills contains in a concentrated form all the curative properties of a pint of the finest gin, together with other important ingredients recognised by the medical profession as being remedial agents of the highest value for the kidneys and allied organs. Tanners consider the Buckenbowra Bark the finest quality in New South Wales. The Directors are assured of a ready market for every ton that can be procured.

REPORTS STATE THAT OVER 4000 ACRES ARE COVERED WITH A SPLENDID GROWTH OF HEALTHY WATTLES, portions having been thinned out to allow the trees to develop and mature. A large number are sufficiently matured to be stripped, but it is deemed advisable to leave the stripping in large quantities until the spring of 1911 and following years, while this year (1910) many tons may be won, and every season thereafter the stripping will show an increased result.

The trees are now 5 years old, and during the next seven years should yield at least 2½ tons of bark to the acre, thus giving a gross return of £80,000 at the present market value of bark.

Mr. C. VIDER, one of the Directors, has twice visited and inspected the whole areas and reported upon the Wattle Forests. The Directors have also obtained from Mr. R. H. Harvison, of Moruya (an Auctioneer and Valuer of many years standing in that district), a report and valuation of the land as a grazing and dairying area. These reports show that the WATTLE can be made inexhaustible, whilst the land alone, with improvements, is valued at over £32,000, apart from the WATTLE.

These reports may be seen at the Company's Office.

THE LAND IS EXCELLENT FOR GRAZING PURPOSES. It is composed of very rich dark grey and black loam, luxuriantly covered with different kinds of grasses, making good dairy pastures. The properties are subdivided into numerous paddocks of different dimensions by substantial wire and rail fences, and are equipped as first-class dairy farms, having considerable improvements thereon. An almost new cheese factory with up-to-date machines and utensils, milking yards and bails, blacksmith's shop, stables, stockyards, and two substantial dwelling-houses are on the estate. Cattle, horses, and sheep do extremely well, so much so that the Directors have received an offer of £350 per annum for three years for the grazing rights. The supply of the finest water is never failing, and, besides the Buckenbowra Creek, which is never dry, there are a number of smaller creeks running all through the properties. Thus it will be seen that should it be decided to ultimately sell the property, which the Company has power to do, it would be suitable for farming or grazing purposes.

The cost of stripping and marketing Wattle Bark is estimated at £3 10s per ton, and allowing that only 2½ tons of bark can be obtained per acre, it is confidently anticipated that a net return of about £40,000 will be obtained from the wattle now growing upon the land.

In addition to this profit, by treating the trees that may be thinned out, as well as the limbs and leaves of the trees that have been stripped, an Extract of Tannin, of great value, can be obtained. The process is a simple and inexpensive one, and is largely availed of in Victoria and South Australia, and the Directors confidently anticipate a large revenue from this source.

OWING TO THE SCARCITY OF BARK IN THIS STATE DURING THE WHOLE OF LAST YEAR, TANNERS WERE COMPELLED TO IMPORT LARGE QUANTITIES FROM SOUTH AFRICA, which, although not equal in tannic acid to the South Coast bark, brought £8 and over per ton.

The price to be paid for the properties, about 6079 acres and the wattle thereon, is £38,323, payable by the allotment of 500 preference and 5000 ordinary shares fully paid, and the balance in cash by instalments extending over 2 years, with interest on the balance due from time to time at 5 per cent. p.a.

The Vendors of the property are so satisfied with the prospects that they have applied for 9000 contributing shares.

THE PLATYPUS.

There is a slight swilling noise just audible to the ear, a series of rings on the surface of the water as though made by a dropping stone—a platypus has just sounded. Even of those who live in the localities where the animals abound, this is as much as many have seen of the platypus. Unless utmost silence is rigidly maintained, there is nothing to be seen, for they are extremely timid and acute of hearing, the slightest movement causing them to disappear to the bed of the river. The platypus is as thoroughly aquatic as the beaver, spending its whole life in or near rivers, but not frequenting stagnant pools nor brackish estuaries. It swims chiefly by flipper-like movements of the webbed fore feet, and dives with ease and grace. It is somewhat gregarious, but so shy as rarely to be seen, even where numerous, unless quietly watched for at evening, when they look like so many black bottles floating on the surface, and sink down directly if alarmed. The platypus, or, more correctly speaking, duckbill—which, as indicated by this latter name, possesses a bill similar to that of a duck—is what is termed an aquatic egg-laying mammal. It is, therefore, one of the most remarkable of our native animals. It is an extremely interesting, valuable, and perfectly harmless little creature, but, like all other of our "commercial" native animals, has been fast disappearing, through the inroads and slaughter made by mankind. It is now protected.

Each pair digs and occupies a burrow in the river's bank, just as rabbits would do in the banks of dry creeks and in the banks of rivers above water mark. So one has to be careful when riding along close to the bank, for the horse may put his foot over a hole, with dangerous possibilities to the rider and horse. There are usually two openings—one beneath the water, and the other above it. These often run irregularly away and upward from the stream for 10 or 15 yards, before a chamber is hollowed out, which is bedded with dry grass, where platypus sleep, rolled up in a ball most of the day, and where the young are prodcued. The burrows possess a very evil smell. The animals rarely go ashore, and when they do so waddle about with a curious slipshod gait. Their food consists of aquatic insects, small crustaceans, and worms which are caught under water. The sand and small stones at the bottom are turned over with the bill. They appear to at first deposit what they have thus collected in their cheek pouches, and when these are filled they rise to the surface and quietly triturate their meal before swallowing it. The food is discovered in the mud not only by an extreme sensitiveness to touch of the margin of the bill, but by smell, of which those studied in captivity show a remarkably high development.

The whole length of the platypus, including bill and tail, is usually about 18 or 20 inches. The body is long and depressed, the skin loose, and thickly covered with glossy hair, amongst the roots of which there is a layer of soft, short, waterproof fur, like that of the beaver. The head is small and round. The eyes are small, bright, and half hidden, but perfect and useful. No external ears are present, although the internal ears are perfectly developed and the hearing is acute. The bill, which is broader in proportion than a duck's, replaces the muzzle, mouth, and teeth of other ordinary quadrupeds. The bill encloses the long upper and lower jaws within an extremely sensitive naked skin, greyish in colour, which is mostly attached to the underlying bones, but possesses a flexible lip-like border all round the mouth. This is raised into a frill-like fold round the base of the bill, which in burrowing and searching for food in the mud is turned back so as to protect the eyes. Each jaw is provided with two pairs of horny plates, the forward ones being like sharp ridges, while those behind are broad and flattened. The nostrils are situated at the extremity of the upper jaw, so that the animal need only thrust the tip of its nose out of the water in order to breathe. The tongue is small, non-extensile, partly covered with horny spines, and has a projection towards its hinder part which serves to direct the food collected into the two large cheek pouches, where it can be stored and conveniently carried to the burrow or some other suitable eating-place. The legs are short. The forefeet have five toes, with strong burrowing claws, and a connecting membrance for swimming which extends even beyond the claws, but is capable of being folded back so as not to impede their use for burrowing. The hind-feet are smaller than the fore-feet. They likewise have five toes, armed with claws and webbed, but the web does not extend beyond the base of the claws. The tail is strong, broad, and flattened, about half as long as the body, covered with longer and coarser hairs, and nearly naked on the under surface.

The breeding habits of the platypus are remarkable. Only a few eggs are laid at a time, often only one, and it is hatched very soon after it is laid. The eggs are white, three-quarters of an inch long by half an inch broad. The shell is soft and flexible, and contains a large amount of food yolk, as in birds' eggs. The mother has no nipples, but has milk glands opening into little pits on either side. The young here take hold of the skin like a fold in their bills, which at this early stage are smooth and fleshy. The mother also assists in the suckling by the ejection of the milk from the mammary glands into the mouths of her young. An interesting feature is the strong horny spurs on the heels of the male. These spurs are movable and traversed by a minute canal opening at the point, and connected at the base with a duct from a large gland at the back of the thigh. Care has to be exercised in handling the male, or a poisoned hand may result. As the male alone possesses these appendages, they are probably used mainly in the combats of the nuptial season. The voice of the platypus resembles the growl of a young puppy, but, as before mentioned, the animal's disposition is gentle.

THE WOOL TRADE.

AN ACTIVE INQUIRY.

An active inquiry has been in force during the week for available lines. These have been almost wholly confined to skin-wools from the local scouring works, and are the principal source of supply at the present time. In fact, the skin-wools loom up rather largely between the monthly auctions in the autumn, winter, and spring. Fair-sized parcels of skin-wools have been realised during the week at firm rates. Very little business has been doing in greasies, that arriving is going into the auctions. Passed-in lots from the weekly sales that have changed hands of late have been cleared at prices equal to, and in some cases, a shade above, the auction bids. There has been an entire absence of auctions in the Commonwealth during the week.

SHEARING AND SELLING EARLY.

Wool has been coming into store rather more freely during the past few days by rail, and more especially by boat. This is satisfactory, for it promises well for good-sized catalogues, and attractive offerings at the forthcoming auctions opening on Monday, April 25. The finer weather of late has permitted of shearing proceeding at the early stations in the central districts of Queensland, and at the few stations in this State that have introduced an autumn shearing. These early clips come on to the market when catalogue space is hard to fill, and when the stores are bare of supplies. Also, too, this "off-season" when stocks are light in manufacturing centres. A strong demand, such as exists at the present time, may possibly induce other growers to join the ranks of those who made the autumn shearing innovation a couple of years ago. If that should take place, and autumn shearing become fairly general in the north-west and west of New South Wales, it would doubtless have a beneficial effect on the market. It would tend to increase the importance of the autumn and winter auctions; extend the selling season more evenly over the whole year, and have the effect of relieving some of the pressure from the weekly selling season. If this can be brought about by a natural change, such as the alteration in the time of shearing, it will simplify matters when it comes to dealing satisfactorily with a still larger number of small clips than have been catalogued this season. Every grower knows what a rush there was to sell right from the very opening of the weekly series, and how very difficult it was for the selling brokers to offer the consignments as speedily as their clients, or they themselves would wish. Had the demand for wool been less strong than it was after the Christmas recess, or values showed a weakening instead of a hardening tendency, a very unsatisfactory state of things would have existed. Any movement, therefore, that would relieve pressure from the sales during the busy part of the season, and at the same time increase the importance of the slack season, should be supported by all concerned.

PREPARING FOR NEXT VICTORIAN SEASON.

Already, both the buying and selling side of the trade in Victoria are endeavouring to arrange some system by which the changing conditions, brought about by smaller flocks, and closer settlement, may be made workable in the Melbourne and Geelong markets. With regard thereto, the "Age" of Wednesday last said that the matter most talked of in local wool circles was the question of a roster of sales, which the Victorian Buyers' Association has asked the Melbourne and Geelong Wool Brokers' Association to consider, with the object of arranging some workable scheme for the next selling season. Commenting thereon the "Age" remarked that there was not the slightest doubt that sooner or later a roster will have to be adopted for the Victorian sales, as, with the cutting up of large estates and consequent increase in the small medium clips, the catalogues were growing to such enormous lengths that it is becoming a physical impossibility, with the time at their disposal, for buyers to give to the whole of them the attention necessary, and which also growers look for. Indeed, had it not been for the relief we have had through the very excellent system of bunching together, or interlotting, of "star" lots of similar quality, some definite move in this direction would no doubt have been made by the buyers long before this. Again, since interlotting was adoptde, the number of small growers has so increased that it might be confidently stated the clientele of the several selling brokers in Melbourne and Geelong is to-day fully 100 per cent. more than it was ten years ago. With this growth in business the wools in each catalogue suitable for interlotting have had a corresponding increase, so that the staffs of the various brokers are working at very high pressure, in order to get their floors placed and catalogues published in the time available. It is felt, therefore, that something further should be done to relieve the strain all round.

MELBOURNE VERSUS GEELONG.

A joint conference of the trade was to have been held in Melbourne on Thursday last, and it was expected that some definite scheme would be propounded as a result of the conference. But it would seem that it is not merely the arranging of some good system for one selling centre that has to be provided for; but deciding how the days for selling in Melbourne and the day in Geelong shall be arranged during the weekly series. Referring to that aspect of the case the "Age" says that the "stumbling block in arranging for any scheme will undoubtedly be Geelong, as the buyers have intimated they do not wish to attend sales there any day in the week other than Thursday. If this be so, then some equitable arrangement will have to be made limiting the quantities to be offered in the two markets within a given time. As far as Melbourne is concerned in any scheme that may be adopted, it will be found that the intervals between the sales of each broker would vary from a period of eight to thirteen days, so that the question arises whether there should not be a maximum as well as a minimum limitation of offerings, which, again, would, of course, be governed by the floor space available by each broker." Apropos of this rivalry there is the old question of the wisdom of fallacy of increasing the wool markets. The general opinion is that centralisation is the better policy, but how to effect it once a market is established is the difficulty. Goldsbrough, Mort, and Company, Ltd., in their recently-issued annual review, stated that in their opinion, "the multiplication of markets in the Australian States is a regrettable feature of the trade. This can only have the effect of dividing the buying power, the concentration of which is decidedly to be desired. Selling on the ground is also to be deprecated for the same reason. Australian sales have in the past been built up on the policy of centralisation by keen enterprise, and at great cost, any departure therefrom being inimical to growers and a retrograde movement."

INTERSTATE MARKETS.

There has been an absence of auctions in the Commonwealth during the week. The last public sales were those held in Geelong on the 1st inst., when small catalogues were offered, and good clearances effected at current rates. The wools catalogued and sold in interstate markets for the season to date, compared to last season, are shown in the table as follows:—

BRADFORD TOPS.

According to our cable message of yesterday's date the Bradford top market was very firm. Sixty-four top improved ½d on last week's quotations. At the corresponding period last year merino tops were moving rapidly upward, showing an advance in price of 2½d in two months; on February 12, 1909, sixty-four tops were quoted at 24½d, and in April 27d; other merino qualities showing a similar rise. On April 9 the market was firm, with merinos ½d higher and crossbreds unchanged. Our comparative table of prices is as follows:—

February 11....	27½d	26½d	25¼d	17½d	15d
March 18......	28d	27¼d	26d	17½d	15
March 25......	28¼d	27¾d	26¼d	17¼d	15
April 8.......	28¼d	27¾d	26¼d	17¼d	15
1909.	Merinos. 64's.	Sup. 60's.	Com. 60's.	Crossbred. 46's.	40's.
February 12....	24½d	23½d	22½d	13½d	12½d
February 19....	24½d	23¾d	22¾d	13½d	12d
March 12......	25¾d	24½d	23¾d	14d	12½d
March 19......	26d	25d	24d	14d	12½d
March 26......	26¾d	25½d	24½d	14d	12½d
April 9.......	27d	26d	25d	14d	12½d

The "Observer," referring to the Bradford market on March 3 last, said that the market for raw material was exceedingly firm in tone, and the tendency as regards fine wools was certainly against the buyer. Some top makers advanced quotations ½d to ½d on merinos, but perhaps rather as a measure of protection, as all top makers were exceedingly pushed to supply customers on their present orders. In crossbreds the demand for 46's carded continued, but 40's prepared were still rather slow. Prices, however, are firm. In English wools there was no change. Some buying for America was recorded, but prices had not altered.

WOOL SHIPMENTS.

During the past week four vessels have cleared the Sydney Customs for the United Kingdom with an aggregate of 17,715 bales from this port, and 2606 bales of transhipped wool—a total export for the week of 20,321 bales. As the Federal Customs credits the transhipping port, and not the original port, with over-ocean consigned wool, the transhipments for statistical purposes are New South Wales exports. Including transhipments, therefore, with Sydney and Newcastle shipments for the current season, there has been an export of 853,737 bales, as compared with 862,023 bales, and a decrease of 8286 bales for the corresponding period last season. The vessels with quantities for the week and totals to date, are shown in the table as follows:—

	Bales.
Pera, April 1, for London	14,507
Wakool, April 4, for London	1,666

THE FARRER MEMORIAL FUND.

Mr. H. C. L. Anderson writes:—[illegible] behalf of the Farrer Memorial Fund committee I would ask you to allow me to appeal, through your columns, to all who are interested in the wheat-growing industry of this State, in order that the memory of the late William Farrer may be perpetuated in a worthy manner.

"You have so often referred to this distinguished citizen of New South Wales, and have so clearly explained the value of the work he has done, that I need say little about his claims to a public memorial. In brief, by patient research, conducted on true scientific lines, he created a considerable number of new varieties of wheat by a process of selection and cross-fertilisation. Some of these wheats are now world-renowned, and at least 12 of them are better in point of rust-resistance, richness in gluten, and average yield, than any of the imported wheats which they have already largely replaced.

"The Victorian Director of Agriculture has announced publicly that Federation, one of these wheats, added £250,000 to the value of the last Victorian wheat harvest. The champion prize given by South Australia for the best wheat has been won by 'Comeback,' another of the Farrer wheats. The other Australian States have likewise found them valuable for their conditions, and they have aroused great interest in Great Britain, the United States, and South Africa, where they are being tried by scientists, farmers, millers, and bakers.

"We may here commemorate the names of 18 of the best wheats bred by Mr. Farrer:—Bunyip, Comeback, Bayah, Firbank, Federation, Bobs, Thew, Florence, Nutcut, Rymer, Cleveland, John Brown, Jonathan, Cedar, Warren, Uppercut, Jumbuck, and Genoa.

"The committee which was appointed at a public meeting in 1908 has brought its proposal before many of the farmers and millers of New South Wales. This proposal aims at getting a sufficient sum of money, say £1000, the interest on which will be used to educate and train some lad—preferably a farmer's son—who shows special aptitude for this valuable work. We propose to give him one year's training at Wagga, Bathurst, or Cowra experiment farm, where he will learn the practical work connected with the selection, breeding, and growing of wheats, then send him to the Hawkesbury Agricultural College for three years' elementary training in the sciences underlying agriculture, and, finally, a four years' course at the University to enable him to take the degree of B.Sc. in Agriculture, where he will get a thorough training in the laboratory and classrooms in the advanced stages of the same sciences.

"I have lately, at the request of the committee, addressed an appeal to all the farmers of New South Wales through the columns of the "Agricultural Gazette," and this has reached 12,000 readers. I have also brought the matter specifically under the notice of every Farmers and Settlers' Association, every agricultural association, every bank and financial institution, every miller, and every person known to be particularly interested in the wheat-growing industry. The result has not been commensurate with the amount of trouble taken, and the fund to-day stands at only £330.

"Other proposals have been made for perpetuating the memory of this benefactor, but my committee feels certain that the scheme which is already before the public, and which has received the measure of support already mentioned, will commend itself to all men who wish the memorial to have a practical value. Above all, the committee feels sure the scheme would commend itself to Mr. Farrer himself, who would naturally wish to see a series of clever young men educated in due succession to take up the work which was so dear to his heart, and which can be carried to still greater perfection in the interests of our wheat-growers.

"The committee will be glad to bring the matter to a definite issue at an early date, and would, therefore, ask all approving of the movement to send in their subscriptions promptly to myself, by whom they will be publicly acknowledged."

A meeting of the committe of the above fund was held on Saturday, the chair being occupied by Mr. H. C. L. Anderson, under-Secretary of Agriculture. Owing to the death of the hon. secretary, Mr. H. E. Allen, last year, Mr. G. W. Walker was elected to fill the position.

Mr. P. H. Morton moved,—"That Mr. Walker be asked to write or call on all persons who had promised donations, and to collect same as quickly as possible." Mr. W. Cope suggested that the hon. secretary write to the large wheat-growers for subscriptions, and Mr. H. C. L. Anderson reported that, as a result of his special appeal through the "Agricultural Gazette," nearly £45 had already been subscribed. It was also recommended that the committee be reduced, as it was expensive writing to so many who never attended the meetings. According to the balance-sheet produced nearly £350 has been collected, and at present stands to the credit of the fund. A further £100 odd has been promised. It was decided to ask the daily papers to publish the names of subscriptions as received, so as wheat-growers and other interested could see how the fund was growing.

MINIMBAH ESTATE.

MINISTER FOR AGRICULTURE INSPECTS.

SINGLETON.—The Minister for Agriculture (Mr. John Perry) inspected Minimbah Estate, the property of Mr. Sylvester Browne, during the week. In the course of an interview, the Minister said:—"The proposition is whether the Government should resume the Minimbah Estate for the purposes of closer settlement. The Government has not dealt with the matter so far, which will have to be considered by Mr. Moore (Secretary for Lands) before any definite step can be taken. In a case such as this, where the estate is highly improved, the department has first to consider whether the improvements would prove of value for the purposes for which the property is acquired. If the improvements could not be utilised, it would be doubtful whether it would be wise for the Government to resume. We have a system of experimental plots, and Mr. Sylvester Browne has offered us the use of some land, to establish one of these plots, free of charge. Under this system we take 10, 20, or 30 acres and plant them out as our expert may decide, after analysing the soil to be cultivated. In addition to placing the plot at our use free of charge, the owner does the necessary ploughing, harrowing—in fact, all the working of the soil, and we find the manure and seeds. He does all the work of cultivation, and the department pays him the cost of it. When the crops are harvested, the owner takes two-thirds of the yield, the department retaining one-third. This is the arrangement under which Mr. Browne has agreed to let us have a plot on Minimbah. The plot is for the purpose of demonstrating in a practical way that the methods advised by the department are better than the old methods still used by many farmers. Agriculturists in the district can judge results better when they see crops growing under our methods as to what possibilities the use of scientific cultivation of the soil contains. They know the exact cost of the work, for it is done under their eyes, and they can form their own opinions as to the result and profit of the yield. Mr. Valder will come up here shortly from the department to look at the estate, select a plot, and plant it out. I shall recommend that the Advisory Board should come and look over the estate and report on it. Everything depends on the price as to the suitability of Minimbah for closer settlement."

MORTALITY AMONG STOCK.

COONAMBLE.—Several valuable horses recently died at Ningie Creek district from eating pig melon. The melon forms itself into a hard ball in the intestines. Mr. E. W. Proctor, stock inspector, states that there is no cure for attacked horses, and advises removal from any paddock in which pig melon grows. Sheep and cattle are not injured by it. Several sheep have died here from a flock of about three thousand, which recently arrived from Riverina. The stock inspector (Mr. Proctor) and veterinary surgeon (Mr. Doyle) from Sydney made several post-mortem examinations, but have been unable to determine the cause. The stock inspector has sent specimens of some of the diseased organs to the head office for examination. The disease at present seems to be a mysterious one.

CLOSER SETTLEMENT.

GOSFORD.—Business at the local Crown Lands Office shows a marked increase compared with the figures of previous years, indicating that settlement in and around Gosford is steadily proceeding. Several large estates have been subdivided and sold in farming blocks, and where a few years ago there was nothing but dense forest the selector has cleared a living area, and has built a home, cropping the land with maize, etc. Over Mangrove way fruit experiments have been profitably carried out, and additional areas of land applied for. It is generally conceded that the prospects of Gosford and district were never brighter than at present.

MEETINGS OF FARMERS.

DUNGOG.—At the annual meeting of members of the Underbank branch of the Farmers and Settlers' Association, the treasurer's statement showed a credit balance on the year's work of £1 2s. The election of officers resulted:—President, Mr. Jas. Rumbel; vice-president, Mr. S. E. Whitehouse; treasurer, Mr. A. Edwards; secretary, Mr. J. R. Fulton. It was decided that a petition asking that a bridge be erected over the Williams River at Funnybrick crossing be forwarded to the Minister for Works through the member for the district. It was also resolved to communicate with the chairman of the Pastures' Protection Board, requesting that the bonus for dingo scalps be raised to £1, the present price of 5s being no inducement to destroy the pest.

DAIRYING.

DUNGOG.—During the month of March the output at the Dungog Co-operative Butter Factory was 34 tons 10cwt 89lb, for which suppliers were paid cheques amounting to £1725, the prices paid being 11 1-8d for first-class, 10¼d for A1, and 10d for second-class on Sydney market rates of 104s per cwt.

MUDGEE.—During March 64,322lb of cream was received at the Mudgee Dairy Company's factory. From this 31,648lb of butter was manufactured. The prices paid for superfine butter ranged from 96/ to 104/. The manager of the district butter factory complains that butter recently despatched by him to Sydney and Peak Hill occupied nearly four days on the journey. At a meeting of the Farmers and Settlers' Association the following motion was carried:—"That in the opinion of the association it is desirable that the Railway Commissioners be urged to afford facilities for the shipment of produce from suitable ports in the north of the State to relieve the congestion at present existing in the railway service." The motion was placed on the agenda paper for the next conference of the association.

TAMWORTH.—The directors of the butter factory have decided to give a ½d per lb bonus to all suppliers during the months of December, January, and February, from profits arising out of butter shipped to London during those months. The bonus amounts to £250.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETIES.

WINGHAM.—All arrangements in connection with the forthcoming show are now well-nigh complete, and it is confidently expected that it will be one of the most successful ever held on the Manning.

PASTURES BOARDS.

ARMIDALE.—At the monthly meeting of the Armidale Pastures' Protection Board, held on Thursday, the bank balance was shown as £1076 to credit. The prevalence of Noogora burr was notified, especially in Walcha and Bundarra districts. The board regretted that the power of eradicating noxious weeds could not be transferred from shire councils to P.P. Boards. Mr. R. H. Williams was appointed acting stock inspector at Reedy Creek, and Mr. A. Menzies at Black Mountain, for issuing travelling stock permits. The rabbit inspector's report was received, showing that people were trying to help in the destruction of rabbits. He also produced a number of rabbits' livers affected by disease, from the Guy Fawkes district, which the officer stated to be liver rot, and nearly all the half-grown rabbits in that district were found to be affected.

MOSS VALE.—At the last meeting of the Berrima District Pastures' Protection Board, Mr. John A. Badgery, president, in the chair, the stock inspector, Mr. E. A. Hamilton, reported that pastures throughout the district are in good order, and there is a fair prospect for the winter. Stock are in good condition, but there has been a further outbreak of pleuro pneumonia among a small lot of cattle. The affected animals have been slaughtered, and the balance of the herd quarantined. Owing to the good growth of grass over most parts of the district conditions are not favourable for poisoning, and not much is being done, but a good deal of trapping is carried on with good results. Persons throughout the district were complying with orders given by the board. A letter was received from the chief inspector of stock stating that the board had not power to expend money in erecting a drinking trough for sheep and cattle as the law now stands, but that amendment of the P.P. Act so as to permit of P.A. Board expending their funds in carrying out any such work as suggested by the board under the approval of the Minister, is contemplated.

SINGLETON.—At the monthly meeting of the Pastures Protection Board, Mr. J. C. Mayne reported that, with Messrs. Clarke and Pankhurst, he had waited on the Minister in reference to the payment of the stock inspector's salary and the abolition of the board. The Minister admitted that some part of the salary should be paid by the department, and he hoped that some relief could be granted. The report was adopted. The secretary submitted the estimate of probable amount required for the effective administration of the Pastures Protection Acts in the district from April 1, 1910, to June 30, 1911. The estimated expenditure was placed at £611, including £518 for salaries. The amount available to meet the above would be £101, leaving £509 to be raised by rate. A rate of 1½d per head on 70,600 large stock would yield £441, and a rate of 1s 9d per 100 on 68,777 sheep would yield £60, giving a total of £501. The chairman said that the collection of the rate would leave them about £8 short, but he did not think that the expenditure could be cut down. The estimates were adopted, and the rates fixed accordingly.

YASS.—The Yass P.P. Board have struck a rate of 2d per head on large stock, and ½d per head on sheep.

DISTRICT ITEMS.

ALBURY.—The vintage has just been completed at several large vineyards, J. D. Lankaster, Emu Park, Ettomogah, and G. Frere, of Sainte Hilaire, report that the dry weather preceding the vintage injuriously affected the yields. The return is at least one-third below last year's total. The March rains came too late to be of much service.

GULGONG.—The weather continues very dry, no rain having fallen for over a month. Grass is wearing off quickly, and the winter prospects are not too bright. All ploughing has been suspended, for the land is too hard. At Goolma, however, 20 miles from here, ploughing is in full swing. They have been more favoured with rainstorms than here. As cattle and sheep are in good condition, there being an abundance of good grass, most of the landowners are endeavouring to buy stock to eat off their surplus feed. At Mundooran also the majority are busy ploughing. Some have sown wheat, which in a few cases is showing above ground.

YASS.—Mr. H. Somner, of Jeir, brought to Yass a consignment of 8500 rabbitskins. These were poisoned in two months by Mr. Somner and his brother, at Spring Range, with strychnine and jam. At 1s per pound the proceeds of the sale will reach over £50. Last season Mr. C. Crochier paid £2000 for rabbit carcases. The maize crops are now ripe, and some big yields are expected from the Murrumbidgee and Goodradigbee rivers.

Good Dairymen
know good fodder.

MR. FRANCIS CAMPBELL, Dairyman, Petersham, states:—
"Even with ordinary fodder at low prices I find Sunlight Oil Cake for milk production will pay me best."

MR. J. WHITEHURST, Premier Dairy, Waterloo, writes:—
"I consider Sunlight Oil Cake a splendid milk producer, both for quantity and quality, and the cows take to it readily."

MR. A. COOPER, Champion Dairy, Waterloo, states:—
"My customers appreciate the rich cream milk produced from my cattle when fed with Sunlight Oil Cake.

MR. A. J. TAYLOR, Dairyman, Lilydale, Victoria, writes:—
"I am pleased to be able to speak very favourably of my experience so far with the Sunlight Oil Cake you sent me as a food for milking cows. I have noticed a very marked improvement in the yield of my herd since I began using it. The cows took to it readily from the first day, and do not waste a particle of it. Before giving it a trial I was inclined to doubt whether it possessed the merits claimed for it, but after my experience, I am quite prepared to admit that it is a very valuable fodder for milking cows. Used in connection with bran and ensilage, I know of no other food which will give such good results. I shall continue to make use of it myself, and shall have much pleasure in recommending it to others."

Mrs. Eather, of Newtown, Sydney, writes:—

"I don't know of any soap to equal 'Sunlight' for washing clothes, especially colored clothes and flannels. It is the only soap I know that you can use with serge clothes. It takes all the white stuff out of the serge and leaves the cloth when dry of a bright even color like new. Other soaps which I have used for serge leave whitish streaks and patches."

"Sunlight Soap does not in any way hurt the hands: indeed it seems to improve them."

SOCIAL.

The Easter gaieties were continued in a somewhat modified way all through the past week, and an unusually large number of country visitors prolonged their stay in the metropolis. Dances, dinners, garden parties, theatre parties, and picnics have been the order of the day, and the time was passed by quickly. Next week promises to be almost as gay, so that no one can complain of dullness. The weather is so beautiful just at present, with the autumnal touch in the early morning and evening, that all outdoor entertainments are especially enjoyable.

His Excellency the Governor and Lady Chelmsford came down to town several times during the week to attend public and social engagements, but have returned to their country residence at Sutton Forest until the alterations and repairs at the State Government House, Cranbrook, Rose Bay, are completed.

His Excellency the Governor presided at the annual general meeting of the directors of the Royal Prince Alfred Hospital on Thursday, and subsequently presented the prizes to the nurses who had successfully passed their examinations. At the conclusion of the meeting afternoon tea was served, and a very large number of visitors entertained by the matron and the nurses. Sir James Fairfax and Miss Fairfax, Senator J. T. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Dibbs, Professor Anderson Stuart, Mr. and Mrs. Kater, Mrs. Michaelis, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Cohen, Colonel Macarthur Onslow, Sir James Graham, and Rev. J. Ferguson were amongst those noticed on the platform and in the seats reserved in front.

Lady Chelmsford presided at the annual meeting of the National Council for Women, held in the Town Hall on Thursday afternoon.

On Thursday evening the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress of Sydney (Alderman and Mrs. Allen Taylor) invited between 60 and 70 guests to meet his Excellency the Governor and Lady Chelmsford at dinner at the Town Hall. The entertainment passed off with the greatest success, and the evening proved most enjoyable. The guests were received by the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress, and subsequently presented to the Governor and Lady Chelmsford. Dinner was served in one of the Lord Mayor's rooms, the guests being seated at nine small round tables, each decorated with beautiful flowers—cactus dahlias and autumn leaves, in exquisite shades and colourings—which had been sent to the Lady Mayoress by Mr. R. M. Pitt from Wentworth Falls. Music was contributed throughout the evening by an orchestra, and the only toast honoured was that of "The King." Lady Chelmsford wore a handsome dress of black chiffon velvet with a short overdress of black sequined lace, the cross-over bodice being brightened with white net and crystal and silver bugle trimming, and diamond ornaments, and she also wore a diamond necklet and pendant and small tiara. The Lady Mayoress was in aluminium grey satin charmeuse, made en Princesse, and trimmed with grey and gold embroideries and gold fringe, the grey chiffon sleeves laced across with narrow black velvet ribbon; her ornaments included a beautiful opal and diamond necklace and other opal and diamond jewellery. Lady Poore's rich ivory satin brocade had the bodice draped with beautiful old lace, a touch of colour being given by the corsage, bouquet of blue flowers worn at the waist, and blue flowers in her hair, and a handsome diamond and aquamarine pendant. Mrs. Cullen wore white satin charmeuse veiled with black figured net, relieved with fuchsia red bows of velvet on the bodice. Mrs. Wright's turquoise blue chiffon taffeta had an overdress of cream lace. Mrs. Rolleston was in white satin charmeuse, with black lace effectively arranged in tunic effect over the bodice and skirt. Lady Suttor's black satin was draped with black lace, and the bodice ornamented with steel and jet beaded trimming. Lady Simpson also wore black, her dress being of sequined net over satin with touches of gold. Lady MacMillan, cream figured taffeta, with handsome lace bertha. Mrs. T. F. Knox, black satin, with jewelled embroidery on the bodice. Mrs. W. Chisholm, cream satin charmeuse with silver beaded net tunic, and blue topaz ornament. Mrs. Swan-Frazer, black sequined net, with diamond necklet and earrings. Mrs. Anderson Stuart, black chiffon velvet, with bertha of Brussels lace and diamond ornaments. Mrs. Kelso King, saxe blue satin charmeuse, with ninon tunic and gold embroideries. Miss Verney, eau-de-nil satin charmeuse with soft cream lace on the bodice. Miss Eadith Walker, heliotrope satin charmeuse, with long panel back and front of heliotrope embroidered net, and diamond ornaments. Mrs. Nesbit, mole-coloured satin charmeuse, with touches of blue and gold. Mrs. Layton, white satin, with gold embroideries. Mrs. Sly, black lace over white. Mrs. G. Sly, gold tissue and net over cream satin charmeuse. Many other beautiful dresses were worn. After dinner an adjournment was made to the rooms set apart for the use of the Lady Mayoress, where coffee was served.

Archbishop Wright has received many congratulations upon his election to the Primacy of Australia, and preached his first sermon as Primate in St. Andrew's Cathedral last Sunday. The Archbishop and Mrs. Wright have taken up their residence at the Deanery, and Mrs. Wright will be "at home" to visitors next week on April 12, 13, and 14.

Last Saturday evening the Theatre Royal was crowded from floor to ceiling with a most enthusiastic audience to witness the performance of "Madam Butterfly." His Excellency the Governor-General, accompanied by Georgina Countess of Dudley, was present, and a large party from Government House, including Captain and Mrs. Hore Ruthven, Miss Bosanquet, the Hon. Mrs. Malcolm, Miss Bingham, Hon. Jacob Astley, Captain Gilliat, and Mr. Callan. The Vice-Regal party occupied two boxes and several seats in the stalls. Georgina Lady Dudley wore a handsome silver grey satin, with beautiful pearl and diamond ornaments, and a pearl and diamond tiara, and was presented with a lovely bouquet by the management. Miss Amy Castles was the singer of the title role that evening, and the audience was charmed and delighted with her splendid rendering of the beautiful yet most difficult music. As Madam Butterfly she wore a beautiful kimono of gold tissue over apricot-coloured satin as her wedding dress, and later in yellow satin, exquisitely embroidered, her white one of crede de chine also being handsomely embroidered.

Madame Bel Sorel, who is a most finished artist, and delights her audiences, takes the part of "Madam Butterfly" alternately with Miss Amy Castles, and wears for her wedding dress a handsome kimono of black satin, beautifully embroidered in gold, and an upstanding wreath of pink cherry blossoms in her hair. Later she appears in one of white satin and in the second act in a beautiful kimono of crepe-de-chine shading from green to heliotrope, and embroidered with trails of wistaria.

The annual service in connection with the Mothers' Union was held in St. Andrew's Cathedral on Tuesday afternoon, when the Archbishop of Sydney gave a most eloquent address to the large attendance of members. After the service an adjournment was made to the basement of the Town Hall, where afternoon tea was served. Lady Chelmsford, who takes a great interest in the Mothers' Union, was amongst those present; also Mrs. Wright, Mrs. H. C. Dangar, Mrs. Christian, Miss Macarthur Onslow, Mrs. Hay-Sharp, Mrs. Radford, Mrs. King, Mrs. G. Airey, Mrs. MacCallum, Mrs. C. B. Stephen, Mrs. S. Christian, Mrs. Barff, Mrs. Carlton, Mrs. Bulmore, and Miss Christian.

Lady Poore, who returned from Adelaide early in the week, has again taken up her residence at Admiralty House, and on Tuesday afternoon presided at the public meeting held in the Town Hall in connection with the Bush Book Club. Lady Poore was accompanied by Mrs. Wesche and Miss Mackellar, and gave a bright and interesting address, which has already been noticed in our columns. If those who have books and papers to spare will send them to Mrs. Withers, the secretary, in the Equitable-building, they will be gratefully received, and will be much appreciated by those living far away in the bush.

Lady Reid, who leaves for England in R.M.S. Otway next week to join Sir George Reid in London, was the guest of honour at the delightful garden party given by the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress of Sydney (Alderman and Mrs. Allen Taylor) at their residence, Woolton, Darlinghurst, last Wednesday afternoon.

We have been requested to state that the Lady Mayoress will hold a reception in her rooms at the Town Hall early in May.

Last Monday evening a most enjoyable dance was given by Lady Gould at her residence, Eynesbury, Edgecliff, in honour of Miss Rowan, a Melbourne visitor, the guest of Lady Gould during the Easter festivities. The grounds were illuminated with Chinese lanterns, and the ballroom with flags and greenery. The latter has been extended on to the verandah, so that the dancing is practically enjoyed in the open air, and was much appreciated by the enthusiastic young guests. Sir Albert and Lady Gould received their friends in the drawing-room, the hostess wearing a handsome dress of black crepe de chine relieved with gold embroidery. Miss Gould was in white and black striped ninon over white; Miss Gladys Gould in pale pink and green floral chiffon; and Miss Rowan wore black jet embroidered satin charmeuse. Amongst others present were:—Miss Bosanquet, Miss Bingham, Captain and Mrs. Verney, Miss Verney, Miss Dorothy Gore, Miss Vera Moore, Miss Phipps (Brisbane), Miss Valerie Willis, Miss Muriel Dangar, the Misses Anderson, the Misses Madden, Miss Lorna Robinson, Miss MacCallum, Miss May Campbell, Miss Walwyn Laidley, Miss Edith Holdship, Miss P. Raymond, the Misses Griffiths, Miss Fanning, Miss R. Milne, Sir Alexander Napier, Hon. Jacob Astley, and Messrs. C. Weigall, P. Robinson, Callan, C. Manning, L. Stephen, S. Dowling, H. Gilchrist, K. Bennett, W. Jones, Salway, Simpson, R. Greene, C. Mort, Hardy, R. Friend, H. Morris, C. Pitcher, Montague Stephen, and G. Innes.

The matinee performances of "Florodora" to be given by Mrs. J. C. Williamson in aid of the Royal Alexandra Hospital for Children, and the Hospice for the Dying, Darlinghurst, will take place at Her Majesty's Theatre on Monday and Tuesday afternoons. As the hospitals are at present in urgent need of funds to carry on the work, those interested in the sick and suffering will help to lessen the financial burden by purchasing tickets for these matinees. The performance will be unique, and the cast is composed of about 150 children, a great proportion of whom have been picked from the juvenile performers in the "Aladdin" pantomime. The Governor-General has given his patronage for the performance on Monday.

The Norland ball in aid of the Loan Training Fund is to take place in the Town Hall on Tuesday next. Gallery attractions are being provided by Mrs. Harry Rickards, and will include items by Misses Leete, Vaude and Verne, Mr. Allan Shaw, and many other members of the Tivoli Vaudeville Company. At the last committee meeting satisfactory reports were received, and everything points to a successful ball on Tuesday.

At the invitation of Mrs. W. Percy Faithfull a number of ladies met at her residence, the Monastery, Neutral Bay, on Wednesday last for the purpose of assisting the Royal Alexandra Hospital for Children by ensuring the continuance of the present cot in the hospital, annually provided for by the residents of Neutral Bay, and if possible to initiate a movement to secure the endowment of a second cot in the interests of the Ministering Children's League of that suburb. Mr. Faithfull and Mr. Pratt addressed the meeting, and as a result of the gathering it was decided to form a ladies' auxiliary at Neutral Bay. The following office-bearers were elected:—President, Mrs. North Ash; hon. secretaries, Mrs. Coxon and Miss M. Bennett; hon. treasurer, Miss Goddard; and the following committee, all of whom were present at the meeting:—Mrs. Faithfull, Mrs. Furber, the Misses Davy, Mrs. Claude Phillips, Mrs. Dodds, Mrs. Ross, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Wilshire, Mrs. A. W. Hyman, Mrs. Munce, Mrs. Green, Mrs. Olav Pauss, Mrs. Ninian Thomson, Miss Hetherington. The meeting was held on the lawn, where afternoon tea was served.

Mrs. Davenport was one of the hostesses during the week, and gave an enjoyable dance at her residence, Darling Point, on Tuesday evening.

A Melbourne correspondent writes that "the hats which are worn in the racecourse scene of 'The Arcadians,' now being played in Melbourne, are replicas of those worn in Paris, copied from the remarkable play 'Chantecler,' by Rostand, which has caused such a sensation. Four of these hats cost £50, without including the duty. They are wonderful to look at, and resemble a complete bird perched on the lady's head. One is a huge white hen, another a rooster. There is also a magnificent owl, a pheasant, and other birds. These are all complete with feathers, heads, and tails. They will be seen in Sydney when "The Arcadians" is staged. In Melbourne they have created a sensation.

The marriage of Mr. Herbert Percy Willis, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. V. J. Willis, of Melbourne, with Miss Phyllis Mary Laidley Mort, fifth daughter of the late Mr. Laidley Mort and of Mrs. Laidley Mort, Vectis, Double Bay, was solemnised by the Rev. P. B. Kennedy, O.F.M., at St. Joseph's Church, Woollahra, on Tuesday last, April 5. COMPLEXION TREATMENTS.

MLLE. RUBINSTEIN'S SPECIAL SUGGESTIONS FOR AUTUMN AND WINTER.

It is not the easiest of tasks to take care of the skin during the autumn and winter, unless it has been intelligently safeguarded during the summer. But if you have failed to do this, and are now willing to pay the reasonable price of vigilance for a good complexion, you must observe these rules.

Firstly, Valaze should be used nightly to preserve, feed, and nourish the skin. Then great care and protection should be given the skin before venturing out into the cold. For this purpose the Novena Sunproof and Windproof Creme will prove very effective, so that the dust, wind, and biting cold will be powerless to harm the most delicate skin.

When returning home the face should be cleansed with Novena Cerate, which will clear and smooth the skin, smooth its texture, and give it freshness, purity, and transparency. Under the influence of these preparations the skin remains proof against wrinkles and roughness.

A most important matter is to guard against flushing of the nose and face during the cold weather. Fortunately, those who suffer from this unsightly affection can now obtain relief and moderation of these flushing outbreaks by the use of the Valaze Liquidine. The nose should be rubbed roughly with a pledget of wool, moistened with Liquidine. This preparation re-establishes the circulation, and acts as a means of protection against the effect of the cold. Valaze Liquidine in bottles, 8/6, 6d postage.

The lips should also be given attention. The outer membrane must be protected against the cold winds, and for this purpose the Valaze Lip Lustre is excellent. It also adds a natural colour, which cannot be displaced by biting or wetting. 2/ and 3/.

Following these simple rules, you will be delighted with the conditions of the skin during the winter. To further help you when in doubt, send for Beauty in the Making, Mlle. Rubinstein's treatise on beauty, it will tell you all you want to know and should know about scientific and competent care of the complexion.

Valaze in jars, 3/6 and 6/6, 6d postage. Novena Cerate, 2/ and 3/6. Sunproof Creme, 2/ and 3/6.

BOOT TRADE.

THE MEN'S CASE.

STATEMENT BY THE SECRETARY.

INDUSTRY HIGHLY PROTECTED.

The subject of the boot trade award was referred to yesterday by Mr. David Johnstone, secretary of the New South Wales Branch of the Australian Boot Trade Employees' Federation. He said:—

"For many years the general conditions of the boot industry have been very poor, as far as the employees were concerned. Whenever the employees tried to get better conditions in each State they were met with the cry that it would be unfair to alter the conditions unless the same conditions could be brought about in the other States. In this way the wages were always kept at a low standard, and the industry was swamped by boy labour. The matter was brought to a definite climax when, about two years ago, the New South Wales branch of the union obtained a public inquiry before the Arbitration Court. There again the manufacturers in New South Wales made a statement that while better conditions might be granted, it should only be when the same improvements were made in other States. In giving judgment in that case Judge Heydon stated openly that he would like to raise the wages to 9s per day and put fair restrictions on boy labour, but he could not do so because of the competition with other States in which the wage standards were lower than 9s, and there was an unlimited employment of boys.

"The Sydney employers have again and again urged our union to try to get a Federal award, as otherwise the industry could not be put on a fair basis. The same thing happened in all the other States. In Victoria, when the men asked for better wages, they were told by the board that because of the wage standard being lower in New South Wales they could not raise their wages. The South Australian and Queensland boards took the same attitude. The union was therefore compelled to refer its matter to some Court which could disregard State boundaries. After a hard struggle which has been going on for over 12 months, we succeeded in getting an award. This award accepts Judge Heydon's minimum wage of 9s a day, and provides reasonable regulation of apprentices, fixing the proportion as one boy to every two men, with a certain quantity of off hand labour, which does not count in the proportion. Many of the employers in all the States are quite favourable to the regulation of apprentices which has been made by the Judge, and some of them stated openly in court that they thought the trade was being spoiled by the undue use of boys. Judge Higgins during the case strongly commented on the system which had grown up of abusing apprenticeship indentures. Boys were indentured to some simple process which could be learned in a few days, and kept at it for five or six years. They were then discharged and thrown on to the labour market, and other boys taken on in their places. The great question all through the case was how could a proper system of apprenticeship be found which should not be too harsh on the employers, but at the same time would guarantee that all apprentices should be genuine, and would give the boy a right of learning a decent trade, which would be of some value to him.

"The Court divided the trade into about seven conditions, and ordered apprenticeship to one of these seven. We contend that the system can be adopted by the employers.

"In reference to the Judge bringing the award into operation at once we are advised that Judge Higgins could do nothing else. His function was to settle the dispute, and he had nothing else to do but settle the actual matters in dispute between the parties. As soon as he arrived at a decision in the dispute he simply gave his judgment in the dispute, and that judgment comes into operation without delay.

"Mr. Alderson and Mr. Louden did not state in their interview that a preliminary application for a common rule was made at once, and the union intends to push the matter until all persons in the Commonwealth are bound by the award.

"The figures also quoted by these two gentlemen are, I contend, misleading. The award covers fully 60 per cent. of the persons engaged in the industry, and we have no doubt that the common rule will be granted, and all persons in the industry brought under the award at an early date.

"Strange to say that, after having been told by manufacturers again and again to get a federal award, the leading members of the association now try to make it appear the interference of the Federal Court will ruin the industry. It will in the end make the industry. Progressive rates of wages have been fixed in all the States, which will during the operation of the award be brought up to the same standard. The industry is highly protected, and after all it is only asked to pay to bootmakers a wage of medium skilled artisans, namely 9s per day. We have tried all through these proceedings to obtain some fair agreement to cover the whole of the Commonwealth, but the employers have persistently refused and left it to the Court to determine on the evidence submitted. A vast number of the claims made by the union were rejected by the Court, and the wage fixed is not as high as it should be, although it undoubtedly will remove the difficulties arising from interstate competition, and put all the manufacturers on an equal footing."

APPEAL BY EMPLOYERS' ASSOCIATION.

A meeting of the Boot and Shoe Trade Employers' Association of New South Wales was held yesterday afternoon at the rooms of the Employers' Federation, Pitt-street. The president, Mr. A. Louden, occupied the chair. The business was the consideration of the appeal that is to be made to the High Court on Monday against the award of Mr. Justice Higgins. Arrangements were made by which New South Wales would be fully represented along with the other States.

A strong opinion was expressed that it would be impossible, on commercial grounds, to work according to the award; and, further, that the award did not relieve the employers of their obligations under the State boot trade award. The case before the Federal Arbitration Court came on for hearing last November, but certain points were reserved for the High Court. The High Court having disposed of those questions, Mr. Justice Higgins delivered his award last Monday, and it is against this award that the appeal is to be made.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

A meeting of boot manufacturers was held to-day to consider what action should be taken in view of the decision in the boot trade arbitration case. The committee, acting for the majority of the Victorian respondents in the case, presented a report explaining what counsel had advised to be the effect of the High Court judgment pronounced in Sydney on March 30. The principal points were:—Counsel considered that for several weighty reasons the Federal Court had no power to make its award a common rule in the industry. The report pointed out that the date fixed for the hearing of the preference and common rule applications is April 28, when all boot manufacturers, as well as the respondent firms, are entitled to be heard. Pending the proceedings, section 6 of the Commonwealth arbitration Act provides that "No person or organisation shall, on account of any industrial dispute, do anything in the nature of a lock-out or strike; penalty £4000." The manufacturers propose to apply to the High Court for a rule of prohibition.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I read with considerable surprise in your to-day's issue the first paragraph of a letter signed by Mr. W. J. D. Alderson, secretary of the Boot Manufacturers' Association, that the advanced wages were agreeable to all parties. As president of the association, and one of the respondents, and, speaking on behalf of the respondents, I must give this an emphatic denial. It was pointed out to Mr. Justice Higgins during the course of the trial, that if he increased wages to the extent he has he would open the door to increased importations, and thus greatly lessen the manufacture, and consequently decrease employment. At the same time this portion of the decision is not nearly so oppressive and impossible as the arbitrary apprenticeship clauses, and the general aspect of being subject to the control of both Federal and State industrial authorities, so that the lesser grievance has been comparatively lost sight of in our protest against the greater grievance indicated, and undoubtedly this is what Mr. Alderson had in his mind.

I am, etc.,
A. LOUDEN,
President N.S.W. Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' Association.

WILLIAMSON AND PHILLIPS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—By to-day's paper I notice that the persecution of these two men is still going on by a few rabid union men who seem to utterly fail to understand the meaning of the word unionism. Their conception of that word seems to imply that a man is bound body and soul to suit every little whim of the union leaders, and not to be allowed to think or act for himself in any way.

I wish to notify, through your valuable columns, the fact that the subscription list which has been opened on behalf of these two brave, but persecuted, men will close on the 23rd of this month.

I am, etc.,
J. M. ATKINSON.

PIANOLA ACHIEVEMENTS

IN 1909.

A GREAT industry revolutionised in a few short years—that, in brief, is the record of the PIANOLA Company.

In selecting the following incidents from a single year's activities, the purpose is to reflect something of the universal success of the PIANOLA Piano, to show how seriously it is regarded throughout the world, and to indicate how thoroughly it dominates its field.

The manufacture of pianos is one of the oldest and most substantial industries. It is now going through a process of wholesale reorganisation and readjustment to meet the changed conditions caused solely by the PIANOLA Piano's extraordinary success.

When the PIANOLA Piano was first announced it was the only instrument of its kind on the market. To-day, almost every piano importer is advertising some kind of an interior device for playing the piano. Each so-called Player-piano that appears is a direct and significant tribute to the PIANOLA Piano and the pioneer work of its manufacturers.

AUSTRALIA.

The Sydney Branch.

The fine three-storey building at 357 George-street, opposite the Post Office, is noted for its artistically-designed showrooms, and is rapidly becoming the favourite meeting place of the music-loving public of Sydney. Quite recently, in paying a visit to the showrooms of our Melbourne branch, Madame Melba expressed her appreciation of the artistic decorative scheme of our new showrooms there, and it was here she gave her final singing lessons to the past students of the University Conservatorium.

Australian Branches.

The PIANOLA COMPANY during the past fews years have maintained direct branch houses in Melbourne and Sydney. The growth of the Australian business has necessitated a further extension, and the new branches in Adelaide and Brisbane are the latest developments, signifying the enormous popularity of the Pianola Company's instruments in the Commonwealth. The new showrooms in Adelaide are admitted to be the most artistic in the South Australian capital.

Quite a feature of the Australian business is the immense library of Pianola and Orchestrelle music held by the different branches for use by their customers. A stock of 130,000 rolls is maintained.

Prominent Patrons.

In all countries the Pianola Company has received recognition from prominent personages, and early last year H.R.H. the Prince of Wales conferred a Warrant of Appointment on the Company.

In Australia history repeats itself, and it is significant that the following patrons have recognised the standard of the Pianola Company's instruments:—

His late Excellency the Marquis of Linlithgow, first Governor-General.
His Excellency the Earl of Dudley, Governor-General (at Adelaide Government House).
His Excellency Sir Frederick Bedford, late Governor West Australia.
His Excellency Sir Henry Barron, Governor of Tasmania.
His Excellency Sir John Madden, Lieutenant-Governor of Victoria.
His Excellency Rear-Admiral Bridges (late Commander-in-Chief Australian Naval Station).
His Excellency Captain Barton, C.M.G., New Guinea.
Right Hon. Sir George Reid, K.C.M.G., P.C., High Commissioner.
Right Hon. Sir George Turner, P.C., K.C.M.G.
Sir James Fairfax.
Dr. W. P. Cullen, Chief Justice, N.S.W.
Captain Neitenstein, ex-Comptroller-General of Prisons.
Mr. Justice Cohen.
Judge Heydon.
Judge Scholes.
Dr. C. A. Coghlan, K.C.
Hon. Dr. Mackellar, M.L.C.
Hon. L. F. Heydon.
And Many Others.

There are even those who prophesy that it is only a matter of a few years when the public will refuse to consider any piano that does not contain a Player.

Bear in mind that it is the PIANOLA Piano that has created these new conditions; that it was not the outcome of a sudden happy thought, but represents years of constant experimentation, of the evoluton of costly patents, and of the creation of an elaborate organisation trained to handle new and difficult problems.

It is unreasonable to expect that other manufacturers, who are suddenly compelled by the exigencies of competition to enter a new and untried field, can successfully dispute the PIANOLA Piano's pre-eminence, either artistically or commercially.

The reasons for the PIANOLA Company's supremacy in its field are fundamental. Its leadership is based upon merits not even approached in the musical industry of the world.

Appointment by Emperor William.

Early in the year a Royal Warrant of Appointment was issued by the German Emperor to the president of the Pianola Company. This distinguished honour followed the purchase of a Steck PIANOLA Piano by his Majesty two years previous. Ordinarily, a Royal Appointment is not issued sooner than five years after a purchase. That this distinction was awarded in so short a time is the best evidence of the complete satisfaction which the instrument has given to its distinguished owner. This recognition also indicates the high standing of the Pianola Company in a nation famous for its discrimination in all matters musical.

Private Pianola Recital ordered by the Queen of Spain.

On the occasion of a visit to Madrid by our Paris Manager, he was presented to the Infanta Isabelle, who herself showed him the Palace and her various works of art. The following day a special command was received to give a private recital with the PIANOLA for her Majesty the Queen of Spain, at the Madrid Royal Conservatoire. She attended with her entire suite, and, as this was her first visit to the Conservatoire, the ceremonies were most imposing. The Pianola Company had previously been given the Royal Appointment, as both of their Majesties are patrons. An additional honour was the decoration of the Order of Charles III., conferred upon the inventor of the Metrostyle.

Twenty-six Pianola Pianos with the American Battle Fleet.

The return of the American Fleet from its voyage around the world occurred early in the year. Aboard these ships were 26 PIANOLA Pianos. They had been put to the most extraordinary tests to which musical instruments have ever been subjected. The Battle Fleet covered over 45,000 miles in its trip, crossing the Equator four times. It passed from the extreme cold of the Straits of Magellan to the heat and humidity of the tropics. The instruments themselves were used, not only by one or two people, as would be the case in a private home, but were played by anywhere from a dozen to a hundred or more different individuals. Yet when the PIANOLA Pianos on these ships were examined, EVERY ONE was found in excellent playing condition. The result demonstrated in a conspicuous way the constructional superiority of the instrument, and had since led to many orders from other naval vessels.

Bavarian Royal Appointment.

In June, 1908, Prince Ludwig Ferdinand of Bavaria granted the Royal Appointment to the President of the Pianola Company. These Royal Appointments are naturally of greatest importance in the countries issuing them, but they are also of general interest as showing the world-wide supremacy of the PIANOLA.

M. Debussy's Recognition.

One of the latest of prominent musicians to interest himself in the PIANOLA is Claude Debussy, composer of "Pelleas" and "Melisande" and other successful operas.

M. Debussy, after careful investigation, gave a letter of endorsement, and has also Metrostyled his principal compositions. The significance of his approbation becomes apparent when it is known that, on the side of his personality, he is considered a conservative of the conservatives, the PIANOLA being the only musical instrument that he has ever endorsed.

Saint-Saens's Endorsement.

Unusual interest attaches to the endorsement of the PIANOLA by Saint-Saens, foremost of living French composers. Although M. Saint-Saens was a warm admirer of the Aeolian Pipe Organ, he had declined to investigate the PIANOLA, believing that it was very much like other instruments of the kind. But when he was finally induced to listen to the PIANOLA, he was quick to recognise its artistic character, and to admit that his former prejudice was based upon a total misconception of what the instrument actually is. M. Saint-Saens's present attitude may be best inferred from the fact that he has recently Metrostyled a number of his own compositions for the PIANOLA, and the rolls bear his autograph, certifying that he has personally made the interpretations.

New Pianola Hall for Berlin.

The Pianola Company has for many years maintained a direct branch in Berlin. The rapid growth of German business made necessary the opening of a much larger and finer home on Bellevue-Strasse. This new building contains a beautiful concert-hall, used not only for PIANOLA recitals, but also for concerts of chamber music and other high-class musical events. Although there are several Piano-players of German make, selling at 25 to 50 per cent. less, the PIANOLA enjoys just as commanding a lead in that country as here. The German branch numbers among its patrons a large proportion of the Royalty, nobility, and most distinguished personages of the German Empire.

An Appreciation from the Vatican.

A letter was received by the Manager of our Paris branch from Cardinal Merry del Val, expressing the great satisfaction of His Holiness Pius X. with the THEMODIST PIANOLA now in the Vatican. This official letter, under date of April 29, 1909, contained a direct reference to the leading position held by the Pianola Company in its field.

The Cardinal also took occasion to refer to the pleasure which the late Leo XIII. had derived from the Pianola Company's instruments.

Royal Pianola Audience

The Royalty and Aristocracy of Greece attended a special PIANOLA Recital given in Athens, at the residence of the Belgian Minister. The King, together with his four sons, and the full diplomatic body, were in attendance. Great interest was displayed in the instrument, particularly by the Crown Prince and Princess. Prince Cristophe himself played several rolls, to the great delight of the audience.

Largest Pipe Organ.

The Pianola Company has completed the largest Pipe Organ ever installed in a private home. It contains four manuals and 101 individual speaking stops, and was built to the order of F. G. Bourne, ex-Commodore of the New York Yacht Club, for his country home at Oakdale. Another notable Pipe Organ has been installed in the residence of the Duke of Westminster, Eaton-hall, Chester, England.

Austrian Emperor Becomes a Patron.

The Pianola Company had the honour of installing a Steck PIANOLA Piano in the Palace of his Imperial Majesty Francis Joseph, Emperor of Austria and King of Hungary. The order received from his Majesty was notable, not only because he is the ruler of a great nation, but also because he is a celebrated patron of music in its highest forms. The Vienna Opera and the Vienna Philharmonic Society, the most artistic institutions of their kind in all Europe, are conducted under his patronage.

ARNOTT'S MILK ARROWROOT BISCUITS.

INSTRUCTIONS HOW TO GIVE THE BISCUITS.

FOR VERY YOUNG CHILDREN.—Crush the biscuits to a powder, and, if possible, put through a very fine sieve. Take a well-heaped dessertspoonful of the powder, and gradually add half a cupful of boiling water, stirring at the same time. Then add half a cupful of fresh milk, and sweeten to taste. It is best to first sterilise the milk by placing a covered jug or other vessel containing the milk in a pot of water, and boil for half an hour. See that all vessels are kept scrupulously clean.

FOR OLDER CHILDREN.—Pour boiling water on the biscuits as they are, and give by spoon. A good way is to put a saucer over the cup or basin in which the biscuits are placed to soak, until they swell out, leaving no water. Later on children can have them either whole or soaked, at home or at school. They will be found a fattening, strengthening diet for young and old.

THE CHURCHES.

Preaching at the memorial service to the late Bishop Barry, in St. Andrew's Cathedral, on Wednesday last, the Primate (Dr. Wright) said: "What Bishop Barry did can have its counterpart in some measure in the life and work of each of us. It ought to have its counterpart. 'Other men laboured, ye are entered into their labours.' Let us gratefully acknowledge our debt to-day, as we leave God's servant in his well-earned rest. Let us take up the lesson that it holds out to us. The Church needs all—builders, organisers, generous givers of money and time and thought. The Churchmen of to-day will not fall short of her heritage of example. The Church is not moribund. The Church will not desert her post in the forefront of the battle. We go forward into the new ages ahead of us, strong by example of our predecessors, whose heirs we are."

On Saturday afternoon the little church of St. Oswald's at Haberfield was packed to the doors with clergy and laity for the ceremony of inducting Rev. Walter Newmarch to the curacy. The service was the first of the character presided over by the Archbishop since his election to the Primacy. The Archbishop duly licensed Rev. W. Newmarch to officiate.

Taking for his text Thessalonians I., ch. v., v. 12 and 13, "And we beseech you, brethren, to know them which labour amongst you and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you; and to esteem them very highly in love for their work's sake; and be at peace amongst yourselves," the Archbishop preached a stirring sermon in which he gave advice to the minister and his congregation. He hoped that the new sub-district would soon become a parish. The district was one of great promise, and was characteristic of the life of Sydney. The movement to secure a minister specially for the district spoke of the self-sacrificing hearts of the people who were bound together in the Spirit of God. It was a day of solemn and yet glad meaning, because it began not only a new semi-parochial life, but also a new ministry. The people of Haberfield owed much to their rector, Rev. A. Yarnold, for the work he and his assistants had accomplished, but now they had been set free to carry on work nearer to them. The new minister who would speak the Word of God to them was not for the day alone, but for the future as long as God willed. Their pastor had great qualities for the task assigned him. He had worked and learned in many spheres, and latterly in the shadow of the Cathedral. He advised the congregation to take him into their lives so that he might speak the message of his Master frequently with directness and simplicity. The responsibilities of both minister and congregation were great, but the promise was greater. He would remind the congregation that ministers were largely what the congregations made them. They expected great things by the power of the Spirit and great blessings, and they must accept their responsibilities in regard thereto. They would be working for the best of Masters—One who would never leave them wanting. A great ministry led up to the building up of God's Kingdom. With prayer together they could accomplish much, remembering the promise that when two or three were gathered together in His name there would God be with them. They should help their pastor to speak not the things they liked to hear, but what was true. It was well to encourage their pastor in his work by telling him when he was doing them good occasionally, so that his ministry should be one of joy. There was no need to be too fond of criticising, but they should look for the things that helped rather than the things that hindered. Since he had been here he had heard the remark frequently made, "We want a change." He would far rather hear them say that they wanted their minister to be one with them. Those who were always wanting something new were not helping to build the kingdom. Above all, they should pray for their pastor as he would pray for them. Looking back on his own ministry, he recalled an incident which had encouraged him more than anything else. It was when a mother told him that her little child had prayed for him.

The annual meeting of the parishioners of St. Matthew's, Holroyd, was held on Friday. Archdeacon Gunther presiding. A fairly good report of progress was presented. The church has been painted throughout with three coats of paint, the expense being paid by the Mayor of Merrylands. The annual meeting at St. Peter's, Burwood, was held on Wednesday.

The secretary of the Church Association in England (Captain Cobham) wrote to the Archbishop of Canterbury stating that three years had elapsed since the Royal Commission on Disorders in the Church reported the need of episcopal action to suppress Romish illegalities in the Church of England, but that nothing whatever had been done by any of the bishops, with the exception of the Bishops of Oxford and Newcastle. The Archbishop replied: "You will not, I think, be surprised if I say that the tone and character of the letter are such as to render it imposible for me, even apart from any other considerations, to correspond with you upon the matters about which you write."

The "Australasian Methodist Missionary Review" says that to-day there rings throughout the Methodist Church of Australasia "the loudest call to arms she has ever heard. At home, love of the world, of pleasure and of self abounds, while many social ills call for the immediate, persistent, and powerful intervention of all Christian people. Abroad, the non-Christian races are waking out of age-long sleep, and, unless their minds are directed in the way of peaceful Christian principles, distress and trouble such as the world has not seen for many centuries await the nominal Christian world, and we in this land of the south cannot escape our share of the common burden and pain."

There was a crowded congregation at the Glebe Presbyterian Church on Monday night, when the Rev. Dr. Frank W. Dunlop, late of Invercargill (N.Z.), was inducted into the pastoral oversight of the congregation. The Moderator of the Sydney Presbytery (the Rev. C. A. White) presided. The sermon was preached by the Rev. W. H. MacQueen. The Rev. Scott West, of Burwood, delivered an impressive address to the minister, while the Rev. J. H. M'Gowan, of Ashfield, counselled the congregation as to its duty to the minister. At the conclusion of the ceremony, which was impressive, the newly inducted minister received the right hand of fellowship from his brethren in the presbytery, and later from the congregation. On Friday evening a welcome meeting was held, which was largely attended. Dr. Dunlop succeeds the Rev. Dr. Clouston as minister of the Glebe Church.

THE LIQUOR QUESTION.

HALF AMERICA TEETOTAL.

A GREAT ANTI-ALCOHOL CONGRESS.

VISIT OF MRS. HARRISON LEE-COWIE.

"If the five millions sterling, wasted annually in New South Wales on liquor, were spent on irrigating the land instead, what an increased prosperity we should experience."

This rather pertinent sentence came almost in the form of an exclamation from Mrs. Harrison Lee-Cowie, the much-travelled temperance advocate and orator, who arrived on Friday morning from the south. Mrs. Cowie, who is a native of Australia, intends to work in New South Wales right on till the local option poll is taken. "I do hope we win no-license in some of the electorates," said the visitor; "then the people could experience for themselves the benefits of abstinence." And as the lady talked it was evident that she was an enthusiast. She spoke of the work in America, in New Zealand, in Europe, and other parts of the world, and interpolated incident with argument in a manner which gave promise of a very interesting platform presence. But Mrs. Cowie is no stranger to Sydney, having lectured here with much acceptance on two previous occasions. Since her last visit to these shores she has been practically all over the world. In America she found the most up-to-date anti-liquor crusade, and as a result 41 million people, or half the population of the United States, were enjoying the blessings of no-license. In New Zealand 12 out of the 70 electorates voted for prohibition, and the drink bill has dropped 4s 5d per head all over the Dominion. The progress of Invercargill had been phenomenal since it decided for no-license. Numbers of splendid buildings had been erected, and business was flourishing. Although there was a population of 12,000 people the lockups were often absolutely empty. With 12,000 people ceasing to waste their earnings on drink, the money was diverted into legitimate business channels.

"The brewers say that there is more drink in no-license areas," continued the reformer. "Then why fight against no-license if it increases their trade? I went to a police-constable in Ashburton and asked permission to visit the prisoners, and the constable replied, 'Why, we haven't had a soul in gaol for six weeks.'"

Although deploring the alliance between the Conservative party and the trade, and regretting the influence of titled brewers and distillers, Mrs. Cowie spoke hopefully of the mother country. The Budget was a great power for reform, and arrests for drunkenness had decreased considerably. In many districts there was total prohibition by the will of the landlords. While at home Mrs. Cowie attended as the representative of Australia the great anti-alcohol congress, at which were 1200 delegates from all over the world. The Duke of Connaught was president, and the British Government gave a great banquet, the first of its kind without intoxicants. The Crown Prince and Princess came across from Sweden. Madam Helenius, one of the Finnish members of Parliament, represented Finland, and leading doctors and scientists came from all over the world. Labour leaders and large employers dealt with the question from the viewpoint of the physical and mental efficiency of the men.

Reverting to Sydney, Mrs. Cowie said that the local forces would have the valuable assistance of Mrs. Barton, a city councillor of Glasgow. Mrs. Cowie herself was going to lecture in as many centres as possible, delivering in each district a special lecture on "The Brides of Many Nations," with special music and costumes.

WESTERN HONEY OUTPUT.

REMARKABLE FALLING OFF.

FOOD SUPPLIES DIMINISHING.

Early in the season merchants in Sussex-street received information that the output of Western honey this year would be much smaller than last year. They have, therefore, been endeavouring to secure consignments as early as possible, as a good demand exists for this class of honey not only in New South Wales, but in Victoria and Tasmania also. In nearly every case their efforts have been unsuccessful, and now the stocks are very low. From the North Coast and Northern line honey is coming forward plentifully, but it is much poorer in quality. The bulk of it sells at about 2d to 2½d per lb, 3d being a very good price.

The reason, however, has now been ascertained as to why there has been such a falling-off in the supply of our best honey. One of the largest apiarists in the Bathurst district stated yesterday that the whole trouble rested in the fact that there was not the number of bees in the district to produce the quantity of honey. "They have not been able to obtain sufficient food to keep them alive," he said. "In many instances a disease has overtaken them from the lack of nourishment, and many of them have not been able to reproduce. The fall last year was responsible for this, as the pollen was very poor, and did not supply them with their natural requirements. This was one of the reasons, but the main trouble was due to the devastation of the yellow box tree. It is being ringbarked and chopped down all over the district, as clearing was extensively being carried on for wheat-growing. This tree is the best food supplier to the bees, and when it is taken away you can see the disastrous result. Something ought to be done to stop this wholesale destruction before it entirely kills the production of the best honey in this State.

So extensive is the falling-off in the output, that one merchant who usually sends about a ton of honey a week to market in the season, has only a small quantity this year to offer. In consequence of this scarcity in Western brands, the market for it has advanced to 4d per lb.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The privilege existing between solicitor and client was a matter aruged at some length on Thursday in the Full Court. The matter arose out of the action which Peter Federovitch Varawa, a Russian subject, has instituted against the Howard Smith Company, claiming heavy damages for malicious prosecution, and abuse of the process of the Court. This action was the outcome of the sale of the steamer Peregrine to the Russian Government. Under a writ of capias, issued at the instance of defendant company, Varawa was arrested in New South Wales, and detained in prison until he could give security to the extent of £4000. For this he commenced his action. Interrogatories were administered by the plaintiff, and amongst the questions asked was, What advice the defendant company was given by its solicitors in Melbourne and Sydney with reference to the issue of the writ of capias? The company contended that this being a communication between solicitor and client was privileged, and they were not bound to answer. The plaintiff replied to this that by their amended statement of claim a direct charge of fraud was made against the company. In cases of crime or civil fraud, there was no privilege, and that being so, there was no privilege against answering the question. The matter was referred to the Full Court by Mr. Justice Hodges. Defendants in an amended answer swore that communications between the solicitors and the company had nothing whatever to do with the alleged fraud. They declined to disclose the advice given, because that might be used by the plaintiff to support, not his allegation of fraud, but his allegation of a want of reasonable and probable cause for the arrest of the plaintiff. On the one hand, it was contended that the mere allegation of fraud in the statement of claim was sufficient to "rip up" the whole matter, and lay everything bare; on the other hand, it was argued that there was the oath of the defendants that there had been no fraud, and it was for the plaintiff to do something more than affirm that there had been before he could destroy the privilege which prima facie existed between solicitor and client.

The Chief Justice, in a judgment in which his brother Judges concurred, held that the privilege existed up to the present, and that, therefore, the answers given were sufficient at this stage. It was indicated that if in the course of the trial any evidence of a fraudulent abuse of the process of the Court were disclosed, then it would be for the Judge to get the answers which it was now sought to obtain by interrogatory.

THE BIOGRAPH IN AUSTRALIA.

The French Consul-General and several leading citizens and Parliamentarians were present on Thursday at the opening of the Pathe Freres' Australasian branch at 73 York-street, city.

M. Sutto, the manager, in asking those present to drink to the success of "Australia and its People," said his firm had for a long time past contemplated the opening of a branch in the Commonwealth, more particularly in Sydney. It was the intention of Pathe Freres to use the biograph in schools to educate the children. Australia was in need of immigration, and the biograph could assist very materially in getting the right class of settler. (Applause.)

The toast having been honoured, the Consul-General expressed his pleasure at being present, and wished Pathe Freres success in their new enterprise.

Some excellent moving pictures were shown prior to the opening ceremony, the best film being that of the Hawkesbury River.

EMPLOYERS' FEDERATION.

A meeting of the executive of the Employers' Federation was held on Thursday, the president, Mr. A. H. Moore, being in the chair. The recent decision of the High Court in the boot manufacturers' case was discussed at some length, and it was decided to support the action of the boot manufacturers in their application for prohibition.

The matter of the wages board appointed for the passenger and goods lifts' attendants was also fully considered, and the executive urge upon employers interested to promptly send in particulars regarding their lifts to the special committee appointed to consider the position.

The resignation of Mr. W. F. Jaques from the executive committee on account of his departure for Europe was received and accepted, and the executive wished him a pleasant trip and safe return.

CESSNOCK COLLIERIES.

CESSNOCK, Friday.

All the district collieries have worked full time for the fortnight ending Saturday, consequently the pay is a big one. The prospects of brisk work for the next few pays are bright, and a revival of prosperous times is confidently anticipated. The output of the collieries has come up to what it was before the strike.

The applications for work at the collieries are numerous, but only about 20 over the complement of hands engaged before the strike have been put on. At the Aberdare Extended a large number of men are expected to be put on soon.

Some improvements are being carried out at the mines. At the Aberdare Colliery additions are being made to the screens, and at the Neath Colliery conditions have been prepared for work with the coal-cutting machines.

The Aberdare Mine is now putting out from 1240 to 1280 tons of coal per shift of eight hours, and in the same period the Aberdare Extended puts out 320 tons.

The removal of the coal from Bellbird still continues. Now that the strike is over, local carters have been engaged in carting the coal. The motor lorry is off work temporarily owing to a breakage.

It is expected that the proposed collieries at Ellalong will be opening up shortly.

Recently the Aberdare miners' lodge decided upon a system of turn-keeping of skips, so as to regulate the disposal of skips to miners. Mr. D. McGeachie, general manager of the Caledonian Company, was approached by a deputation last week with reference to introducing the system. Mr. McGeachie was not favourable to the turn-keeping system, but promised to see that the skips were distributed as equally as possible. The introduction of a turn being kept by lodges was a matter for the wages board.

A satisfactory arrangement has been arrived at between the Aberdare miners' lodge and the management of the Aberdare and Aberdare Extended mines, with regard to payment for dirt in the seam, pending the Court's decision in the matter.

The average earnings of the miners of the various collieries are being prepared by the lodges.

DRUMMOYNE SEWERAGE.

At the meeting of the Water and Sewerage Board on Friday morning a report was received from the engineer-in-chief recommending that tenders be called for the first section of the low-level sewerage at Drummoyne, at an estimated cost of, in round numbers, £19,000. The president (Mr. W. J. Millner) said there were other areas more thickly populated than this little bit of fringe which were more entitled to have similar work carried out. These areas had been approved of, but the work was deferred, and they had no money available now. Mr. Garrard said the works referred to by the president had not been undertaken because they would not pay. He thought Drummoyne should be satisfied with the progress it had already made during the past two years, and not try to force on something that other places had a prior right to. It was resolved on the motion of Mr. Garrard that the matter be deferred, and a return prepared showing all those places that were approved of being reticulated, and the work was postponed on account of their not paying. During the discussion it was stated that the section at Drummoyne proposed to be sewered would not return one per cent.

FIRE BRIGADEMEN'S GRIEVANCES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I was very much surprised to learn through the medium of your paper that the partial paid fire brigades have been deprived of their insurance, and I thoroughly endorse every word written by "One Who Knows," having been in the game myself. I know the feeling that must prevail among the men who carry their lives in their hands to protect life and property, and only receive a mere pittance, as already published; for how pleasant it is to be called out in the middle of the night, and racing to the station perhaps to find some mischievous boys have been having a lark at your expense, and when your services are required to fight the flames to save life and property, and in doing so if you are maimed you cannot follow your employment, and get nothing. It is a disgrace to the State to think that these men who risk their lives are not better treated.

I am, etc,
EX-FIREMAN.

SPECIAL ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE SENATE ELECTION.

TO THE ELECTORS OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

You number more than 800,000, and are spread over more than 300,000 square miles of land. For the Legislative Assembly of the State Parliament you are divided into voters for 90 distinct electorates; for the House of Representatives of the Federal Parliament into voters for 27 electorates. In either of these cases a candidate has some reasonable opportunity of seeing and addressing those whom he aspires to represent, though it is found that in many of these last-named electorates the area is too great for the work to be done effectively. Obviously, then, when the whole State becomes one electoral area, as it does for the Senate, it is impossible—absolutely so—for me to personally approach more than a small proportion of my constituents. I have addressed many meetings, and in doing so have been so far north as Tenterfield, as far south as Albury, as far west as Bourke; but population centres, literally by the hundred, remain unvisited. In fact, to deliver an address in the neighbourhood of every polling station in the State would occupy, at the rate of one daily, at least six years.

No man ought to be a candidate for the Senate who is not at least fairly well known throughout his State. I have myself the advantage of being well known in New South Wales, by reason of 25 years of public life, including 6 in the State Legislative Council, and 9 in the Federal Senate. The record of my public life, with its duties well and faithfully performed, speaks for me to-day throughout the length and breadth of this State, and on this I confidently rely for the continued support of those tens and hundreds of thousands of my constituents whom I cannot enjoy the pleasure of personally addressing. That I cannot do the impossible has been taken advantage of by my opponents to represent in many parts of the State that I purposely refrained from visiting my constituents, and it is time that such misrepresentations were exposed and the true position made clear.

The great, the vital consideration in this election, the one that transcends all others in importance, has to do with the national life and the future security and greatness of Australia. For the past quarter of a century the conviction has been growing that the Pacific is to be not only a great but probably the great world centre of the future. The developments that have been taking place on its coasts and on its waters all point to this. On what is known as the Pacific Slope the Americans have been and are making great progress, and they have extended their power to the Philippines and to Hawaii. Japan, with a civilisation dating back thousands of years, has suddenly sprung to the front as one of the great armed nations of the world. China, infinitely greater in size and population, also with an ancient civilisation, moves with slower steps, but in the same direction, as Japan. Russia, the giant of the north, though defeated in the late war, has not lost her ambition to be a great power in the Pacific. Germany has secured many possessions in these waters, and the Dutch colonies are rapidly increasing in importance. The cutting of the Panama Canal will be completed in a few years, bringing all Europe relatively quite near the very centre of "the Far East" and of the mid-Pacific. All these facts point to strenuous life in the Pacific, and make it clear that, whether she will or no, Australia is being gradually drawn into the vortex of world politics.

Hitherto, as a child sleeping peacefully on the bosom of its mother, Australia has slept through infancy and childhood under the protecting shelter of the Motherland. To-day, in its vigorous youth, it finds the Motherland greater and stronger than ever, but yet that, owing to the development of other nations, the task of Empire defence has become a great and ever-growing strain. Australia, awaking to the situation, sees herself called upon, both by the rapid expansion in the Pacific and by Empire conditions, to recognise that the time has arrived when she must bestir herself and show that her sons inherit the grit of the Anglo-Saxon. Beyond question the time has arrived when Australian affairs require the direction of the most statesmanlike, capable, and experienced men the Commonwealth can provide. All that we possess to-day, and all that we may hope for in the future, demand that coming Parliaments shall be strong ones, and truly representative of Australia. We cannot afford to play with politics, certainly not in the Parliament of the Commonwealth, which must deal with Australia's place in the world's international life. Here then is, or ought to be, the dominating consideration for every Australian in this election.

I support the coalition, or fusion, of the Liberal forces. I can scarcely think of my being called on to justify this course, but I can understand indignant voters asking why, when so much was at stake, the union of the two parties was so long delayed. In reply to such a question, I could only say that my influence and efforts had been given to the movement long before it eventuated in success. Clearly the fusion has been justified by the legislative work that has been done; by the return to the two-party system; and by the clear-cut issue which can and is now put before the electors. The work and responsibilities that lie ahead are very great. True, we have passed a Defence Act, but this means years of hard work and skilled organisation before our defence system can be satisfactory; true, we have selected the capital site, but this only brings us to the threshold of the real capital question—that of construction; true, we have passed various other Acts, but most of them need following up. We have to deal vigorously with the great subjects of immigration; the Northern Territory; post and telegraph administration; the navigation laws; the Interstate Commission; great railway schemes to connect the east with the west, and the north with the south; any one item of which in any country in the world would be deemed big, and calling for high statesmanship. Many other matters, little, if at all, inferior in importance, await attention—such as aerial navigation, wireless telegraphy, financial development, penny postage, etc.

When the United Kingdom bestowed on Australia, and Australia accepted, the power to govern British New Guinea, Australia took a great step ahead in nationhood. German New Guinea lies to the north, Dutch New Guinea to the west, both only separated from British New Guinea by more or less ill-defined boundary lines, and boundary lines have ever been apt to lend themselves to disputes. With all this work, with all these possibilities, dare Australia meet the future with any but a strong Parliament and a strong Government?

The Liberal party, true to its principles, is fighting the battle of democracy; it calls on all people, and on all classes, to rally round it, and to look only for individual prosperity in the sustained and secure prosperity of all.

I respectfully urge every one of my friends to record her or his vote on the 13th, and to do so whatever the weather may be; and, of course, I ask them to vote for the whole three Liberal Senate candidates—Senators Gray, Neild, as well as their faithful and grateful servant,

OUR NEW STORY.

AT THE CALL OF HONOUR,

by

A. W. MARCHMONT,

WILL BEGIN IN THE SYDNEY MORNING HERALD,
ON MONDAY, APRIL 11th.

The Sydney Morning Herald.

SATURDAY, APRIL 9, 1910.

WHITHER, AUSTRALIA?

We are now close upon the day of election. On Wednesday next the political destiny of the Commonwealth is to be determined for three years at least, but probably for much more than three years. We are now at a juncture in the history of the Commonwealth when it is open to us to make a decision which will lead on to a national development and to a national strength, or to a national stagnation in the immediate future, and, possibly, to a more remote national enfeeblement. No more serious issue than this could be put before a people, and it is the obligation of our people to attend to it, not casually, but in the most earnest way. To put the issue thus nakedly may savour of extremism; but it is not extremism, only a statement of the position as we apprehend it. We are not indifferent to the virtues of the Labour party as a factor in our political growth. Any thoughtful and impartial mind will discern in the Labour party and its immediate programme much that consists with progress and political health. And we are not so fatuous to suppose that a man like Mr. Fisher and the men whom he would be likely to have in association with him in Cabinet, were they successful at the polls, would deliberately address themselves to the task of turning the Commonwealth upside down.

It is not, however, merely a question of immediate choice between Mr. Fisher and Mr. Deakin. There are antecedent considerations which happen to be all-important. Mr. Fisher represents the constitutional Opposition. But it is an Opposition vitally unlike any other Opposition of which we have had experience hitherto in the working of British Parliamentary institutions. It is not merely an Opposition which challenges a Government on specific planks of policy; it is an Opposition that stands for all the energy of a definite political creed. And whither? To the millennium Mr. Fisher and his supporters and apologists will say To the dark political unknown the instructed minds of the community will say, and most mellowed minds of the Labour party itself would say did they dare to run counter to the remorseless political machine of which they are the bondsmen. In this contest the community needs to clear its mind of illusions, and one of the most subtle illusions of which it should divest itself is the illusion of "moderation," which was imposed during the two short terms when the Labour party actually held office in the Commonwealth. Mr. Watson, always a moderate man himself, shouldered the responsibilities of office, and discharged them in a manner which left little room for cavil. When Mr. Fisher's turn came he did the same, and some of his Cabinet performed useful work, notably Senator Pearce. But what has to be remembered is that this moderation was conditioned—was even exacted—by the circumstances in which the Labour party during those interims found itself placed. For we must see that while the Labour party has had office twice, it has never held office with power. On both occasions the Labour Government had to trim its sails, not to suit the party immediately behind it, but the party led by the present Prime Minister, Mr. Deakin. And when under pressure from within it ceased to satisfy that balancing party it went out. The "moderation," therefore, of which the Labour party now boasts was not an intrinsic, but an imposed, quality.

In this contest the party position stands vitally altered. For the first time in the history of the Commonwealth the caucus machine is confronted with the forces of a united Liberalism. For the first time the really big issues upon which the future national life of Australia will turn are put squarely before the electorate. For the first time the Labour party, with any expectation of success, bids for the power to govern in its own right. And what does that "own right" mean but the power to translate into legislation the behests of the political Labour leagues? We know what the behests of the leagues involve. They involve not the opinions and aspirations of the vast body of workers, in the main unexpressed, but the opinions and feelings of the extreme and aggressive minority which has declared its faith in nebulous doctrinaire and impracticable socialism, whose watchword is the indiscriminate "nationalisation" of all land, whether held in allotments or estates, and all the instruments of "production and exchange." That is the faction which would exert the preponderant pressure upon a Labour Government, and in view of this certain pressure, how can Mr. Fisher or the members of his party now before the electorates give assurances that the extremists will not prevail? Did they not prevail with certain members of the Labour Cabinet in the Broken Hill strike, and did they not prevail even more completely with Mr. Fisher himself in the coal strike when he condoned at Bulli the action of the disastrously-led unions in flagrantly breaking laws made at the instance of the very party of which he is the Australian head? And if this pressure was so easily exercisable upon Mr. Fisher in Opposition, what is the guarantee that it would not be still more certainly exercisable upon Mr. Fisher in office when inevitably its paralysing influence could be communicated through all the machinery of government? There is no guarantee, and Mr. Fisher and his lieutenants know quite well that were they to attempt to give any such guarantee they would split their party into fragments. What the electors have to consider in this contest, therefore, is whether they can commit the Commonwealth to the keeping of men who are not their own masters, who are at the mercy not of the men in the party who know most, but of the men who know least, of the section whose sense of responsibility is at the minimum; or whether they give their suffrages to a party which, whatever its defects, has its datum pegs struck deep into the facts of life and experience, and which commands the best and most matured ability in our public life.

The Liberal party stands now, as always, for the broadest and humanest ideals of government, for the conservation of the best interests, not of one class only, but of all. It is as much opposed to the excesses of organised capitalism as to the excesses of organised Labourism. Its function is to save the community from the perils of both. It puts forward to-day a programme which should gather together the best elements of the Australian people in furtherance of a Commonwealth which will give free scope to all the agencies which make for a rich and prosperous internal development in industry, and for an enduring defensive strength in a largely-augmented population, and adequate military and naval organisation. The alternative is at best uncertainty—and at the worst disaster. While rendering a lip service to immigration, which, beyond all else, is vital to the Australian future, the Labour party can never be depended upon to further it. We simply cannot afford to jeopardise the future, and we can only save it by every Liberal and every Liberal sympathiser emulating the energy and determination of the splendidly-organised other-side, and registering a vote on Wednesday for the three selected Liberal Senate candidates, and for the selected Liberal candidate in each electorate who is seeking election to the House of Representatives.

IMAGINATION.

We all know the definitions of poetry, how numerous they are, and how unsatisfactory. We think we know poetry through our own sure instinct, and can tell good from bad by a comparison of specimens, though we are prepared to distrust the instincts and the judgment of anyone else. But no one yet has been able to frame a definition that has not speedily been shown to be inedaquate by the first competent person who has troubled to examine it. The difficulty, perhaps, lies in the fact that the persons who know and think most about poetry are not those among whom accurate draftsmen are usually found. That, at any rate, or something like it, seems to be the difficulty with the use of another word—the word imagination, which appears to have as many meanings as any other in our elusive English language. It is a word that is always used by poets when discussing their art or themselves, by critics and by social observers. Keats in his famous preface tells us that the imagination of a boy is healthy, and the mature imagination of a man is healthy, but that there is a period between when everything is mawkish, unwholesome, and disagreeable. Shelley makes it the object of his defence of poetry to show that the poet uses the power of his imagination, not of his reason. To him the word means the faculty of going outside oneself, seeing the point of view of other people, and thus coming into sympathy with them. Imagination is for him the great instrument of moral good. "It is not for want of admirable doctrines that men hate and despise and censure and subjugate and deceive each other; it is for want of love," in other words, of sympathy. "A man to be greatly good must imagine intensely and comprehensively." Social observers apparently use the word sometimes in Shelley's sense, and sometimes with an allied meaning, as equivalent to foresight. They say, according to their point of view, that the English succeed or fail in the government of inferior races because they lack imagination. The French enter into the minds of their subjects, and fail as colonists; the English behave as the lords of creation, and are treated accordingly.

Using the word in its allied meaning we say of a people that they have no imagination when they live for the immediate present only. They build their cities, their means of conveyance, and their public buildings, with a view only to satisfying the demands that already exist. When the word is used in this sense there is ample evidence to confirm the statement often repeated, that lack of imagination is one of the characteristics of the Australian people. Lady Poore, at the recent meeting of the Bush Book Club, when giving the result of her observations, is reported to have spoken only of the children, but other observers have given a similar account of the whole population. We have, as we are now discovering, built our railways and our cities with no regard for what we have become within twenty years of their completion. We suffer at present an infinite want of comfort and loss of money because we will not at once consolidate our State buildings in a home worthy of them. Mr. O'Sullivan, with his Celtic ardour, succeeded in building a railway station which might pass muster in a small Swiss canton with a tenth of our wealth and none of our possibilities. But even he, influenced by his colleagues, was unable to surround his building with dignity, or make it sufficient for the country a generation hence. We still show in our mode of life that we have not sufficient elasticity of mind to see the good things about us, and sufficiently to modify the habits of our northern ancestors to use them. We have the climate of Italy, yet our wealthier classes take their pleasures indoors, and our poorer classes take them in the same fashion as the artisans of London and Manchester. We dine out in the summer in a stuffy hotel or a stuffier restaurant, instead of in a beautiful cafe on the shores of the harbour, and our poorer classes, instead of listening to music out of doors, loaf in and out of comfortless public-houses, or at the corners of ugly, crooked streets. The answer, of course, is that we have to put up with the disadvantages if we want to enjoy the blessings of our English descent. We are still only in the third and fourth generation from the first settlers, many of whom being Puritans thought that any departure from the conventional must lead along the primrose path to the everlasting bonfire. If we were not of Teutonic stock we should be leading a more sensible life, but should probably be members of a transitory community instead of a growing nation.

The members of the Bush Book Club, however, with their purpose before them, are more likely to have given the term "imagination" a somewhat different meaning. Australian children are often said to be unimaginative, because they are not supposed to be interested in fairies, to be very devoted to dolls, or to be thrilled by ghost stories. It is cited against them that, whereas English children were enraptured with "Peter Pan," a large proportion of Australian children were bored, and were not wise enough to conceal their feelings. Children suffer, like explorers and great soldiers, because they are either unable or unwilling to give reasons for their preferences in language intelligible to their elders. It is fair, then, to go for information to the poets, whose secret is said to be that they preserve the hearts of children in themselves from first youth to extreme old age. The Australians may well defend themselves on the ground that they stand to English children in the relation that Wordsworth stood to Coleridge. When Coleridge bade him interest himself in the Somersetshire fairies he answered that he desired for his scene no planet but his own, and no corner of the earth stranger than England. Anyone who knows what are the playthings of children in the bush, and what interests them, will refuse to believe that they lack imagination, however familiar may be their favourite scenes. They recreate a world for themselves, which is none the less imaginative because it is not peopled by the conventional inhabitants of fairyland. The trouble is that they lose this world too soon. Their fathers and mothers have not sufficient foresight or insight to keep a child from the grinding toil of existence long enough to enable it to get the strength of a gradual development. It is here that the Bush Book Club will do its best work. It will do a work which the Church ought always to have in view, but of which the clergy of all denominations never seem to have realised the importance. It will give variety of interest and experience to people whose chief danger is monotony. Anyone who has travelled through the country districts must realise that the one thing more important than the acquisition of wealth is to teach people to spend it on other than animal pleasures. Literature which "brings up the stream murmurs and scents of the infinite sea" helps to do this by adding variety and breadth to life. But, of course, the chief hope is in the schools and in the teachers. The teachers must be men capable of coalescing the two branches of education for one purpose—science which seems destined to turn farming into an all-absorbing profession, full of interest and of romance, and literature which enlarges the understanding and gives to leisure an attraction which is independent of anything that can be bought.

To-day's Herald.—Sir Henry Lucy (page 5) discusses the temporary smooth water into which Ministers had got before Easter, but he anticipated trouble afterwards. The trouble lies in the steps that may be necessary in order to make the veto resolutions effective. The Lords will have none of them, and what next? There is also discussion of the new peerages, and the most recent scandal in politics about the death of a prominent Commoner is mentioned. On the same page in two parallel articles there are interesting studies of two of the renowned comedies in the language—Shakespeare's "As You Like It," with special reference to Sydney performances, and Sheridan's "School for Scandal." On page 7 will be found a brief appreciation of General Booth, whose 81st birthday falls upon to-morrow. The writer of "In the Garden" (page 7) supplies copious material for the amateur who looks ahead in his work. A summary of the chief contents of the March Review is published on page 8, and on the same page will be found a lengthy extract from Mr. Foster Fraser's articles in the "Standard" on the provincial spirit in Australia. Our military correspondent deals (page 7) with the work and the scope of field artillery at the late encampment.

Floods Relief Fund.—The Lord Mayor said yesterday that £5300 had been received in aid of the sufferers by the recent floods. Hundreds of claims had been made on the fund, and up to the present £2500 had been distributed, in sums ranging from £5 to £100, the committee dealing with the claims weekly. The replacement of stock had not been dealt with, as it was felt that the fund had been raised for the purpose of providing temporary assistance in cases where homes had been flooded. It was further officially announced that there was no need for additional subscriptions, as it was considered that there was enough money in hand to meet all necessitous cases.

Was it a Cat?—A Sydney man lately sent to a friend in England a photograph of his sons with a bunch of waratahs between them. This is the letter his friend wrote back:—"Dear X——, I can see the waratahs between the boys in the photo, which you sent, now I have been puzzling my brains ever since to try and find out what a waratah is; I never heard the name until the mysterious disappearance of the ill-fated vessel of that name. On looking at the photo, I thought at first it was a dog, then I thought it was something like a lamb. Then, on looking at it through a magnifying glass, I came to the conclusion that it was neither, but some kind of plant, resembling a chrysanthemum. One of my friends whose next-door neighbour had been in Australia for some time, was told by them that the waratah was only another name for the wallaby, a small animal something like a cat. I have turned up all the dictionaries I could lay my hands on, but can't get any nearer the solution of the question, so that if you don't tell me in your next letter what it is, I expect I will die of a rush of curiosity on the brain."

Progressive Annandale.—Speaking at a banquet given in his honour last night, Alderman William Wells, who is about to make a round-the-world tour, said he was proud to have been associated for so many years with such a progressive borough as that of Annandale, the first municipality to obtain a destructor in the Southern Hemisphere. He hoped that before a month was out a contract would be signed for the installation of electric light in Annandale. Within a month or six weeks another important contract would probably be signed—for the wood-blocking of Parramatta-road. Both announcements were received with loud applause.

Valueless £5 Notes.—An old man, whose description has been furnished to the police, has a bad habit of paying shopkeepers with £5 notes which no bank will accept. They were issued by the Provincial and Suburban Bank of Victoria, which has been defunct for over 20 years. Within the past 12 months four of these notes have been handed to unsuspecting people, and two days ago a fifth was given to an Italian fruiterer in Park-street. The customer bought some fruit, and took £4 odd in change. The shopkeeper discovered later on how valueless was the note, and reported the case to the police.

Law Business.—The sittings of the Supreme Court for the hearing of causes came to a conclusion yesterday. Although the work in this particular jurisdiction was delayed at the opening through exigencies as to Full Court appeals, all the actions on the list have been cleared off. The next Term of the year will start on May 2. For the ensuing week most of the Common Law Judges will be engaged on Circuit business, for which the following arrangements have been made:—The Chief Justice will sit at Grafton (April 14). Mr. Justice Cohen at Maitland (April 12) and Armidale (April 22), Mr. Justice Pring at Hay (April 13), Albury (April 19), and Goulburn (April 26), and Acting Justice Fitzhardinge at Dubbo (April 13).

A Kiss.—Proceedings in the metropolitan police courts are at times relieved of their more objectionable and oftentimes pathetic features, and so it happened on Friday at the Water Police Court, when a man was presented on a charge of assault. So many things constitute an assault, that it is only after hearing evidence that the gravity of the offence charged is made apparent. In the particular case under notice the assault to which the man had to plead was that of impressing an unsolicited kiss on the lips of a patient of the Moorcliff Eye Hospital at Miller's Point. From available information it appeared that the offender was apparently attracted by one of the female patients, and for the moment losing control of his feelings, he bent down and kissed her. This outrageous and caressing assault brought him within the arm of the law, and he had to answer for his evident sympathy with distress. But upon the case being called on it was intimated that the victim of the assault declined to proceed further with the case, and as the hospital authorities were disinclined to accept the responsibility of a prosecution, the alleged offender was discharged—a wiser man.

All-Night North Shore Trams.—The Chief Commissioner for Railways has decided to institute the running of all-night trams from Milson's Point to Spit-road, commencing on Monday, 18th instant. The first "late" tram (treble fares) will leave the Point at 12.45, and the other trams will probably leave at hourly intervals. The time-table has not yet been fixed up.

The New South Wales Eight.—In connection with the interstate eight-oar rowing contest to take place in Tasmania on the 30th instant, an exhibition row will be given this afternoon by the New South Wales crew. The Minister for Public Instruction has arranged for the Eva to follow the race.

Scots' Wha Hae.—The dinner at the Australia last evening to the trustees of the Savings Bank, who are leaving for Edinburgh, partook somewhat of the nature of a tribute to Scottish thrift. Mr. Fosbery claimed that the best breakfast in the world was procurable in Edinburgh, while Princes-street was the finest thoroughfare in Europe. Another speaker remarked that Edinburgh was the handsomest city in the world, while Glasgow, the smokiest city in the world, was the father of all engineering. It was also pointed out that the first savings bank in the world was started in Scotland; a Scotsman was the first to start a savings bank in Australasia, while both the trustees of the Savings Bank were going back to Scotland, the land of their birth.

Quarantine Police.—"A Resident of Manly" writes, with reference to the quarantining of the Otway's passengers that the police who all day and all night long have to mount guard at the top of Darley-road, and again at Shell Beach lest any patient should break quarantine, are provided with no shelter whatever, and in bad weather had to get wet and keep on getting wet. On Wednesday night, when the rain at the Heads was reported as "torrential, and again on Thursday night, when Manly was visited with heavy rain, the policeman at each station might crouch under a low wooden fence, and wrap himself in his macintosh—which a considerate Government had provided him with. The writer suggests that the Government have some shelter erected for the police.

Hurstville Railway Service.—Growling at the railway service, as far as the Illawarra suburban line is concerned, is one of the chief stocks of the municipal councils within that area. Each successive meeting brings complaints of over-crowding, bad lighting, and the most recent is late and irregular running. The Hurstville Council's last complaint was the late arrival in Sydney of the 7.26 a.m. from Hurstville, it being alleged that the train was continually late—sometimes to the extent of 10 minutes. The Commissioners' reply to this was that they regretted that punctuality had not been regularly maintained, but on investigation it was ascertained that only one one occasion was this train over 10 minutes late, and that through congestion at Darling Harbour. However, the train would be watched, and improvement made. "That is utter nonsense," said Alderman Hunt, "this train is never up to time. Why, not later than this week this train was no less than 20 minutes late on two mornings." He thought the departmental reply was purely bluff. It was nearly time the badly-treated Illawarra liners got some consideration from the department, and replies such as this were only heaping insult on their heads, when any traveller by this train knew them to be at variance with facts. This loss of time was a serious matter to many young girls and workmen, whose employers docked them for lateness—to some five minutes meant half an hour's pay. It meant that to get to work in time they would have to start 20 minutes earlier. "I think this is a matter that requires the serious consideration of our Parliamentary representatives," continued Alderman Hunt, "and in addition a conference of the local municipal councils should be held to discuss railway matters generally before interviewing the Commissioners." Alderman Blackshow said that he had heard that the interlocking system was to blame. The trouble up to the present was chiefly confined to the main suburban line, and a much worse time was in store for the Illawarra people. The council agreed to Alderman Hunt's suggestion.

Angus and Robertson, Limited, make a special announcement elsewhere regarding their clearance sale.

PERSONAL.

VICE-REGAL.

His Excellency the Governor-General, accompanied by Georgina Countess of Dudley, and Miss Bosanquet, and attended by Lord Richard Nevill and Mr. Walter Callan, left for the Blue Mountains on Friday morning, and will return to Sydney on Saturday evening.

His Excellency the Governor-General is announced to arrive at Tumut on Sunday, on the way to Buddong Falls and the Yarrangobilly Caves.

His Excellency the Governor, accompanied by Lady Chelmsford, will preside at the second annual meeting of the United Charities Fund on Tuesday afternoon.

Madame Calve made her first public appearance in Melbourne yesterday at a reception given in her honour at the Melbourne Town Hall by Madame Pigeonneau, wife of the Consul for France. The hall was crowded.

After over 30 years in the service of the Union Steamship Company, of which he was superintending engineer, Mr. David M'Caig has retired, and is about to leave for the United Kingdom. Last night he was entertained at a dinner in Baumann's Cafe. Mr. Franki, manager of Mort's Dock and Engineering Company, Limited, presided, and among those present were Captains Crawshaw, Cromarty, Green, and Spinks, Messrs. Bell (North Coast Company) and Jackson (Illawarra Company). Mr. Shirra (chief engineering surveyor of the Department of Navigation) proposed the health of Mr. M'Caig, and presented him on behalf of his Melbourne friends with a pair of sleeve-links shaped like a ship's propeller at one end and a double-ended spanner at the other. Mr. Wm. Irving, on behalf of the company assembled, presented Mr. M'Caig with a silver cigar case.

Mr. J. M. C. Forsayth, of Ralum, Simpsonhafen, who holds the position of British Consul in German New Britain, will return to the Bismarck Archipelago by the steamer Prinz Waldemar leaving Sydney to-day.

Alderman William Wells, who has been six times Mayor, and has served the ratepayers of Annandale for 16 years, was last night entertained at dinner by the citizens of that borough, and presented with an illuminated address. The guests numbered 70, and included the Lord Mayor of Sydney. The Mayor (Alderman James Robertson) presided, and made the presentation.

Dr. Hahl, the Governor of German New Guinea, is about to proceed on a 12 months' holiday trip to Germany, and will embark on the steamer Prinz Waldemar at Simpsonshafen (New Britain) for Hongkong.

A point of more than personal interest was raised by Mr. T. J. West at Paris House last night, the occasion being a farewell dinner, at which Mr. Richard Tregaskis presided, with Mr. Neville Montague as vice-chairman. The honoured guest, who introduced the "grown-up children's picture book" in this country, now the delight of thousands, modestly attributed all the credit to the French firm of Pathe Freres, whose representative, Mr. Leopold Sutto, was present. They were the scientific producers for the whole world, remarked Mr. West, though he might claim to be the first showman, from the day, five years ago, when he joined Mr. Edwin Geach in a seemingly forlorn venture at Her Majesty's Theatre, Perth. In that immense playhouse, the largest in Australasia, a profit of £1000 was realised in eight weeks; and so the idea originated of permanent picture shows here, even before they had "caught on" in the United Kingdom. Mr. West, who sails again for London by the Makura on Monday, was toasted in brief farewell speeches by Dr. Brissenden, Messrs. Harry Stuart Jerdan, R. Southouse, P. J. Nolan, and Gerald Marr Thompson, before the company separated.

Mr. E. J. Redmond, who died yesterday in a private hospital, and whose remains will be carried to-day to the Waverley Cemetery from his late home in Avoca-street, Randwick, was a member of the firm of Marchant and Co., Ltd., of Kent-street, since he left the A.J.S. Bank some six years ago. The late gentleman was born at Gulgong in 1871, commenced his business life in the A.J.S. Bank at Mudgee, and was then in various branches—Coonamble, Newcastle, Grafton, and elsewhere throughout the State—ultimately becoming teller at the Haymarket branch.

Mr. K. Uyeno, Consul-General for Japan, will leave Sydney for Japan by the steamer Kumano Maru on the 20th instant, having been granted leave of absence. While Mr. Uyeno thinks it probable he will return to Sydney at the expiration of his leave, it is possible he may be sent elsewhere. Mr. Uyeno arrived in Sydney two years and two months ago, and has made many friends. During his absence the Consulate-General will be in charge of the present Chancellor, Mr. C. Hayashi.

In honour of the birthday of King Albert of Belgium, the Mayor of Newcastle (Mr. J. Reid) yesterday entertained the Consul for Belgium (Mr. Alex. Brown, M.L.C.) and the Commander (Captain Zander) and officers of the Belgian Government training ship L'Avenir, at the council-chambers, Newcastle. The toast of the "King of the Belgians," submitted by the Mayor, was honoured, after which "The Consul for Belgium and the Commander and Officers of the L'Avenir" was proposed by the Mayor, who commented on the excellent scheme of the Belgian Government for training officers and affording every facility for building a mercantile marine. He noted that Victoria had just purchased a training ship, and he hoped New South Wales would follow suit. He was very pleased to see the fine training ship belonging to the Union Steamship Company at present in port at Newcastle. Captain Zander, in responding, expressed his high appreciation of the hospitality shown him during his stay in Newcastle. Mr. Alex. Brown also replied.

Mr. J. B. Laing, late accountant of the Military Pay Office, Sydney, has been appointed to succeed the late Mr. J. A. Thomson as chief accountant of military forces and finance member of the military and naval boards.

Mr. Stephen Simpson, of the firm of Messrs. Simpson and Mann, who is leaving for Europe by the Otway next week, was on Wednesday evening presented by the merchants of Sydney with a practical token of their regard. Mr. D. M'Clure presided over the gathering, which was held in the boardroom of the Commercial Travellers' Club, Moore-street, and the presentation—consisting of two dressing cases, one for Mr. Simpson and the other for his wife—was made by Mr. J. Locke.

The Premier, who returned yesterday from Braidwood, will leave this morning for Singleton, where he will address a meeting to-night.

The Minister for Public Instruction, Mr. Hogue, will be present at the opening by the Governor on Monday afternoon, of the lecture hall of the Australian Museum, College-street. The ceremony will begin at 3 o'clock. On Tuesday afternoon Mr. Hogue will visit the Gladstone Park Superior Public School in connection with a suggested change of site.

VETO RESOLUTIONS.

COMMONS PASS THE FIRST.

OVER ONE HUNDRED MAJORITY.

GUILLOTINE CAUSES UPROAR.

LONDON, April 8.

The debate in the House of Commons on the first resolution for limiting the veto powers of the House of Lords was concluded at half-past 10 o'clock last night by the application of the guillotine.

The resolution lays it down as expedient that the House of Lords should be disabled by law, so that it cannot reject or amend money bills. These are defined as bills which the Speaker considers contain only provisions dealing with the imposition, repeal, remission, alteration, or regulation of taxation; also provisions for charges on the Consolidated Fund, or provision of money by Parliament; supply and appropriation, and control or regulation of public money; and the raising, guaranteeing, and repayment of loans or matters incidental to these subjects.

Mr. G. Cave (Conservative) moved an amendment in favour of a joint session of the two Houses in the event of differences between the two Houses relating to money bills.

Mr. Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, said that the scheme proposed in the amendment was impossible, with the present disparity of parties in the Lords. It was true that provision was made for the Australian Houses sitting together, even in differences on financial matters, but those Houses were elected by the same constituents.

Mr. Lloyd-George said that it was unfair to say that the tax of a half-penny in the £ on land proposed by him would be confiscatory. A similar tax in New Zealand and New South Wales had had the effect of taxing unused land out of existence, not because it transferred the land bodily to the State, but because it was no longer worth the owners' while to hold up land except for the purpose of using it.

The application of the guillotine was attended with an excited uproar. The first resolution was voted by a majority of 102, the division being:—

The Earl of Crewe, leader of the House, replied that the Government was responsible for the management of the taxpayers' money, and was also the guardian of the Constitution. A conflict had arisen between these two functions.

EMIGRANT SHIP AFIRE.

PANIC AMONG RUSSIANS.

QUELLED BY BRITISH CREW.

LONDON, April 8.

When the Newcastle liner Cairnrona bound to America, with 900 Russians and Armenians, was off Beachy Head, it was discovered that the coal bunkers were afire. An explosion blew a hatch to pieces, and 20 people were injured.

A panic followed, and many men attempted to rush the women's boats, and one woman had her spine broken. The determined measures of the British crew, however, prevented disaster. They knocked men down right and left before order was restored.

Four emigrants jumped overboard, but were rescued. Finally all were transferred from the Cairnrona to other steamers.

Prince and Princess Louis of Battenberg personally served food to the famished emigrants landing on Dover pier.

The Cairnrona is a vessel of 6025 tons, and trades between Newcastle-on-Tyne and Montreal. She is owned by Cairn, Noble, and Co., of the former city.

"PARNELLISM AND CRIME."

AUTHORSHIP REVEALED.

LONDON, April 7.

A sensation has been caused by the publication of an article in "Blackwood's Magazine" by Sir Robert Anderson, late head of the Criminal Investigation Department. In this article he naively confesses that he, while in the Home Office, was the author of the articles in the "Times" on "Parnellism and Crime" in 1887, which discredited Mr. Gladstone and the Home Rule cause.

The confession of Sir Robert Anderson will, without doubt, be placed as the first sensation of the year in journalistic and official circles. Sir Robert Anderson had been adviser to the Home Office in matters relating to political crime since 1868, and was assistant Commissioner of Police in London, and head of the Criminal Investigation Department from 1888 to 1901. In this position he would have all evidence of crime in Ireland in the possession of the Government at his disposal, and of that evidence it would not appear he made ample use in the articles. It would be interesting also to know whether he made his revelations with the connivance of the Conservative Government which was in power when "Parnellism and Crime" was published. These articles purported to show a connection between Parnellism and crime in Ireland. They led to the celebrated Parnell commission, and the eliciting of the fact that two letters published by the "Times" in the course of the articles, and purporting to be signed by Parnell were forgeries. The forger Pigott shot himself in Spain, and "Parnellism and Crime," which had been published in pamphlet form, was withdrawn from circulation. The commission acquitted Mr. Parnell of the charges brought against him.

YERKES' PICTURE COLLECTION.

RECORD DAY'S SALE.

LONDON, April 8.

Forty of the late Mr. Yerkes' pictures were sold by auction in New York for £154,000. Included among them was Turner's picture, "Rockets and Blue Lights," which was purchased by Mr. Duveen for £25,000. The total was a record for a day's sale. Only one-fifth of the collection has yet been offered.

The sale of the paintings in the estate of Charles T. Yerkes, of traction fame, are being sold by order of the Court to pay the creditors of the estate. Since his death on December 29, 1905, the estate has been continuously in a maze of litigation. An inventory showed that it was not as large as was generally supposed, and that it would provide hardly sufficient to pay creditors. Mr. Yerkes left his art collection, including paintings and tapestries, to a board of trustees in New York for the benefit of the public, but the Court decided that the creditors must first be satisfied. The whole collection is valued at £400,000. The paintings number over 300, and include three works by Rembrandt and other old masters represented are Franz Hals, Hobbema, Jan Both, Jean Clouet, Holbein, Rubens, Raphael, Durer, and Watteau. Modern painters represented in the collection are Bonvin, Corot, Daubigny, Decamps, Diaz, Millet, Jules Dupre, Detaille, Alma Tadema, and Monticelli. Besides "Rockets and Blue Lights" mentioned in the cable, Turner's works in the collection are "St. Michael's Mount," and "Grand Canal at Venice." Other English masters represented are Sir Joshua Reynolds, Burne-Jones, and Landseer.

THE DUEZ FRAUDS.

WIDESPREAD CONSPIRACY.

LONDON, April 7.

In connection with the Duez scandals in France documents have been discovered at the residence of a lady showing that a widespread conspiracy existed to secure the property of religious orders in the provinces.

M. Duez, liquidator of several religious associations in France, was arrested on a charge of misappropriating £200,000. The frauds were discovered a little over a year ago, and M. Duez then pleaded that it was necessary for him to examine 100,000 documents in order to establish his innocence. He thus avoided arrest for 12 months. In the meantime a special commission of the French Senate was appointed to investigate the whole question of the liquidation of the property belonging to the religious orders, consequent upon the association's law. None of the members of the Upper House was a more active promoter of the inquiry than the ex-Prime Minister (M. Combes), who was chiefly responsible for the law. More than once since leaving office he has declared that the honour and good name of the Republic demanded that certain abuses which had been noted in connection with the liquidation of the orders should be stigmatised by Parliament, and should be visited with legal penalties. In February a report was published on behalf of the commission of inquiry calling upon the Minister for Justice to repress the practice of charging excessive fees, and to punish severely such persons as may have been convicted of having sacrificed the interests of the State to their own private advantage.

Duez confessed to having stolen £20,000 when a solicitor's clerk, and to having lost £250,000 on the Stock Exchange. In the course of his liquidation proceedings he gave bribes to 150 politicians.

Peter Barnett has been sentenced to six months' imprisonment at Birkenhead for stealing stores from the steamer Nimrod, the Shackleton expedition ship.

NOVELISTS DIVORCED.

Mrs. Katherine Cecil Thurston, novelist, has obtained a divorce from her husband, E. Temple Thurston, on the grounds of adultery and desertion. Evidence was given that her husband insisted on living in Soho slums for the purpose of gathering material for writing a novel.

[Mrs. Katherine Thurston is an Irishwoman, and has written a number of novels, the most noted being "John Chilcote, M.P.," published in 1904. Another which had some vogue was "The Fly on the Wheel," published two years ago. In 1901 she married Ernest Temple Thurston, the author of "The Apple of Eden" (1897 and 1905), "The Evolution of Katherine," and other novels.]

One hundred and fifty representatives of South Africa will arrive in England in May to take part in the Festival of Empire pageant.

ALMOST A SUGAR FAMINE.

SERIOUS RISE IN PRICES.

LONDON, April 8.

Mr. Machin, manager of Batger and Co., manufacturing confectioners, of London, declares that England was never nearer a sugar famine than now. The advance in price in the last 12 months has been practically 30 per cent. The abolition of bounties on the Continent has lowered home prices of foreigners and lessened their exports to England.

Prices of sugar in London, published in our commercial columns to-day, confirm the rise of 30 per cent. in the last 12 months. Imports of sugar into the United Kingdom for the past three years are:—

1908	33,502,566 cwt.

SYMPATHY WITH MEN IN GAOL.

MINERS' "SEVERE MENTAL STRAIN."

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

A rather novel proposal was made last night by one of the miners who attended the meeting of the Seaham Miners' Lodge. He referred to the efforts being made to procure the liberation of the federation leaders, and mentioned that a good fight was being put up for that purpose by the Trades Union Congress in Sydney. Greater success, however, he said, would attend united action on the part of the miners. As they all knew, they had to work, but he proposed that no man should do more work than was sufficient to earn fair strike pay. In order to bring that proposal within reach he tendered a notice of motion to be sent to the district through the federation, and he hoped that a call would be made on other unions. It was only unnecessary work sending petitions to Mr Wade.

The notice of motion handed in was as follows:—"That we, the members of the federation, find that the severe mental strain incurred through imprisonmet of our leaders, along with the arduous nature of our work, is having the effect of making us physically incapable of performing our work, and be resolved that in order to safeguard our health we do not produce more than a certain amount of coal per day until the release of our leaders, now in prison."

At the same meeting another member referred to rumours that had been circulated regarding the imprisoned leaders. He said that it was a pity that the miners, above all others, should be so easily led as to take notice of such rumours. Statements had been made about the president, Mr. Peter Bowling, but it was all hearsay. He advised members of the lodge not to give credence to any of these rumours until they found something with a sound foundation, and the matter could then be brought to a head.

VESSELS IN COLLISION.

KIRKDALE AND WADDON.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

A collision occurred this morning in the river between the steamers Kirkdale and Waddon, with the result that both vessels sustained somewhat serious damage. At the time of the accident the Waddon was lying berthed alongside the south side of the swinging basin, discharging timber from Vancouver, whilst the Kirkdale, a new vessel of 4813 tons and 426ft in length, was in the act of turning to proceed down the river to Hobson's Bay. As the Kirkdale swung she struck the Waddon a severe blow with her stern, the force of the impact being most severely felt on the Waddon boat deck, which was considerably damaged, whilst one of the thick iron stanchions supporting it was completely dislodged from its socket. The lifeboat on deck, together with the davits, was demolished, and generally the structure bore a wrecked appearance. On the main deck the iron railings for a distance of several feet were bent and broken. The whole damage done was estimated by one of the Waddon's officers at £200. Fortunately the hull of the Waddon suffered no injury. The Kirkdale's rudder was slightly bent, and about 5ft of the woodwork of her counter was snapped off, but otherwise no damage was apparent.

THE YAMPI SOUND TRAGEDY.

SIX ABORIGINES SENTENCED TO DEATH.

PERTH (W.A.), Friday.

Interest in the Yampi Sound tragedy has been revived by the trial, at Broome, of six aborigines, for the murder of John Pritchard Jones in January last. The whole six were found guilty of wilful murder, and sentenced to death. One alone admitted his guilt.

Massen Jones and his partner, beach-combers and prospectors, visited Yampi Sound in January last. A tribe of natives went to their lugger. Jones was enticed ashore, a native named Peter remaining on board with Massen. After the departure of the dingy, containing Jones and four natives, and a catamaran with the rest of the natives on board, a savage attack was made by Peter on Massen. On getting possession of a tomahawk, Massen threw the native overboard, and then shot him dead. Jones, on leaving, told his partner that he would return for lunch, but he did not do so, and after cruising around for three days, Massen went into Derby and reported the matter. After several attempts, Constable Fletcher brought the whole of the tribe, with the exception of two, into Derby. The constable also discovered the remains of Jones.

INDUSTRIAL ACROBATICS.

WORKMAN UNINJURED BY 50 FEET FALL.

LANDS ON FEET AND RESUMES WORK.

The law of gravitation is a curious thing. Although inevitable in its operation it plays strange vagaries at times. Yesterday a labourer named Frank Craddock fell fifty feet from the top of Mr. A. Saunders' new building to the ground, and escaped uninjured. A few days before a coal lumper named Edward Boland fell less than half the distance and was killed.

Presence of mind had something to do with Craddock's escape. He had been hoisted in a barrow to the top of the building, when the gear gave way, and barrow and man descended at a terrific pace to the ground. Just when it was expected that he would be dashed to death Craddock stepped nimbly out of the barrow on to the ground and resumed his work.

DEARTH OF LABOUR.

IN WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

PERTH, Friday.

Contractors are experiencing the greatest difficulty in carrying out their contracts. The dearth of labour is telling everywhere. Already building prices have risen heavily, with prospects of a still further rise.

IN THE KING'S NAME.

CONSTABLE CALLS FOR ASSISTANCE.

CITIZEN'S ALLEGED REFUSAL.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

An unusual case came before the City Court to-day, when Samuel Cohen, a man of about 40 years of age, was charged with having unlawfully and without lawful excuse refused when called upon by Plain-clothes Constable Hickling to assist him in quelling a fray on the night of March 15, at the corner of Lonsdale and Exhibition streets. Cohen pleaded not guilty. Constable Hickling stated that he had occasion to arrest a man who was fighting with a woman and using bad language. The man struggled violently, and he had to throw him several times. A crowd collected, and several women interfered on behalf of the man. While struggling on the ground witness saw Cohen, whom he knew. He looked him full in the face, and said, "I call on you, Samuel Cohen, to assist me with this man to the watchhouse in the King's name." Cohen put his hands in his pocket, turned round and walked away. Witness heard him call out, "Let them have a go." Witness again called on him to assist him. Cohen did not reply or go to his assistance. Constables Miller and Barclay arrived shortly after, and assisted to disperse the crowd and take the man to the watchhouse. Cohen was committed for trial.

FEDERAL ELECTIONS.

THE CAMPAIGN.

FIVE MILLION BALLOT PAPERS.

PROGRESS OF THE FIGHT.

ELECTORAL OFFICE PREPARATIONS.

About 5,000,000 ballot papers will be ready for use throughout the State of New South Wales on Wednesday morning. In the metropolitan area of Sydney some 800 ballot boxes will be distributed.

At sundry places about the city and suburbs the polling booths are beginning to show their nondescript fronts. The Sydney Town Hall basement is being fitted up with rows of stalls for the electors to pencil their papers. The State election booth will also be at the Town Hall, but outside in the grounds. The Manchester Unity Hall, in Castlereagh-street, will be another big booth, and the Exhibition Building at Prince Alfred Park, and St. John's School, Darlinghurst.

"The task before us of the Labour party is this," said Mr. Hughes, M.P., last night, speaking at Church Hill. "We must not lose a seat that we have now got; and we have to get eight seats. We have, I should say, at the present time," he added, "about an even chance."

North Sydney will have booths at the ferry wharfs, Milson's Point, M'Mahon's Point, Mosman. At Milson's Point a very large "absent" vote is expected, as some of the suburbs on the northern line are in the Parramatta electorate, and business people on their way to town take the nearest point of vantage, and mark their votes at the ferry wharf.

A big vote, about 9000 or 10,000, is expected at the polling booth being put up at Redfern Park.

The chief electoral officer for the State (Mr. M'Laren) will have a room at the post-office on election day, where he will receive from time to time the figures of the voting from the divisional returning officers, who tabulate them on their assistants sending them in. The official figures will be posted in the room, and will be available to the press for checking purposes.

Mr. W. M. Fleming has been into almost every corner of somewhat far-reaching electorate. His meetings and reception everywhere have been most encouraging. Miners and farmers alike, particularly the latter, are beginning to think that the Labour party has not made the best of its power, and the broad and comprehensive platform of the Liberals is meeting with general approval. With the knowledge of country constituencies which he possesses Mr. Fleming feels very confident that the New England seat will on the thirteenth return to Liberalism.

For some reason Mr. W. H. Kelly has become associated in politics in a remarkable fashion with a motor car. Why the circumstance has advanced to the dignity of a political point, or why Mr. Kelly's motor should be more distinguished than that of any other politician, is not apparent. He turned the point to advantage the other day rather smartly. "The only thing my opponents seem to posses against me," said he, "is that I am the owner of that vehicle which they sometimes see coming round the corner, and which they detest so long as they are not in it themselves. My opponent, too, has his machine. The only difference is that I am master of my machine; he is the servant of his."

"In connection with the nationalisation of monopolies, the policy of the Labour party is to acquire where they cannot establish all such large business concerns, and to manage them in the interests of the community. What are the monopolies? Coal, they say, is a monopoly, and the shipping industry is one. In addition to these meat, if you please, and butter as well, are amongst the monopolies. (Laughter.) The Commonwealth Government must produce both.—Mr. Deakin.

A point of anxiety among Labour candidates is the effect of the recent coal strike. There is no doubt that an estrangement of a great deal of the "sympathy" vote upon which the Trades Hall depends will have taken place. The particular candidate who had most to fear was undoubtedly Mr. Hughes. Not only had he to anticipate a considerable loss of the votes from outside unionism, but he had also the disaffection of the coal lumpers. It will be remembered that they fiercely condemned his actions and advice over the coal discharging. To urge that foreign coal should be unloaded was in the eyes of a section of the union little short of a crime. All this has now been sunk into oblivion, it would appear, for on Monday night a prominent member of the union—one, in fact, who was on the strike committee of that body—is going to speak at a meeting at Pyrmont in support of Mr. Hughes's candidature.

The coal lumpers have, of course, been at a loss what to do, for the alternative of voting for the socialist would not suit. Many of them would, no doubt, favour voting for anything rather than Liberalism, but it would seem that the principle that unionism will be best upheld by voting on the clear-cut issue has prevailed, and Mr. Hughes will probably be relieved of his doubts and fears when he turns his eyes towards Miller's Point.

"I would go so far as to say, in what might sound strong language, that any candidate who does not give a straightout refusal to this proposal to go back on the capital question should be hunted off the platform."—Mr. Wade.

Mr. W. H. Kelly, at Wentworth:—"Though a Labour member were only pledged to his electorate to nationalise the industry of tin tacks, yet when that representative got down to the Parliament, if the caucus went into the question of nationalising the greatest and most-important industries of the country, and the majority in the caucus voted for nationalising those great industries—then, whatever that member had said to his electors, however he had pledged himself only to nationalise tin-tacks, he was bound not to consider his pledges to the electors for a moment, but to vote to nationalise those other industries, because the caucus told him."

The three Senate Labour candidates, Messrs. M'Dougall, Rae, and Gardiner, are to hold rally meetings to-night—one in Martin-place and the other at the Haymarket. The general secretary of the P.L.L. (Mr. J. Grant) will preside at the former, and the president (Mr. Minahan) at the meeting at the Haymarket.

The Labour candidate for Parkes, Mr. Burgess, has reported to his headquarters that in conjunction with Mr. Hughes, he addressed a meeting of about 1500 at Ashfield on Thursday night, and that they had an excellent reception. The Labour candidates are expecting a large vote in Ashfield.

Mr. Deakin at Traralgon (Victoria).—Our financial policy is sound, but there never was such a wild-cat policy as that of the Labour party. Their manifesto said, "If Labour were in power the housewives would always have a few pounds to spare, and would not have to worry about money matters." (Loud laughter.) It is too beautiful. It is a New Jerusalem, indeed. (Laughter.)

A voice: You are playing it too low down.

Mr. Deakin: I am simply reading from a document signed by the officers of the Political Labour Council of Victoria. (Hear, hear.) If that is low down it is not my fault. (Laughter.)

The "rally" is now the order in political campaigning. To-night, at St. James's Hall, the energetic ladies who manage the Women's Liberal League are having their turn. It will be on different lines to the customary meeting of the kind. An interesting evening's entertainment, combined with politics, has been arranged, and the Liberal candidates will be presented pictorially as well as in the flesh. Music will occupy part of the programme. Solos will be given by Mr. R. W. Caldwell, Miss Grace Audley, Mr. Donald Smith, and Miss Violet Gillespie. The Liberals, or as many of them as are in town, will give stirring addresses, and endeavour to limit them to five minutes—a severe test for a Parliamentary candidate.

The woman voter, has peculiarities (and so has the man voter, for that matter) which time is only slowly eradicating. There is still the nervousness about approaching the polling booth that can't be got over in a hurry, because the elections only happen at long intervals. "When I went in and was given the papers, and had to go into one of these places to mark them, I felt as if I was about to be arrested, or something," said one lady, describing her experiences at the last Federal elections. The officials of the Liberal League are inundated with inquiries as to how it is to be done, and it is evident that there are very many who are bracing themselves up to the ordeal, for that seems to be the way it is regarded by a great number.

But ladies must remember that the exercise of the franchise is something that is under the special care of the country's administration, and everything possible is done to enable the electors, male and female, to perform their duty. There is no crowding or unpleasantness to be feared; it occupies only a few minutes. In short, there is no reason whatever why every woman able to go to the polling-booth should not be there to cast her vote one way or the other.

"If you get a majority in a Parliament to say black is white, and say it in a constitutional way, then, so far as the country is concerned, white will be black until the law is repealed."—Mr. Hughes at Church Hill.

The great Liberal rally takes place in the Town Hall on Monday night. It promises to be well attended, as applications for tickets are being freely made at the office of the secretary, at Yaralla-chambers, Pitt-street. The addresses are to be short and lively. Nearly all the city and suburban Liberal candidates are to be present. Mr. Thomas Hughes M.L.C., will be chairman.

Matters are looking well in the Hunter, according to the latest reports from that electorate. Mr. Parkes, M.L.A., has been addressing meetings there on behalf of the Liberal candidate, and reports that the organisation has undergone a vast improvement during the last few months. He considers that the prospects are in favour of Dr. Liddell retaining his hold on this seat.

The man who holds himself up as a prophet on the condition of the Federal Parliament when it next meets is taking a big risk. Mr. Hughes, at Federation Hall, last night, ventured on it thus—"To-day it is even money whether we get in with a majority, or the Fusion. I would rather have our chances than I would have Mr. Deakin's or Mr. Cook's."

Mr. J. P. Cochrane, at Church-hill, last night:—"It is an insult to any working-man to say that a gentleman living in affluence can represent him. It can't be done." Mr. Cochrane apparently had not in mind when he spoke several prominent Labour legislators who are known to be far removed from penury, to say the least.

The feature of the campaign in Robertson has been the vigorous manner in which Mr. Willis has canvassed the electorate. He, like many other candidates, has found the motor car invaluable. The electors, too, in the out of the way parts of the country are appreciating the attention that is being paid them. Before the advent of motor cars and motor bicycles many a little centre could not be visited. All that is altered now, and the candidates are heard over a much wider area than heretofore.

Speaking at Newcastle, Senator Pulsford, in reply to a question about the development of the postal system, said:—"The Postal Department would not have been in the muddle it is to-day had it not been for the policy of the Labour party. That party opposed the borrowing of money for necessary works in the way of building a Post-office, and it was responsible in part for the present condition of affairs in the department."

Mr. Hughes at Church Hill:—"You want to repeal the Coercion Act. How are you going to get it repealed? You are not going to get it repealed by making speeches about getting Mr. Bowling out of gaol or by going up to Darlinghurst in processions and waving red flags or any other flags. There is only one way in which you can get the repeal of the Coercion Act, and that is by getting a majority of people who are in favour of repealing it."

MR. DEAKIN'S MESSAGE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Mr. Deakin has issued the following message to the electors of the Commonwealth:—

"This election must prove final and conclusive in its verdict upon public finances and positive in its declaration for fiscal efficiency.

"Every non-voter really votes for minority rule.

"Every voter makes a vital choice, either accepting the cramping grip of a despotic caucus, or trusting the free growth of the free Parliament of a free nation.

"He either authorises unsound or extravagant Labour ventures in government proprietorship or else secures the Liberal policy, multiplying Australia's employments, productions, population, and well-being.

"(Signed) ALFRED DEAKIN."

A HARD HITTER.

MR. WILKS AT LEICHHARDT.

SOCIALISTS ASK QUESTIONS.

THE CANDIDATE SCORES HEAVILY.

"Since you advocate such a democratic programme, what is the difference between you and a Labour man?"

The question was asked of Mr. Wilks, the selected Liberal candidate for Dalley, at a tremendous meeting in the Leichhardt Town Hall, last night.

Mr. Wilks answered: "A lot of difference. In the first place, I am a free man. (Applause.) In the next place, I don't ask the leave of any Labour League whether I shall be a democrat or not." (Vociferous applause.)

The meeting quite reversed the recent order of things at some Liberal meetings. The socialists were outnumbered fully 20 to 1. They were a mere drop in the ocean. Any attempt at "three cheers for Fisher" was immediately overwhelmed by "Three cheers for Wilks." Every statement of the candidate was applauded. He had a night out, and enjoyed himself immensely. Only two members of the opposition overstepped the bounds of decorum. One displayed some hand-bill which a brawny policeman immediately confiscated and pulverised in the palm of his hand. The other tried to make a speech, and was summarily ejected.

The vast audience having signified its approval of the Liberal programme, the socialists asked a few questions.

Socialist No. 1: You said that the Labour party should place its programme in the forefront, and not sacrifice it to the sweets of office. How can it when it is attacked in the rear by the wreckage of two parties?

Mr. Wilks: I don't know how a wreckage can attack anything. (Laughter.) A wreckage is something that has been broken up. We are not. (Applause.)

The socialist: We reckon that you are fused now. (Laughter.)

Mr. Wilks: Well, I reckon you are confused. (Loud laughter.)

Socialist No. 2: If some question affected the fate of the Government, how would you vote?

Mr. Wilks: I would vote as I conscientiously believed, and chance the consequences. (Applause.)

A lady socialist: If returned, and presuming that you are a Liberal, how do you propose to finance Lord Kitchener's military defence scheme?

Mr. Wilks: I have dealt with that by voice and vote in the House.

The lady socialist (very politely): Excuse me. You have not dealt with it here tonight.

Mr. Wilks: Pardon me, I said that naval defence should be paid for out of a Federal income tax. Land defence will naturally come out of common revenue.

Socialist No. 4: How are you going to vote on the referendums?

Mr. Wilks: I am going to vote a double "No!"

The Chairman: Now, there was someone over there just now wanted to ask a question.

Chorus of socialists: He has been chucked out. (Loud laughter.)

Fifth and last socialist: If the Labour party introduces some Unitarian (utilitarian) measure, will you vote for it?

Mr. Wilks: I am not returned to put the political Labour party in power. I don't believe in it. (Loud applause.)

Following are extracts from the speech which evoked so much applause:—

"Four months ago Mr. Holman said that to hand over land taxation to the Commonwealth would be a menace and a danger to New South Wales. Now he goes on the platform and speaks for members who advocate a Federal land tax.

"To-day the Labour party is fighting for an exemption of £5000. Has it come to this social scale, that its friends are men worth £5000? I can remember the days when it talked of an exemption of £240. Is it trying to mislead, and intending to cut the exemption down? In any case the party is in a corner. The true reason is that it is afraid of the farmers' vote. Senator Stewart, an honest socialist, says straight out that the party wants nationalisation."

A socialist: Are you with him?

Mr. Wilks (emphatically): No, I am not. (Loud applause.)

"There are Labourites in Victoria who are promising, if returned, to repeal the Capital Site Bill."

Chorus of socialists: Rot!

Mr. Wilks: It is true, and reported in the papers there. If you can prove that they didn't say so I will retire from the contest. (Renewed applause.)

"If it were not for the British navy you would not have your white Australia to-day.

"A few years ago the Labour party had in its programme the nationalisation of all the means of production, distribution, and exchange. To-day it is 'Nationalisation of Monopolies.' What does it mean?"

Mr. Wilks had a splendid meeting in the Balmain Town Hall on Thursday night. There was a crowded attendance, and, despite interruptions, he had a good hearing, and a vote in his favour was carried by an overwhelming majority.

THE LABOUR PROGRAMME.

"NO WILD CAT SCHEME."

MR. HUGHES, M.P., EXPLAINS.

MR. COCHRANE AND DARLING HARBOUR.

Last night Mr. Hughes, M.P., the selected Labour candidate for West Sydney, at the Federation Hall, Church Hill, endeavoured in a most incisive manner to bring home to the electors the ways in which the programme of his party affected the daily life of each of them.

"The Labour movement is not a wild cat scheme for making an imaginable heaven upon earth. It is the simplest scheme in the world. Before you can get prosperity it is not sufficient to get on a stump and make complaints against capital. That does not cut ice. If I am in a minority I may make any amount of speeches—but I cut no ice. The only way is to combine until you get a majority into Parliament.

"The question is—what laws do you want? Are you in favour of land monopoly? If you are, don't support me. Are you in favour of the sugar monopoly? Are you in favour of having only one buyer and one seller of sugar in Australia? If you are do not support me.

"There are a dozen industries in Australia to-day in which there is no competition—or practically none. If you want to buy bricks you have got to pay one settled price. If you want to buy timber you will find a fixed price. There is practically a monopoly of coal.

"Now that affects you in this way. You may increase wages, but however high you increase them, it is no use unless you ensure that the price of the things you have to eat—the necessities of life—is not raised at the same time as your wages. If you allow monopoly, the price of those things is beyond competition, and beyond your control.

"And then as to the land. The reason why there is work to do in the city is because there is wealth being produced in the country. And the people who produce it need you in the town here to send products to them or to send their produce away. If there is a drought here you have a bad year. When they are prosperous work is plentiful here. If you could by any means double the number of families in the country you would nearly double your chances of employment in the city, and increase your chances of getting good wages.

"What you want is at the same time to ensure yourselves a decent wage, and to keep the industries going that will create work in this country. Because before we can create a general demand for labour we must have something at the back of it, and that something is wheat, and wool, and beef, and tallow, and butter. And everything that creates those great industries is good for us; and everything that stops them is bad for us.

"We stand for breaking down land monopoly and creating new wealth; and then we shall welcome the immigrant. We want immigrants—yes! but we want them to settle on the land and produce new wealth, where they won't be doing any harm, but will be creating more demand for every one's labour. And the only way to do that is to break down land monopoly and make land available.

"As for the twenty-five shillings—it makes little difference which way it goes. You want the 25s now. We say we guarantee it for 10 years; and after that—if you want it you can have it; and if you don't you can have that way also. It is you who will take it then or leave it. The agreement is only an agreement with yourselves. It is an agreement between John Jones, Commonwealth elector, to pay to John Jones, State elector, 25."

Mr. J. P. Cochrane, the selected Labour candidate for Darling Harbour seat in the State Parliament, after vigorously attacking the State Government for the imprisonment under the Coercion Act of the leaders in the late strike, touched on the housing question in the Rocks area. "The Government," he said, "is going to build tenement buildings—barracks to house a great number of families. If we were at the head of affairs we would have decent cottages, sanitarily equipped with the comforts and decencies of the twentieth century."

Mr. H. Lamond said, "that those men who voted for Mr. Holland, who was splitting the Labour vote in the Federal election with Mr. Hughes, were not voting for Labour. They were voting for the fusion. Those who voted for Mr. Macey, who was splitting the Labour vote in the State election with Mr. Cochrane, were not casting their vote in a way to console the imprisoned strike leaders. They were voting in a way which would make it necessary for still more men to go to gaol before the Labour party had the chance of attaining its ends."

THE RIVERINA TUSSLE.

CLOSE FIGHT PREDICTED.

ALL DEPENDS ON FARMERS.

GANMAIN, Friday.

In the big Riverina electorate a strenuous fight is being waged between the candidates—Mr. Chanter, M.P. (Labour), the present member, and Mr. Jackson (Liberal)—who represent the direct issues Liberalism and Labour. But the voter-splitter, Mr. O'Dwyer, is doing his best to smother the decisive voice of the electors on the opposing issues.

This so-called Independent candidate, Mr. O'Dwyer, while posing as champion of the farmers' interests, is only placing a big obstacle in the way of the accredited Liberal candidate.

Mr. Jackson, who as a public speaker has vastly improved since the last election, when he opposed Mr. Chanter, has created a distinctly favourable impression throughout the electorate. He has spoken at every town and hamlet from Deniliquin to Junee, and as far north as Hillston and Euabalong. Mr. Jackson does not mince matters politically. He has not one policy for the one part of the division and a modified one for another. But he presents the issues in their naked forms. He is essentially a farmers' man. He regards the progressive land tax as antagonistic, not only to the pioneering man with thousands of acres, but to small farmers as well. He strongly advocates land settlement, and the opening of big estates to those ready and capable to take up land; but there is, he maintains, a rational method of accomplishing this desirable object without adding another burden to the many under which those on the land now stagger. He points to the great increase of settlement in Riverina during recent years, and the wonderful advance made in the production of wheat. He points out that the Closer Settlement Act and the private subdivision of estates have made a change in Riverina the results of which are seen in the mushroom growth of scores of small towns. Mr. Jackson is receiving splendid support from the farmers. There are hundreds of families settled on farms in Riverina who have lately come over from Victoria, and these are supporting the Liberal candidate almost to a man.

There is a general shortage of farm labourers in the district, as many have left for the railway construction works in various parts of the State. But in any case their vote is not of first rate importance, as they have no union to properly organise their votes.

Mr. Chanter is only just beginning to realise the strength of his opponent's position, and the knowledge is causing him uneasiness, which he cannot conceal. He is being backed resolutely by the Political Labour League. Labour followers are principally collected in the town and the vote can be more easily applied on polling-day. This is where Mr. Chanter's adherents have the advantage. It is nothing for an elector living in town to walk to the booth and record his vote; but with farmers and those living out of town it becomes a severe test of loyalty to their party. Mr. Jackson is asking for these votes, and his chances are bright, but only so long as the men on the land take the trouble to put their support into practical effect.

Mr. Jackson has now addressed a hundred meetings, and has visited centres not touched by Mr. Chanter. In his recent northern tour he visited Maude Oxley, Wangarlla, Booroorban, Carrathool, Gunbar, Booligal, Hillston, Euabalong, Cudgellico. The women's vote is well organised this time. Mrs. Barrington has visited a large portion of the electorate to organise women, and has met with great success in thickly settled wheat districts of Ganmain, Coolamon, Marrar, and Junee. The women, although apathetic at first, have had their interest awakened, and Mr. Jackson will feel the benefit of their vote. Narrandera, West Wyalong, and Junee are Labour strongholds, and it remains to be seen whether the rural vote, which is largely Liberal, can swamp the town vote. The cause of Liberalism has never been so well organised as it is now. The candidate has been assisted by some of the most prominent Government supporters. The influx of Victorian farmers, who have always voted against Labour, and the advocacy by Mr. Chanter of a progressive land tax, are all in Mr. Jackson's favour. In the opposite scale there is the weight of a well-organised Labour vote. Great issues will depend on the state of the weather on polling day, for the Liberal candidate is relying principally on a big farmers' vote.

THE ELECTORATES.

ROBERTSON.

MR. WILLIS'S PLATFORM.

A FULL, CLEAR STATEMENT.

MUDGEE, Friday.

In the course of an address on Tuesday, Mr. Willis gave a full, clear explanation of his position and platform. He said he had never voted against the principles under which he had been elected. He invited the audience to place before him any reason for the rumour circulated that he was unpopular. There was only one man, to his knowledge, who had supported him once and was now opposed to him. Mr. Willis went on to outline the policy of the fusion party. The fusion, he said, should not be made without the consent of the people. In the press he had stated that the Government were in jeopardy of being thrown out at any time; and time after time he had saved the Government on many vital questions. In explaining the action he had taken in regard to the old-age pension measure, Mr. Willis said, that when the payment of pensions was decided on, it was proposed by the Treasurer that money should be borrowed. He denounced that proposal as being unsound and inconsistent with precedent. The people intended that the pensions should be paid out of revenue, and if he had voted to borrow money for the purpose he would have been afraid to come near them. However, he had friends who supported him, and as a result the Government abandoned the idea of borrowing for the purpose.

Mr. Willis went on to explain why he had taken also a stand against the agreement that would return 25s per capita to the States. He wanted an agreement that would be equitable to New South Wales. By voting against it he had voted for saving £300,000 to New South Wales for all time. He had debated that question to the satisfaction of the leading financiers of the Commonwealth. He said that the agreement was carried by delaying the passing of the measure until the arrival of Mr. Foxton, when it was carried by one vote. He had stuck to his vote from beginning to end, and as far as the referendum was concerned he had no recommendation to make, because the question was to be decided by vote of the people themselves.

Referring to future policy, Mr. Willis said that the wages of workmen in the various States would be arranged on the basis of the living wage, and the operations of the Inter-state Commission would be universal all over Australia. There would be a bureau-in-chief in every State, and branches of these bureaus in every city of Australia, so that a man might inquire as to the conditions and cost of living in any part of the Commonwealth. He believed they would have a majority in the next Parliament, and carry the measure.

Mr. Willis dealt with the defence policy, which, he said, had been approved of by Lord Kitchener. He referred to the naval defence scheme, and the inefficiency of vessels which had been stationed in Australian waters during past years, and concluded a stirring address by quoting from "Hansard" the utterances of Labour members to show that they were socialistic in their policy.

The general opinion is that Mr. Willis will not poll so heavily in Mudgee as in the last election; but his chance of re-election by a substantial majority is believed here to be assured.

THE "RECRUIT VOTER."

LABOUR'S EFFORTS TO CAPTURE.

Labour polled a very considerable vote in Robertson last time. The voting on the occasion for the Liberal, Mr. Willis, was 6780, as against his opponent, Mr. W. J. Johnson (Labour), 5118. But this electorate offers one of the worst examples of the indifference of many of the electors, the voting strength being 26,477. Since then the figures have gone up to 27,631.

The Labour party is making great efforts to capture the new voter—the young man who expresses his opinions at the ballot-box for the first time. Young voters count for very much in a fight like the present. It is certain that a higher percentage of young people poll their votes than those of maturer years. This is due largely to the enthusiasm of youth, and the roseate hues under which many of them view the political outlook. The Labour party recognises this, and it certainly has a pull over this vote, and it is concentrating its attention on it in all the western electorates. This increased voting strength largely represents the natural growth of the population, and it is well that Liberal supporters should endeavour to direct some of it in their direction.

In Mr. W. J. Johnson, the Labour candidate, who was also Labour candidate in 1906, the party has a good man. He comes from Orange, where he is well-known, and it is safe in saying that he will put up a good fight. The enthusiasm of the supporters of the caucus is admirable, and worthy of a better cause. They are congregated more in the towns, and muster very strongly at meetings.

Mr. Johnson in his campaign has placed the progressive land tax right in the forefront. He points out the evils of land monopoly, and the difficulties people have in obtaining land. He receives a good deal of sympathy on these grounds, but the £5000 exemption is not swallowed with the quickness expected of it. The exemption might be reduced at any time if Labour dominated the situation, and the farmer and selector is afraid of that. There are a number of these in the electorate, and they will not hesitate to vote; but their vote will unforunately be counteracted by the farm labourer, the shearer, and the boundary-rider, who all desire to become land monopolists in a small way, and have hopes that this is what a federal land tax will make them.

LANG.

THE LABOUR OBJECTIVE.

MR. CRAWFORD IN DEFENCE.

At Sutherland on Thursday evening a large audience assembled to hear the Labour candidate, Rev. T. S. Crawford. In the opinion of Labour leaders Australia was a land to be proud of, and consequently they encouraged their people to cultivate an Australian sentiment. Some poor-spirited people would place a construction upon this sentence implying disloyalty to the old land. That formed part of the capital of anti-Labourites. (Cheers.) Scots were proud of their native land, but the English did not quarrel with the Scot. They rather applauded his love for Scotia. None had fought to uphold the Empire more courageously than the Scot. So should it be with Australians. That their rejoicing should be considered antagonistic to the older parts of the Empire was without reason, and the accusation of such, without warrant, was unjustifiable. (Cheers.)

The Labour party aimed at preserving Australia for the white races. Racial intermixture and the danger of a lower standard of living were fraught with consequences of too serious a nature to be left without proper safeguards. (Cheers.) An enlightened people would not allow the wealth of Australia to go to the few in an undue proportion, while a well-nourished population would combine with its sense of duty in national defence, which was the physical ability to withstand the onslaughts of other enlightened and agile races. (Cheers.) The sense of patriotism was not independent of the economic conditions obtaining in a country, and the party desired to remove the hindrance to the fullest patriotism which existed by reason of the faulty systems of land tenure and monopoly. With the adjustment of land settlement to the rights of the people would come a warmer feeling of kinship among Australians. (Cheers.) When their men were asked to fight for the defence of their homes the strength of their efforts would be different. The Labour party, recognising the close relationship of economic justice to lively patriotism, made plain its aims of securing the full results of their industry to all producers. The Labour party had no hesitation in saying that private monopolies were a menace to economic justice, both because of the direct and indirect influence upon the work of the people. The position of safety was the ownership of monopolies by the people, and the extension of State and municipal control over such services as were deemed necessary to the common good. Public opinion would prove the guide to every change.

Despite opinions to the contrary socialism in the sense of the control of production, distribution, and exchange wholly by the State, was not the teaching of the Labour platform. The Labour party only proposed nationalisation where a monopoly had been established in any industry. Many had said that Labour was upsetting things. It was time things were upset, yet they must be done in a careful way. The time had arrived when it was necessary for the man with the bags of gold to recognise that the man of labour could not be done without. (Cheers.)

The meeting concluded with a unanimous vote of confidence in the candidate.

EAST SYDNEY.

THE WOMEN VOTERS.

"USE YOUR PRIVILEGE."

The women voters of the Surry Hills section of East Sydney responded well last night to the call of the Woman's Branch of the People's Reform League. They attended in large numbers at St. Michael's Hall, where they were reminded of their responsibilities on April 13.

Mrs. Mosely (vice-president), who had charge of the gathering, was of the opinion that women had acquired the franchise rather too easily, and, therefore, were in danger of not realising the great privilege conferred upon them. Let them not forget it, and exercise it on polling day. After detailing the system adopted in marking ballot papers, Mrs. Mosely reminded her audience that they must keep the names of Gray, Neild, and Pulsford well in mind for the Senate, whilst for the Representatives they knew what to do—vote for Mr. S. E. Lees. (Applause.) The Labour party, she thought was not well named, for there was hardly anyone in this country, which did not possess a large leisured class, who had not to work in some form or other. It did not follow because it was called the Labour party that it had the welfare of the people more at heart than the Liberals. (Hear, hear.) The Liberal party had always stood for equal opportunity and justice. (Applause.) She did not believe in the Labour party's ideals. Its theories sounded fascinating, but the sudden reforms it advocated would not have the permanency of the steady progressive legislation of the other party. (Applause.)

Mrs. Jenkins said: "Next Wednesday is the women's opportunity. There are a great many more women in the East Sydney electorate than men, and if Mr. Lees does not get in it is the women's fault. (Hear, hear.) She, personally, had enough confidence in Mr. Lees to know that he would make a very good member. It would not be the first time he had been in Parliament. He had represented the electors a great many years, and had ever been true to his trust. (Hear, hear.) If there was any woman who, owing to home duties, found it next to impossible to get to the polling booth, she asked some others of them to give her relief, and enable her to do so. (Applause.) Further, if a woman could not get to the booth because she had to attend to her husband's dinner, would some of them attend to the dinner for her? (Laughter.) It was because they wanted better and brighter homes that they were going to vote for Mr. Lees. (Applause.)

Mr. Lees expressed his appreciation of the value of the women's vote. He trusted that they would accept the counsel of the previous speakers, and leave nothing to chance.

DALLEY.

THE LABOUR CANDIDATE.

Mr. Robert Howe, the selected Labour candidate, addressed two meetings last night, one at the corner of Russell and Annandale streets, Annandale, and the other at the Orange Grove Hotel, Balmain-road. At each he had a capital reception, and was accorded a vote of confidence. Messrs. J. B. Mercer, M.L.A., R. Mahony, and others spoke in support.

Mr. Howe has now visited almost every part of the electorate, delivering addresses, and his friends consider that everything points to a large vote being polled in favour of Labour. His advocacy of the progressive land tax meets with general approval, as he points out that for defence purposes a large population is essential, and the lands being locked up prevents the consummation of that object. Great assistance is being given to the candidate by Messrs. Storey, Carmichael, and Mercer, who represent the electors in the Dalley electorate. A rally of the party is to take place in Rozelle, Balmain, Annandale, and Leichhardt on Monday and Tuesday evenings.

COOK.

MR. CLEGG AT NEWTOWN.

Mr. Clegg, the Liberal candidate for Cook had a very good meeting in Forbes-street, Newtown, last night. It was an open-air one, and there were probably 500 persons present. His speech lasted about three-quarters of an hour, and its complexion was given to it by interjections in the earlier part regarding the industrial legislation of the Federal and State authorities. The interjection was in the form of a question reagrding the utility of the Arbitration Court as against the wages boards of the State of New South Wales. Answering it, Mr. Clegg said the Federal Arbitration Court was subject to appeals on technical grounds, while the wages boards tribunals of the State were not. Their duty was to go straight to the crux of the disputes which they were called on to consider, and give such awards as appeared to them to meet the justice of the case. He also referred to his own experience in the Courts, and the comparatively plain-sailing of the wages boards procedure as compared with the Arbitration Court which they had supplanted. As, however, he had another meeting to address in another part of the electorate, he cut his remarks on other aspects of Federal politics short, and answered a number of questions. There were remarks interjected while he was speaking, but they served rather to enable him to touch on matters which might otherwise have been overlooked. After he had concluded his answers to questions, he called for three cheers for Liberalism, which were given, and a counter call for three cheers for Labour was also responded to.

WEST SYDNEY.

MR. HUGHES LEADS STRENUOUS LIFE.

In the West Sydney electorate Mr. Hughes is regarded by his friends as almost ubiquitous. Meetings in every centre have been addressed by him with characteristic energy, and he has drawn so heavily upon his strength that his friends are urging him to guard against the risk of physical breakdown by easing off the strain under which he is working. These warnings, however, are disregarded.

"It will be time enough to rest," said Mr. Hughes, last evening, "when the polling booths close on Wednesday. Till then I will spare no effort to carry the Labour cause to the front, and to show that, notwithstanding the extension of the revolutionary socialist party, the loyalty to our cause of all true Labour men is unshaken. Of course, I regret being called upon to fight two opposing forces at the same time. I would infinitely prefer a straight-out contest with the representative of the fusion Government; still, I feel secure in the fact that the Labour party has never yet failed me, and, provided my supporters do not make the fatal mistake of over-confidence, there should be no danger of the West Sydney seat passing over to the care of our political opponents."

COWPER.

A FARMERS' ELECTORATE.

THREE CANDIDATES.

The Liberal organisers say that the Cowper electorate is one in which the Liberal candidate can only be defeated in one event—if the Liberal voters are apathetic.

The Liberal candidate is Mr. J. Thompson, M.P., a hard-working, painstaking member. He is an experienced parliamentarian, an old State member, who was eventually defeated in 1904 by Mr. J. H. Young, at Taree. He then stood for the last Federal election, and was returned on a split vote.

Mr. Thompson is one of the few New South Wales Liberals who is a protectionist by fiscal belief. But, with the fusion of parties, that controversy closed, and both free-traders and protectionists are supporting him. He has given special attention to the wants of his electorate, and for the last three months has been conducting an extensive campaign through it. It extends over most of the North Coast district, and contains, amongst other towns, Grafton, Kempsey, and Camden Haven. The Manning and Clarence rivers run through it. It stretches along the coast from Seal Rocks to Evans' Head.

The executive of the Political Labour League in Cowper selected Mr. Clem. Johnson, of Moree, to contest this seat. Mr. Johnson immediately got to work, and has practically covered the whole electorate. Some of the Labour candidates for the Senate have also addressed meetings in the towns, and Mr. M'Gowen, leader of the State Labour party, early in this year spoke at all the principal towns on the North Coast. Mr. Johnson is supported by Mr. Gardem at Taree, and Mr. W. Cahill at Grafton, with strong committees. The recent rains have seriously interfered with campaigning work. But Mr. Johnson has covered a large amount of country in spite of them.

The difficulty in which Labour finds itself in this electorate is, however, very great. The Labour candidate at the last election was Mr. O'Brien. He was not selected for the present election, and he determined to contest it as an Independent Labour candidate.

There is thus a split in the Labour vote in Cowper. Both Labour candidates are travelled men. Mr. O'Brien is a chemist by profession, and was until lately at Southern Cross in Western Australia. Mr. Clem. Johnson is said to be a typical bushman, of much energy and ability. He is the son of a sailor, and as a boy lived partly in England and partly on the Continent; and he knows something of the Norwegian, Swedish, German, and Danish languages. He has been secretary of the Moree Political Labour League for many years.

On the other hand, the Liberal organisers say they do not consider Mr. Clem. Johnson a very dangerous opponent in this electorate, where the electors consist mainly of farmers and farm hands, because Mr. Johnson is understood to be a firm believer in land nationalisation, which is hardly likely to command any support on the North Coast, except amongst a few discontented citizens in the towns.

"It was Mr. Clem. Johnson," said Mr. Parkhill, secretary of the Liberal and Reform League, yesterday, "who brought up the motion of the Labour conference of 1909 calling upon Mr. G. A. Jones, M.L.A. for Moree, and Mr. H. E. Horne, M.L.A. for Liverpool Plains, to show cause why they should not be reprimanded for denying that land nationalisation was a plank in the Labour party's platform. There is only one thing by which Liberalism could lose at the Cowper seat—the apathy of the electors.

The Liberal authorities are especially emphatic on the point that it is necessary for the Liberal electors in Cowper to go to the poll to vote for the three Liberal senators, as they need every vote than can be given to them, and the loss of the three Senate seats would far more than nullify even the gain of a seat in the other House.

LIBERAL SLACKNESS.

WINGHAM, Friday.

Despite the fact that the Federal elections are so close no great amount of interest appears to be manifested in them here. The only party that seems to have given close attention to Wingham is the Labour party. Mr. J. O'Brien (the Independent Labour candidate for Cowper) spoke here; then Mr. M'Dougall (one of the Labour bunch for the Senate) came along; while on Wednesday night Mr. C. Hogan spoke in support of the selected Labour candidate for Cowper. On the Liberal side we have only heard Mr. Thomson.

This contest will to a certain extent test the strength of Labour as far as the Gloucester State seat is concerned. One thing seems pretty certain as far as politics go, and that is if the Liberal party desires to more than hold its own in New South Wales it will have to pinch itself into a condition of wakefulness and do more organising work. It is freely remarked up here that if support is worth having it is worth asking for from the public platform; and if the Labour party can find men and women ready and willing to stump the country in the interests of the cause and the platform it advocates, then surely those associated with Liberalism can manage to do likewise.

POLITICS AND RELIGION.

"DON'T WANT A GOLDEN CROWN."

A LABOUR LEADER'S CREED.

Mr. Stephen Barker, secretary of the Melbourne Trades Hall council, is now a candidate for a Victorian seat in the Senate. His views on religion as related to politics are interesting. When speaking at the Sydney Trades Hall one night a while ago he put them this way:—

The labour movement was a noble one. When he heard men talking about their religion and politics, and then found them voting for "Fusionites" and "wowserites" he wanted to know what kind of Labourites were they? What kind of men were they if they were prepared to stultify their interests for the purpose of saying that their religion was a little better than the other fellow's. "We don't believe in the golden crown, and golden harp theory," he proceeded. "If there is anything in it at all, let us have it here, and when we go there we'll find out if we're going to have all these things which are superfluous, useless, and of no value. What good would it be to you or I to sit on a golden throne, and wear a golden crown, when we know that those we loved dearest were left starving? No God would create a heaven where that existed. Heaven of that kind is only a dream of the vaguest and wildest kind. We must bring men to realise that there is one movement, one hope, one salvation, one faith, one aim—the Labour movement, the grandest that ever men put their minds to forward."

THE MARKSMAN.

HOW THE BLIND MAN CAN VOTE.

PHYSICAL INFIRMITIES NO BAR TO FRANCHISE.

The elector who is unable to write his name, or who for some reason of bodily infirmity cannot fill in and sign the papers, can vote just the same as anyone else. There is some misapprehension as to the form to be gone through. The presiding officer at the polling place alone can mark the ballot papers for any person unable to do so. If there are scrutineers present they must witness the marking of the vote. If there are no scrutineers the poll clerk or some person appointed by the voter may witness it. The right of a person to appoint as a witness some person who is not an official is contingent upon there being no scrutineers in attendance. The voter cannot bring in anyone he or she likes from outside.

"ABSENT" VOTING.

IF YOU ARE AWAY FROM HOME:

HOW TO DO IT.

An elector who is absent from the division in which he is enrolled may vote in another division within the State in which that enrolment took place, at any polling place presided over by a divisional returning officer or an assistant returning officer. Most polling places within the metropolitan area are presided over by an assistant returning officer, and absent voters, provided they are electors of New South Wales, may record their votes thereat.

The Town Hall, the Manchester Unity Hall in Castlereagh-street, St. John's School Hall, in Darlinghurst, and the Exhibition Building in Prince Alfred Park are places where absent votes may be recorded.

An absent voter is required to state the name of the division and the subdivision of that division for which he is enrolled. These particulars are necessary for filling in a declaration which must be made.

A correspondent writes:—"I would like to ask you to define the position of an elector who has left (permanently) the division for which he is enrolled since the issue of the writs. Is he entitled to vote for the division where enrolled, or is he disfranchised?"

"An elector who has left, say, North Sydney, and taken up his residence at Balmain, may on Wednesday go over to Milson's Point, or whatever division of the electorate he may have previously been in, and record his vote there. That is to say he votes in the ordinary way at the place for which he was enrolled. If he is at some remote suburb he may avail himself of the system of voting by post, as explained in yesterday's issue."

LABOUR AND PROTECTION.

BROKEN HILL, Friday.

Mr. Josiah Thomas, M.P., in the course of an interview to-day, referring to Mr. Deakin's remarks about the Labour party, and the new protection, insisted that Mr. Deakin was grossly mis-representing the Labour party when he asserted (and in spite of denials, reiterated the assertions) that protection was not one of the planks of the Labour platform. New protection, Mr. Thomas pointed out, was one of the leading planks of the Labour platform. The new protection to which the Labour party was pledged was complete protection, protection for the manufacturer and producer, protection for the workmen, and protection for the consumer.

"STORY OF SAXPENCES."

THRIFT IN NEW SOUTH WALES.

SAVINGS BANK VALEDICTORY.

At the Australia Hotel last evening the vice-president and trustees of the Savings Bank of New South Wales entertained at dinner Mr. John Kidd and Mr. D. Mitchell prior to their departure to represent the institution at the Centenary celebrations in Edinburgh. Mr. E. Fosbery presided.

After the usual loyal toast, the chairman proposed "Our Guests," and wished them a prosperous voyage. This centenary of savings banks was no insignificant matter. When citizens denied themselves in order to make provision for a rainy day, they made better citizens, and gave a stability to the body politic which was the best answer to socialism. (Applause.) They were proud of the institution to which they belonged, and Messrs. Kidd and Mitchell had nothing to be ashamed of in representing them in Edinburgh. When in 1832 the institution was founded the deposits were insignificant. Now they amounted to over £7,000,000, and with their big brother institution made a total of £20,000,000 for a State of only 1,500,000 people. That was the finest advertisement their guests could give to the people of Great Britain.

Mr. J. R. Carey, in supporting the toast, said they were sending their guests to Scotland, the father and mother of bookkeeping, and the place where they knew the value of "saxpence." (Laughter.)

Mr. R. Warden, Commissioner for the Government Savings Banks, said that the savings banks had encouraged thrift throughout Australia. The information about Australia that they would give would do a great deal of good. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. John Kidd, in response, referred to the early days of banking in the State. He had come from Scotland when only 18 years of age, and could speak of the bank crises of '66 and '93. The latter was due entirely to undue speculation, but the State had recovered marvellously. He thought that they would not suffer another such crisis here. Things were on a sound footing this time. Every crisis was caused through the operations of the younger men, who thought the old men knew nothing. They could show men who wanted to better themselves inducements to come to Australia. They could show that £33,000,000 came to Australia for the wool clip. He did not believe in socialism. He believed in men relying on themselves. (Applause.)

Mr. D. Mitchell said that the first Savings Bank was instituted in Dumfries in 1810. Their own was founded in 1832. When he joined the bank 47 years ago they had a staff of six. Now they had 70, apart from the country. Then the number of depositors was 16,332, and the deposits amounted to £767,947. Now there were 125,870 depositors, who deposited in the bank £6,847,153. (Hear, hear.) They had throughout followed a liberal conservative policy. Deposits were restricted to £200. Mr. Robert Campbell, continued Mr. Mitchell, held the honour of being the founder of Australasian Savings Banks. As early as January, 1819, he received deposits in George-street, Sydney. The first regular savings bank was founded by a meeting of the inhabitants on June 5, 1819, Governor Macquarie being in the chair. Their own bank was founded in 1832, and was lodged in the Barrack-street premises in 1850. In 1832 their reserve was only £25, now it was £392,975. Then the deposits were but £2981, now they were £6,847,153. Then the average amount to the credit of each depositor was £17, now it was £54. For every £1 liability they had £1 1s 1½d assets. (Applause.)

Mr. G. S. Littlejohn proposed the health of the vice-president, and referred to the valuable services rendered to the bank by Mr. Fosbery. In his opinion the Savings Banks were the greatest cures for wild-cat socialism. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. T. Jessep supported the toast, and Mr. Fosbery responded.

THE PREMIER AT BRAIDWOOD.

REPLIES TO OPPONENTS.

BRAIDWOOD, Friday.

Mr. C. G. Wade arrived here yesterday afternoon by motor car, and was accorded a civic reception. In the evening he addressed a crowded house in the Literary Institute in the interest of Mr. Herbert A. Beegling, the Liberal and reform candidate. He was enthusiastically received. He pointed out the important duties devolving on the electors on election day. He scathingly denounced base fabrications uttered by the members of the Labour party against the Government. He reviewed at some length the work done by the Government during the past two and a half years, particularly the industrial legislation, showing that the clauses of the measure in force now so much denounced by labourites and termed the coercion Act, were really passed by the Lyne Government in 1900, backed up by the Labour party. He claimed that trade unions had increased by 29 during the past two years, and the membership by 30,000, and said if the same conditions arose the Government would act again as it did in the late strike, and enforce the penal clauses of the law.

Regarding the charge of instigating trial by Judge without a jury, he said it was baseless, as it was incorporated in the Act of 1900, which was supported by the Labour party.

The settlement policy of the Government was fully discussed, Mr. Wade quoting figures to show that 150 estates, totalling one and a half million acres, had been subdivided, providing for two thousand purchasers. To further help the settlers the trunk lines of railways would be duplicated, thus enabling produce of all descriptions to be sent to market in reasonable time. He advised the electors to vote for the Liberal ticket on election day, and to vote yes on the financial agreement, and on the question of State debts. He claimed the Liberal policy was founded on practical experience, and was a proven policy, every opportunity being given to every man to rise from the lowest to the highest position. He was determined that the supremacy of the law must be respected. At the conclusion of the meeting, which was of the most orderly and enthusiastic nature, cheers were given for the Liberal party and the Premier.

A CRIMINAL AT LARGE.

FIRE AT BATHURST.

BATHURST, Friday.

Early this morning a fire broke out in a house occupied by Harry Rea, South Bathurst. It was completely destroyed, together with furniture, excepting a piano. The origin of the fire is unknown. The property was uninsured.

A gasfitter who was looking for an escape of gas at the residence of Mr. T. Kenny, Wolseley-street, Drummoyne, yesterday afternoon struck a match. An explosion occurred, which damaged the verandah a little, and blew out a partition. The surrounding woodwork caught fire, and the gasfitter (who was uninjured), with the assistance of some other men trained a garden hose on the spot. They had just put out the flames when the fire brigade galloped up. The damage may cost £5 to repair.

FINANCIAL.

A WARNING TO DIRECTORS.

A correspondent points to a recent decision of Mr. Justice Jelf, in the action Landes v Marcus and Davids, which he considers deserves more attention than it has hitherto received from the professional and the mercantile classes. Under this judgment a person who signs cheques in a representative capacity as manager for a private firm or director of a company, or treasurer or secretary of a club or association may be quite easily involved in personal liability. A Mr. Landes received a cheque for £37 in payment for goods supplied to B. Marcus and Co., Ltd. That cheque was signed by "B. Marcus, director," and "S. H. Davids, director;" and it was not denied that two directors had power to draw cheques on behalf of the company. At the top of the cheque were printed the words, "B. Marcus and Co., Ltd.," and the defendants' plea was that they had signed only as directors of the company, which, and not them personally, the plaintiff should have sued. His Lordship, however, gave judgment for the plaintiff, allowed him High Court costs, and refused even a stay of execution. The grounds advanced for this ruling are so much at variance with the prevailing impression as to render it of practical importance to everyone interested in business. Mr. Justice Jelf held that by section 26 (1) of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (which is the same as section 31, sub-section 1 of the Federal Act), the title of the company on the top of the cheque did not exonerate the signatories from personal liability, inasmuch as "in drawing this cheque the defendants had not stated that they were doing so on behalf of the company, but they had added words showing that they had signed in a representative capacity, and that brought them exactly within the words of section 26 (sub-section 1)." Now section 26, sub-section 1, of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (section 31, sub-section 1 of the Federal Act), which has apparently governed this decision, is as follows:—"Where a person signs a bill as drawer, or acceptor, and adds words to his signature indicating that he signs for and on behalf of the principal, or in a representative character, he is not personally liable thereon; but the mere addition to his signature of words describing him as an agent, or as filling a representative character, does not exempt him from personal liability."

The word "director," therefore, unless followed by the words "for and on behalf of the company," in the words of the sub-section, "does not exempt him from personal liability." The condemned method of signing cheques is still so largely practised that some means of making this judgment known seem desirable, for no appeal against it appears to have been lodged, and meanwhile a great number of innocent people stand to be legally subject to very disastrous consequences.

BANK ABSTRACTS.

The chief features of the average liabilities and assets of the undermentioned banks in the State of New South Wales for the quarter ended March 31, compared with those for the previous quarter, which are given in parenthesis, are as follow:—

Queensland National Bank, Limited.—Deposits not bearing interest, £85,224 (67,214); deposits bearing interest, £355,427 (349,745); coin and bullion, £372,286 (450,047); advances, £283,599 (278,602).

THE A.B.C., LIMITED.

The well-known catering business, conducted by the Aerated Bread Company, Ltd., at 156 and 189 Pitt-street, is to be floated into a public company. This business has been a highly-successful one, and it is thought that by allowing the general public to become directly interested in the business it may even be more successful in the future. Within the course of the next week the prospectus will be published in our columns.

LONDON FINANCIAL CABLE NEWS.

The high bank rate has not prevented the Bank of England from encountering a continued drain on its resources. The reserve has eased by £534,000, and the stocks of gold in the issue department by over £250,000, the proportion of reserves to liabilities having diminished from 44.81 per cent. to 39.55 per cent., against 48.52 per cent. a year ago. The open money market is, however, a shade easier, both as regards "call" money and money for larger periods. The Berlin rate has eased, that of Paris being unchanged. Consols have improved 5s from the exceedingly low rate previously current. Where changes took place in Australian Government stocks they were chiefly in the direction of advances. Metals are irregular, copper being 11s 3d per ton higher, tin £2 2s 6d lower, and lead 3s 9d lower on the week. Bradford tops are described as very firm, butter as firm, and wheat as steady.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The Darling River Irrigation Company, Ltd., has been registered with a capital of £6000, in shares of £1 each, to acquire and irrigate land, etc.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

In grocery lines distributing business was brisk. Bulk business covered several tons of three-crown sultanas at /5½, four-crown sultanas at /6¼, three-crown currants at /5¾, five-crown lexias at /5¾, while imported dates sold readily in parcels at /3. In regard to Mildura and Renmark fruit, it was reported that, owing to the damage by weather, the bulk of the fruit this season would be second-grade. Fish generally was quiet, but leading brands of salmon were firm, 150 cases of Scroll talls selling at 9/4½. Local candles were unaltered, but imported descriptions were slightly firmer. Linseed oil continued a trouble to buyers, and it was impossible to execute an order for quantities under 4/6 for first brands raw, other brands being proportionately firm. There was a little more inquiry for fencing wires and nettings at unaltered prices. Wheat was slow, neither buyers nor sellers paying much attention to the market. In the general produce markets maize eased /2 per bushel, pickling onions were 5/ per ton cheaper. Butter was weak. Other lines were quiet.

THE SUGAR MARKET.

Reporting on the sugar market, Messrs. William Connal and Co. on February 28 said:—"The deficiency in the beetroot crops is now being severely felt in restricted supplies and in daily stiffer prices for these descriptions. This has caused refiners to direct special attention to cane sugars for early and distant arrival, which have been fully 3d and 6d per cwt. cheaper than beetroot. The principal business has been in British West India, of which the most recent transactions have been at 14/6, basis 96 per cent. polarisation for centrifugal Trinidad and Antigua, at 13/ basis 89 per cent. polarisation for Muscodavo Jamaica, Barbadoes, and St. Kitts, and at 12/1½ for Peruvian syrups, all on floating terms. . . . The improvement of the past few days has been due in great measure to restricted supplies of beetroot and to modified estimates being received of the Cuban crop. It is now considred unlikely that the original expectations of an overwhelming crop will be realised, and the unexpected reduction of receipts in ports last week would seem to confirm this opinion. Any material shrinkage of the Cuban crop, following the deficient beetroot crop, might cause difficulty in securing sufficient supplies for the wants of the summer months, unless the present rate of consumption should be checked by a higher range of values, or sugars should be attracted here from presently unforeseen quarters. The prospect of a record Cuban crop caused the grocery trade throughout the country to curtail their usual forward purchases of foreign refined, and in consequence they have been free to supply their wants from British manufacturers, and this has enabled our refiners to obtain a good day-by-day demand for their produce, and has encouraged them to make more extensive purchases of the raw material. The American markets have advanced 1/ for raw and /5 for refined during the month, and refiners there will doubtless so advance their limits to Cuba as to prevent any further extensive shipments of these sugars to Europe. Canadian refiners have likewise secured considerable quantities of Cuban, as well as of British West Indian sugars at prices higher than those now ruling in the British markets. The area to be planted for the next beetroot crop is reported to have been in great measure arranged, and is not likely to exceed 5 per cent. increase in any country except Russia, where a more important addition to the sowings is likely to be made."

BREADSTUFFS.

Wheat yesterday was very quiet. London remained in an inactive mood, the quittance of cargoes being difficult at over 39/. Operators there were disposed to stand aside pending more definite developments in the market position. On spot attractive parcels could have found a market at 4/1½, but shippers were inclined to settle on a basis of 4/1. Very little wheat was offering, sellers being much in the same mood as buyers—waiting for indications of the market's temper.

Flour stood unchanged. Nominal convention quotation, £10/5/; export quotations, £8/15/ to £8/17/6.

TRADE IN SUSSEX-STREET.

MAIZE TWOPENCE PER BUSHEL CHEAPER.

PICKLING ONIONS REDUCED.

The Burringbar arrived with her record shipment of 4500 bags of maize from the Clarence River. The grain did not open up with much satisfaction, although it was a better shipment than the last. Half of the consignments consisted of soft grain, whilst the other half was of fair-conditioned maize. With the larger quantity offering salesmen were unsuccessful in securing late rates; before sales could be transacted they had to allow concessions. Eventually the price decided upon was 2d lower than the rate the previous day. All the recent shipment of Melbourne maize has now been cleared, but further consignments are expected to arrive next week. Pickling onions were easier in price, they have not been working off as well as could be expected. At the lower rate it was hoped that the manufacturers would pay them better attention. There are now no prime potatoes to be had from the wharfs, the shipment cleared splendidly. Fodder lines were without any movement worth recording. White oats were in fair demand at yesterday's lower rate.

Current quotations were:—

DAIRY PRODUCE.

A WEAK BUTTER MARKET.

EGG PRICES CHECK DEMAND.

It was the general opinion amongst merchants that butter would be cheaper on Monday. Some of the houses received record supplies from the rivers, chiefly through a few of the steamers being delayed on the Coast. Grocers bought fairly actively, but there was a large surplus on hand. A telegram from Brisbane said that the market there was weak at 10½s. Owing to the Otway not calling a large surplus has accumulated. The Melbourne market is reported dull. Cheese made satisfactory sales. Heavy sides of bacon were put through at a special rate. Eggs were too high to do good business. Grocers were restricting their orders to a large extent. The stocks of new-laid were small. The Clarence River steamer brought 160 cases. Lard was in good demand.

Current quotations were:—

Butter.—First-grade 104/, medium 100/ to 102/, seconds 96/ to 98/, inferior from 86/ per cwt.

Cheese.—Prime loaf and large /5 to /5¼, odd sales /5½, good /4 to /4½, rough /2½ to /3½, special /6½ per lb.

Lard.—Packets, /6 to /6½; bulk, /5 to /5½; special packets, /6½; bulk, /7 per lb.

Hams.—Bacon hams, /10 to /11; prepared, /11 to 1/; special, 1/1 to 1/1½ per lb.

Bacon.—Prime factory, sides /8 to /8½, heavy sides /7 to /7½, flitches /7½ to /8½, minutes /9 to /10; special sides, /9; flitches /8 to /8½, middles /10 to /10½ per lb.

Eggs.—Northern river, 1/2 to 1/4; South Coast and railway, 1/4 to 1/6; box lots, 1/7 to 1/8; suburban new-laid, 1/11 to 2/2; duck eggs, new-laid, choice large 1/7, choice 1/5 to 1/6 per dozen.

Messrs. Mossman and Ellis report having obtained the following prices at their auction sale, Friday, April 8:—Eggs, case to 1/4½, new laid 1/9 to 2/, choice to 2/2, duck to 1/9½ per dozen. Fowls, young roosters 3/3 to 4/9, choice 6/3, small from 2/3; fat hens 3/3 to 3/9, choice 4/6. Ducks, English, 2/9 to 3/3, choice 5/; Muscovy, 3/ to 3/6, choice 3/9; drakes, Muscovy, 4/ to 5/3, choice 6/. Turkeys, hens, medium 6/6 to 7/6, good 8/6, choice 11/; cocks, small 8/ to 10/, medium 11/ to 13/, good 15/ to 17/, prime to 22/, extra to 27/ per pair; geese to 6/; guinea-fowls to 6/9; pigeons, 1/2 to 1/9; honey to /3 per lb; carcase pork to /6 per lb; carcase veal to /2½ per lb. Good demand for best graded new laid eggs. A very large supply of poultry received fair competition, but proved rather above requirements, and prices were irregular.

APIARY PRODUCTS.

So scarce was Western honey that one merchant was asking up to 4d for some samples. The brands were plentiful and quiet of sale.

Current quotations were:—

Honey.—Western, 60lb tins, choice /3½, prime /3 to /3½, good /3 to /3½; Northern river, /3 to /3½, rough and candied /1½ per lb.

Beeswax.—Prime clear, 1/1 to 1/3, dark, 1/ to 1/1 per lb.

POULTRY.

The quality of the birds were not so good, and the supplies were large. A number of small and inferior turkeys were finding their way to market. Hens and roosters were about 6d cheaper all round. Other rates were weak.

The following prices were realised:—

Old hens, choice 2/6, good, 3/ to 3/3; roosters, choice 4/6, good 3/ to 4/; chickens, large 2/6, grillers 1/ to 2/; mixed coops, 3/ to 3/3; English ducks, 2/ to 2/9; geese, choice 5/6, good 5/; Muscovy ducks, 3/ to 4/6; drakes, 4/6 to 5/; turkey gobblers, choice 15/, good 12/, light 4/6 to 8/; turkey hens, choice 9/ to 10/, good 5/ to 8/; guineafowls, 4/6 to 5/6; pigeons, 1/2 to 1/6 per pair.

The following prices were realised:—

Best boxwood, 18/ to £1, good 16/ to 17/; ironbark and stringy, 11/ to 17/; bakers' wood, 13/, good 12/ to 12/6 per ton.

AUCTION SALES.

REDFERN RAILWAY MARKET.

At the Redfern station auction saleyards, the supply of farm produce was small but was well within the wants of the small attendance of buyers, who showed very little eagerness to operate. Chaff, as usual, formed the bulk of the sale, there being 26 truckloads out of a total of 39 trucks offered. Rates were practically unchanged, choice wheaten realising 4/4, prime 3/10 to 4/, medium to good 3/ to 3/7. Oaten chaff commanded from 2/7 to 3/7. Lucerne hay was not on the market. Prime Algerian oats sold at 1/10½, barley 2/9½ to 3/4, wheat 3/10. Pumpkins found buyers at from 29/ to 31/ per ton, and potatoes at from 4/2 to 5/6 per cwt.

MINING.

LEAD FLUCTUATING, MARKET SLACK.

There were very few signs of vigour about the market yesterday morning. This is possibly explainable by reason of the instability of the metal market, as far as regards lead, the price, after recovering 2/6 on Wednesday, receding 1/3 on Thursday.

Then, again, the London Stock Exchange appears to have shown very little buoyancy on Thursday in Australian silver shares; whilst the continued silence of the cables respecting the price of copper has doubtless a tendency to restrict speculation.

Hence, it was not surprising to find that business was confined to two stocks each in the silver, copper, and gold sections, and three in the tin section. In the case of silver shares, the announcement of the manager of the B.H. Junction mine regarding the operations of the new mill had the effect of firming the scrip. Outside British (old), Sulphide Corporation, ordinary, Zinc Corporation, preference, and Amalgamated Zinc, contributing, there was no buoyancy in the buying offers for Barrier shares, but it was also noticeable that holders did not show any disposition to mark down prices.

In the copper section, Tolwong Minerals were steadily supported at late rates, the same being the case with Budgery. Steady buying offers were also made for Cobar Gladstone, Great Fitzroys, Queen Bee, and Kyloe Copper, with a few inquiries for Mount Morgans, Grafton Copper, Lobb's Hole, and O.K. Copper. In the case of tin shares Tongkah Harbour Tin were not taken under late rates, Vegetable Creek, paid, eased a shade, whilst a line was booked in Briseis.

There was no improvement in the afternoon. Indeed, if anything, matters were duller than during the earlier portion of the day. This applied to all classes of stocks. B.H. Junction finished up steady, but B.H. Junction North weakened a fraction. Sandstone Development maintained a steady position, the same being the case with Vegetable Creek Tin, paid.

MINING NOTES.

During the four weeks ending March 26 the Myalls of Peak Hill Company treated 3316 tons, for 350oz. The Krupp ball mill, which is to be installed, is now on the mine, and should be at work in a few weeks.

The following gold yields are reported:—Araluen Central, No. 1 dredge, 28oz; Araluen Redbank, 90oz 11dwts. The latter company has declared a dividend of 3d per share, payable on April 29. The transfer books close on April 26.

The manager of the Tolwong Block-up Mines reports as follows: "We have driven the crosscut on lead, show a further 6ft, making a total of 14ft. This was all through the lode formation, but I think we have now reached the outside of the lode. We got some very good ore in the crosscut. This ore we have put on the plat. The footwall of the lode is a soft slate formation, and the lode appears to go down almost vertical. We shall now drive along the lode taking out about 4ft of it as we go."

At the Iron Duke copper mine, in the Alberta mining district, at the 165ft level, the contractors have driven south the full width of the drive (4ft 6in), with ore still in the footwall side of the drive and in face. This ore, by assay, varied from nearly 4 to 13½ per cent for copper, and a trace to 6dwt of gold per ton. The north drive is now in 25ft, and much improved during the last 13ft of driving. A fresh contract has now been let, to continue the north drive a further 50ft, and this is now being rushed on with all speed. Railway communication with this promising field is badly needed, and it is hoped that the extension of the line from Tullamore to Orange Plains will soon be put in hand. This line would link up the Iron Duke and Alberta (silicious ore) mines with the Tottenham (basic ore) mines, and a scheme is now on foot to amalgamate several of the most promising propositions.

GREAT COBAR, LIMITED.

The output of Great Cobar, Limited, for the four weeks ended April 3 was as follows:—

Blister copper produced at Cobar, 541 tons.

Gold, 1174oz,

Silver, 9553oz.

The reduced output was due to the Easter holidays.

NEW HILLGROVE PROPRIETARY MINES.

Mr. J. S. Richardson, attorney for the above company, states respecting the New Hillgrove section of the property:—"This section is now let to several parties of tributers, all of whom are on good stone. Some of the best returns are 65oz 16dwt from 3 tons, 22oz 13dwt from 2½ tons, 29oz 9dwt from 3 tons, 25oz from 2½ tons, 30oz 16dwt from 4 tons, and 89oz 18dwt from 4½ tons. All the levels formerly under tribute to the Hillgrove Tribute Company have been re-let. From the No. 13 level, vacated by such company, a tributer has cleaned up from the sandstone reef 6oz 12dwt from half a ton of stone."

MINING IN THE STATE.

YAMBULLA, Friday.

The Yambulla Mines, Limited, have commenced the erection of their new battery and winding plant. The former consists of 10 1000lb stamps, with all the latest improvements, and was made by James Martin and Co., engineers, Gawler, South Australia. The mill is being erected on the mine close to the shaft, and will be supplied with water from a pumping station on the Yambulla Creek. In the mine development work is in full swing. A level is being driven west at 280ft, where the lode is 15ft wide.

ROCKLEY, Friday.

At the Warden's Court an application for a three months' suspension by the Prosper Mining Company, on mineral leases, 10,490, and 24, portions Nos. 2 and 14, parish of Baring, was granted for the period asked.

NYNGAN, Friday.

At the Bonnie Dundee mine during the past week, the south drive was extended 8ft, total from the crosscut 28ft. The north drive was extended 6ft, total 31ft. The lode in both drives is of the same width, and the class of ore is the same as previously reported. The quantity of ore on the surface is 240 tons.

At the annual meeting of shareholders of the Bonnie Dundee Mining Company, at which over 23,000 shares were represented, the report and balance-sheet were read and received, and the retiring directors, Messrs. Draper, Flashman, Barringer, Sloane, and Payne were re-elected for the ensuing year. The report set out that since last report the machinery and winding plant have been erected and paid for in full, and the company now possesses a plant capable of meeting all requirements for some time to come. The main shaft had been sunk from 300ft to 415ft, and timbered. A cross-cut at the 400ft level cut the lode at 39ft. It consisted of nice-looking black and yellow ore. The cross-cut was extended to 60ft, and an assay of samples of ore taken from the 42ft point resulted as follows:—Copper, 9.06 per cent.; gold, 1dwt 7grs; and silver, 2oz 4dwts 10grs. A general assay sample taken from across the full width of the lode showed:—Copper, 6.7 per cent.; gold, 2dwts 1½grs; and silver, 2oz 5dwts. This is regarded as very satisfactory, as the width of the lode has been proved to be 12ft. This shows that the gold values have increased, and indicates that the gold met at at the 292ft level retains its consistency 180ft lower down. It has been decided to send 50 tons of ore away for treatment, and will probably be followed up by further consignments. The development work comprises:—No. 1 main shaft, 100ft; main shaft sunk to a depth of 415ft and connected by a drive with No. 1 shaft; a cross-cut of 60ft at the 292ft level, and a 50ft drive north; another cross-cut east at the 400ft level to 60ft, and 25 and 15ft of driving north and south respectively along the line of lode, besides other drives in No. 1 shaft, most of which are in values. The balance-sheet showed a credit balance of £117 16s 11d, against a debit of £29 6s at the commencement of the year.

CARCOAR, Friday.

The Lyndhurst Railway and Mines, Ltd., and Junction Reefs, resumed work on April 1, but with only a bare month's water supply available in their dam. Unless good rain falls within that time they will again be compelled to close down. The company is particularly anxious to avoid a further stoppage. The last one entails considerable trouble and expense in the restarting of the furnace and plant. Though the season has been a good one for the farmer generally, it has been a very bad one for the miner. It is a matter for regret that mining in this and the surrounding districts has been so hampered for want of a good heavy downpour.

About 100 tons of reef stone were carted from the Duchess of Fife mine to the battery for crushing, but must remain untouched till further rain falls. The new work of sinking and driving at the Salisbury is going well ahead at a depth of about 80ft, without much change of country. Wash has been struck in the La Victor, and some nice prospects washed indicate 15 and 20 dwt. dirt. At the Cadia Hills gold mine, work has been hung up for some time through scarcity of water, which is drawn from Oaky Creek. The manager is at present considering the erection of a steamer pumping plant, to enable him to start as early as possible.

PAMBULA, Friday.

The Diorite mine cleaned up yesterday 90oz of gold from 180 tons treated by cyanide. This was the result of one month's work.

BROKEN HILL MINES.

WANT OF LABOUR BEING FELT.

BROKEN HILL, Friday.

Now that mining work on the Barrier is improving, the want of men is again being felt. Both special artisans and labourers are required, and if things go on as they appear likely to do, another 2000 men may be required by the end of May for underground and surface work. The Broken Hill South mine, for instance, had 1118 men working at the end of December, before the coal trouble became serious and the mine was shut down, but has now 1231 men on the payroll, including 395 on the surface and 836 underground. The Broken Hill Junction and Broken Hill Block 10 have put on additional men lately, and there is every chance of the Broken Hill Block 14 and the British Broken Hill requiring many men in May. In the meantime, the Broken Hill Proprietary and Broken Hill Block 10 will want men all round. Except for the value of lead in England, the outlook is good. Business people, both wholesale and retail, report a betterment in business.

BROKEN HILL JUNCTION COMPANY.

"ACTIVE AND AGGRESSIVE POLICY."

MELBOURNE, Friday.

"An active and aggressive policy" is the phrase used by the directors of the Broken Hill Junction Lead Mining Company, to describe the work being done by them since they replaced the old board. The board are satisfied with the present aspect of affairs. They have not hesitated to make calls, and they announce now that they are hopeful of being able to carry through the financial arrangements that will render it unnecessary to ask the shareholders to contribute further. Summed up, the company has bought the Australian Metal Company's plant at Broken Hill for £2950, and has in that way been enabled to make larger additions to the surface and milling plant. The lode at 1000ft has been struck, and in opening up the workings underground, ore bodies have been found which have so increased the ore reserves that they now total 428,000 tons. The actual outlay on the mine for the term was £7627, and on plant £7701. Sundry creditors are owed £1281; and the overdraft amounts to £2507. On the other side, sundry debtors stand at £3833.

TIN-MINING.

INDUSTRY VERY ACTIVE.

EMMAVILLE, Friday.

Generally speaking, this field is in a prosperous condition, and it is a number of years since so many men were employed. In the course of a few months the number will be increased, as there are a couple more dredging plants to go up, besides the extra hands that will be required for the development of the Deep Lead.

The Great Britain No. 2 plant was given a couple of trial runs last week, and with the exception of a few defects the machinery worked satisfactorily. New liners had to be put in the pumps, and by the end of the present week the plant will be working full time.

Schumacher and Sturbridge are busy placing the new engines in position and effecting other improvements, and expect to have everything ready to commence sluicing about a fortnight hence.

Last week 14 tons of tin and half a ton of wolfram were despatched from the Deepwater railway station. The wolfram came from F. Donoghue's claim.

In the Gulf district most of the claims are now being worked which were thrown idle through the heavy rains.

The Bouveret Syndicate is putting through good dirt, and the plant is working well. Will be cleaning up for the month next week.

At Bourke's Hill both plants are running on average ground, and results are satisfactory. There is ample water supply. Result of last month's clean up will be known this week.

The Y Water dredge is running three shifts on ground carrying late average values, and expects the next clean up to be up to the last, which gave over 26 tons dressed. The laying of the pipe-line to the river is progressing. Last week two of the directors and legal manager paid a visit of inspection to the property. There is a good supply of water in the dams.

The Great Britain dredge is running three shifts, the ground being easily treated, and carrying fair tin values. The machinery and everything connected with the plant is working well. Expect an average clean up for the fortnight. Water supply good.

The manager of the Stanthorpe Proprietary bucket dredge reports that during last week the dredge worked 86 hours for a return of 3 tons 12cwt of tin. The logs in the bed of the creek are causing a lot of delay. A contract has been let for excavating the flats on the bank, and 1000 yards per week is being put into the creek. A second contract for a similar amount has been let, and the work will commence this week.

At Kangaroo Flat a party is at work on the dam, and others are clearing the bed of the creek. A start has been made to erect the plant. There is about 90 tons of machinery now on the grounds.

The manager of the Vegetable Creek Company reports on April 6:—"The west drive has been extended 44ft, and is now in a total distance of 217ft in good average wash. Since last report this drive has taken another turn of about 75 degrees to the south. East drive off No. 1 south has been extended 27ft, and holed through. West drive off No. 1 south has been extended 24ft. Operations have been resumed in east drive or up the lead, but on account of the hard bottom there is little to report. Body's prospecting shaft is now down 33ft in very hard basalt. Tin obtained for the week, 4 tons 2cwt."

The Tent Hill Company are sluicing fair ground, and will be cleaning up this week.

Locally tin is quoted at £88 per ton, and a fair number of small parcels are coming forward.

SPORTING.

THE TURF.

The autumn racing campaign at Randwick will be brought to a close this afternoon, when City Tattersall's Club holds its re-union; the summer meeting of the South Australian Jockey Club takes place at Morphettville; Victorian sportsmen assemble at Epsom; Ipswich Jockey Club will provide an outing for metropolitan sporting folk in Queensland; and in Western Australia a meeting will be held at Belmont Park.

The following race meetings have been granted registration by the Australian Jockey Club:—Murrumburrah Turf Club (May 18 and 19), Warren Jockey Club (June 23 and 24), Walgett Jockey Club (June 22 and 23), Eugowra Jockey Club (May 18), and Angledool Jockey Club (May 4 and 5).

The scratchings recorded yesterday in connection with City Tattersall's Club autumn meeting were Claydon Common out of the Hurdle Race, Blue Band, Blue Point, and Nicosia out of the Youthful Stakes, Medallurgy and Footpad out of City Tattersall's Handicap; and Medallurgy and San Pedro out of the Club Welter.

The sum of £360 has been provided by the Warwick Farm Racing Club for the half-dozen events on the card for its April reunion on the 23rd instant, of which £100 endows the Warwick Handicap, £60 the Hurdle Race, and £50 each of the other events, which include a race for two-year-olds. Nominations will be received by the secretary, Mr. P. A. Oatley, up to 4 p.m. on Monday next.

Though the Grafton horse Wai-Ila failed to earn a winning bracket at Randwick, his visit to this side of the Murray was by no means profitless, for he broke the return journey at Albury, where, on Thursday last, he secured a double, the first leg of which was the Albury Handicap, and with the customary penalty in the saddle, he accounted for the Final Handicap on the same day.

Up to 5 p.m. on Monday next Mr. H. Cobcroft, secretary, will receive nominations for the seven events on the programme for the pony and galloway race meeting which takes place at Victoria Park on Saturday, the 16th instant. The prize-money totals £300, of which £70 each goes to the V.P. Hurdles Race and V.P. Handicap.

Patrons of trotting will be provided with an outing at the Epping racecourse on Monday next, when the sport promises to be of a very interesting character, judging from the number and quality of the horses engaged.

The New Zealand racehorse Bobrikoff leaves for his native land this afternoon by the steamer Ulimaroa. The visit of the son of Finland at Randwick has been a profitable one, his victories in the A.J.C. Autumn Stakes and All-aged Stakes crediting his owner, Mr. T. H. Lowry, with £1582. The presence of such good performers is always welcome at Randwick, as it enhances the interest in the racing, and, doubtless, more numerous contingents will come across in the future, attracted by the big prizes provided by the Australian Jockey Club.

The programme for the Moorefield April meeting is announced, and a glance through it shows a distinct advance in the prize-money, which, on this occasion, totals £660, distributed over half a dozen events, the principal of which are the Moorefield Handicap of 200 sovs, Flying Handicap, Kogarah Stakes, and Scarborough Welter of 100 sovs each, while the Hurdle Race and the Nursery Handicap each carry 80 sovs. Entries must be lodged with the secretary, Mr. E. L. Johnson, before 4 p.m. on Monday, the 18th instant.

The weights for the April meeting of the Wollongong Jockey Club will not be declared until City Tattersall's Club reunion is over. Owing to the absence of the official timekeeper on holidays, Mr. J. Westland will act in that capacity on Tuesday next.

CITY TATTERSALL'S CLUB.

AUTUMN MEETING.

Randwick will be the metropolitan racing rendezvous this afternoon, when City Tattersall's Club's autumn reunion will be the attraction. A very interesting programme is down for discussion, and, with a number of good performers engaged, high-class sport seems assured. Favoured by the late rainfall, the track is splendid going, and the lawns and reserves show very little of any of the wear and tear of the A.J.C. autumn campaign. The transit service by rail includes special trams from Circular Quay, via Oxford-street, from the central station, and from the Newtown-road, via Cleveland-street, while the customary traffic by 'buses and cabs will also be available.

The sport commences at 1.45 p.m. with the Hurdle Race, which promises to attract a good field, and at the weights the chances of Treat, Pharos, Dinyah, Grenfell, and Buckle seem the brightest, and the judge may declare for Pharos, Grenfell, and Treat.

A good race is promised for the Flying Handicap among Gold Thread, Plush, Apple Pie, and Miss Corelli, and the numbers may be hoisted for Miss Corelli, Apple Pie, and Gold Thread.

Well Done, Eris, Beryl Vive, and Little Lill appear to have the settlement of the Novice Handicap among them, and the places may go to Beryl Vive, Little Lill, and Well done.

A large field may be anticipated for the Youthful Stakes, towards the finish of which prominent parts should be played by Sylvander, Gladswood, Cadonia, and Winker, and Sylvander, Cadonia, and Gladswood may pass the post as named.

Marlee, Flaxen, Daisy Chain, Jinnee, and Britain read about the best of the candidates for City Tattersall's Handicap, and Britain, Flaxen, and Jinnee may divide the honours.

The meeting will be brought to a close with the Club Welter, in which Brilliant Boy, Conductor, Doon Lassie, and Lady Hasty should have most to say at the business end of the trip, and Conductor, Brilliant Boy, and Doon Lassie may command the attention of the judge in that order. RUBBER BOOM.

The rubber boom, as it is now generally termed, is occasioning a great deal of speculation, and from week to week advance in prices is reported. Many syndicates have lately been formed for the culture of this valuable product. Para rubber, according to the latest cable reports, commands 11s 6d per lb; some four or five years ago its value was from 2s 6d to 3s per lb. It can therefore be readily understood that commercial men in general, and rubber manufacturers in particular, are greatly inconvenienced by its enormous increase in cost. It is generally held that the advance of the motor vehicle during the past four or five years has been mainly responsible for this. Amongst the large rubber manufacturers, the Peter Union Tyre Company, of London and Birmingham, with 23 branches in all parts of the globe, established a depot some eighteen months ago in Melbourne. The increase of business lately compelled them to move into larger premises in the southern capital, and to open another depot in Sydney.

NEW COMMERCIAL VEHICLES.

Messrs. Alick W. Neil and M'Intosh, Ltd., have received word that the Leyland commercial vehicle is to arrive per steamship Essex, due in Sydney during the next few days. The Leyland Vehicle is regarded as one of the best known in England, being used there largely in conjunction with the railway services. A public demonstration of the new model will be given in the course of a week, of which due notice will be given.

LILY BICYCLE CLUB.

The Lily Club will hold a ten-mile road race over Bunnerong-road on the 16th inst. Entries close with the handicapper on Saturday.

FORBES BICYCLE CLUB.

A ten-mile bicycle road race was held yesterday under the auspices of the Forbes Federal Bicycle Club. There were nine starters. Results:—P. B. Henry, scr, 1 (fastest time, 29m 2-4s); H. Bray, 2; G. Bishop, 3.

MOTORS AND ROYALTY.

The Wolseley Tool and Motor Car Company, Ltd., has been honoured by her Majesty Queen Alexandra with the order for her new motor car. It is to be a powerful six-cylinder car of the latest model, and, unlike the previous car, which was chain driven, will be equipped with live axle. The Royal regard for the Wolseley productions is shown by the fact that this is the third car in succession the company has built for her Majesty.

MOTOR CARS IN THE COUNTRY.

The use of motor cars in the country for stock and station purposes is certainly increasing rapidly. Mr. Lavercombe, of Canowindra, has just purchased a two-cylinder Renault car for cross-country work, and Mr. A. S. Wheatley, of Forbes, has also purchased a two-cylinder Renault for the same purpose. These two cars are similar to the one that ran through the recent reliability contest so satisfactorily. Mr. Wheatley's car ran from Sydney to Forbes, a distance of 290 miles, in a little over a day and a half. Mr. A. W. Everett, of Guyra, drove home from Sydney last week with a new 14-16-h.p. four-cylinder Renault car. He is very pleased with the economic running of his car and its wonderful hill-climbing ability. Mr. J. P. Josephson, civil engineer, of Killara, has just purchased a 16-20 four-cylinder Renault, and, although he has only had the car a week, has already done one country trip down the South Coast of over 500 miles, returning to Sydney, via Nowra and the South Coast. Mr. H. F. Moses, of Burwood, has ordered from the General Motor Company one new 10-12-h.p. four-cylinder Renault car. This is one of the new models being turned out by Renault Freres for 1910, and is not expected to arrive here for some months. Mr. C. E. Colwell, of Walgett, has ordered a 9-10 two-cylinder Renault for use on his country station. This car is exactly similar to that used by Mr. Skinner, of the same town, who has been using his 9-10 two-cylinder Renault car for the last 12 months for his business over the Black Plains. Mr. J. J. Garvan, of Rose Bay, has taken delivery of a new 14-16-h.p. four-cylinder Renault car from the General Motor Company. Mr. Garvan is a great admirer of the Renault cars, this being the ninth Renault car he has purchased from the General Motor Company. Renault cars appear to be gaining a good hold in the country. During the past week the General Motor Company has sold ten Renault cars, most of which are for use in the country, for Wagga, Walgett, Guyra, Tamworth, Forbes, Canowindra, etc.

NEW TAXIS FOR SYDNEY.

The Sydney Taxi-cab Company's cabs are now in full working order, and the popularity of three "Dinsto" cars is assured. The new vehicles are the acme of comfort, and judging by the patronage of the public the powerful four-cylinder vehicles are likely to prove in great demand. A noteworthy feature of the new taxis is their up-to-date green and black striped Limousine bodies. Five more cars are now landing, and the company will be placing these at the public service in quick time.

MOTOR BOATING.

The Motor Boat Club of New South Wales will to-day decide the Albert Cup race, with which is associated the State championship. The competing boats will be Fairbanks and Knoxpots. The race, which is arousing a lot of interest, will start at 4 p.m. The course will be over the usual route—up the harbour, round the Manly buoy, and back to starting point.

UNION CARNIVAL.

GRIFFITH SHIELD WON BY SOUTH SYDNEY.

EXCITING CLUB CONTEST.

The fourth club race night for amateur wheelmen promoted by the Cyclists' Union was held at the Sports Ground last evening. The weather was perfect, and the attendance excellent. During the night a great number of important club races were decided, the various heats and finals being productive of keen sport. The principal race of the programme was the Griffith Shield competition—a three-metres scratch race, open to teams of three from the best clubs. The winners of the race hold the title of champion track club for the year. After a desperate struggle the South Sydney Club was declared the victor. The team got second, third, and fourth places, and won by a margin of nine points from the Redfern club, which beat the fancied Eastern Suburbs by one point. In the race the Eastern club had the race in hand half a lap from home, when, through some error, Schneider, in the lead, when racing Cutcliffe, got caught with Thompson, a fellow-club man. All three fell, thus spoiling the eastern chances of success. Owing to the length of the programme the final of the Redfern Mile was not procurable. Results:—

Pearson Handicap, 1m.—Final: C. C. Hooper, 1; A. Beck, 2; J. E. Meller, 3. A grand race. Won by a wheel, same second and third. Time, 1m 33 3-5s.

Swift Club One-mile Handicap.—Final: A. F. Taylor, 80yds, 1; G. Martindale, 60yds, 2; W. Starrett, 50yds, 3. Won by a wheel. Time, 2m 11 2-5s.

Glebe Club One-mile Handicap.—Final: C. C. Hooper, scr, 1; W. C. Woollett, 50yds, 2; R. Robinson, 70yds, 3. Won easily. Time, 2m 10 4-5s.

Glebe-Brighton Clubs' One-mile Handicap.—Final: W. Patrick, scr, 1; G. Patrick, scr, 2; F. Priestly, 40yds, 3. Splendid race. Won by a foot, same second and third. Time, 2m 25s.

Griffith Shield Competition, 3 miles interclub scratch team race; winners to hold the Griffith shield for the season, with the title of champion track club; present holders, Western Suburbs Club.

First heat.—C. M. Cutcliffe (Redfern), G. Saleb (Redfern), E. Slevin, 1, 2, and 9—12 points; Balmain, 3, 4, 6—13 points; Botany, 5, 7, 8—20 points. In this heat the clubs were: Botany, Balmain, and Redfern, which had each three representatives.

Second heat.—L. Miller (South Sydney), E. Priestly (South Sydney), F. Brown (South Sydney), 6 points, 1; Western Suburbs, 15 points, 2.

Third heat.—E. W. Schneider (Eastern Suburbs), A. E. Stewart (Eastern Suburbs), H. W. Thompson (Eastern Suburbs), 1, 2, 3—6 points, 1; Marrickville, 19 points, 2; Swift, 20 points, 3.

Final.—South Sydney Club, 2, 3, 4—9 points, 1; Redfern Club, 18 points, 2; Eastern Suburbs, 19 points, 3. In this race the pace was fairly even until the last lap, when Cutcliffe took the lead, with Schneider on his wheel. The race between the pair was most exciting, and apparently 300 yards to go was between them, when suddenly like a bolt from the blue Thompson shot out, and had a lead 150 yards from home. At that spot a most unexpected thing happened, Thompson apparently touching or being touched by someone, with the result that he, Schneider, and Cutcliffe fell heavily on the track. Another spill took place as the remaining riders entered the straight. The final placings were: Stewart (Eastern Suburbs), and then South Sydney the next three men, which gave them a win on points. Time, 7m 28 3-5s.

South Annandale Club's One-mile Championship.—H. C. Wilmore, 1; F. Wilmore, 2; D. Hinds, 3. Splendid contest. Won by a wheel. Time, 2m 21s.

East Sydney Amateur Club's One-mile Championship, running.—Andrew Wood, 1; J. McCarthy, 2; A. Lucas, 3. A magnificent struggle. Wood took the lead at two to go, and although challenged by McCarthy won after a desperate last lap by 27s. Time, 4m 56s.

The Redfern Mile.—Eight heats postponed from last carnival held on March 9. Heatwinners, W. T. Hamilton, A. Beck, C. C. Hooper, J. E. Meller, E. W. Schneider, C. M. Cutcliffe.

The pennant committee has taken this step, in order to give all lovers of the sport an opportunity of witnessing these two important events of the year. The competing clubs are Petersham and Waverley, each of which will put the best of their players into the field. The year Petersham won the pennant, it met Waverley in the final round. Waverley won the "B" competition in the first year that it was played. Petersham has won it five or six times. In fact, one year Petersham scooped the pool, the pennant, the "B," and the Rawson trophy.

CHAMPION RINK FINAL.

The final round of the champion rink contest was played on Wednesday afternoon on the city green. Both teams represented the city club. One was captained by Mr. H. Thorpe, and the other by Mr. Moran. The game was well contested throughout, and the finish was most exciting. At the 23 end Moran was two down, but in the next head Moran, with his first wood, rested on the shot, and lay 3. Thorpe failed with both bowls, and Moran drew another, and thus scored 4 in that end. The totals were then Moran 26, Thorpe 24. In the last end Thorpe lay 2, and a measure for 3. When the captain went down to bowl, Moran was rather short with his first, and Thorpe was inclined to be narrow, but with his last wood, Moran, amid applause, drew the absolute shot, while Thorpe missed the jack. Moran thus won by 27 to 24.

Moran played a splendid game, his drawings being wonderfully accurate. On three separate occasions when Thorpe lay 6, 4, and 3, Moran drew the absolute shot.

In Thorpe's score of 24, there was a 6, a 4, and a 3. Moran scored in 15 heads, while Thorpe scored in 10. The rinks were as follow:—

Huston, Martin, Waring, Thorpe	24	..	—

The event is a general handicap, in aid of the veteran boat-builder, Joe Donnelly, who is no longer able to follow his occupation, and the fact that no fewer than 17 boats have been nominated for the race should in itself ensure a keenly (?) response on the part of followers of the sport to the efforts which are being made by the committee. The entries, etc., are as follow:—Keriki (O. Taylor), scr; Oweenee (T. M. Banks), 3½m; Australian (C. Webb), 3½m; Nimrod (C. Hayes), 4m; Vision (W. J. Dunstan), 4½m; Donnelly (G. A tie having occurred between two of the fourteen-footers of the St. George Sailing and Motor Boat Club—Our Own and Sydney—for the "most successful skipper" trophy, a race will be decided this afternoon over the usual course, to complete the season's work, which has been of a highly successful character.

ANGLING.

APPROACHING TOURNAMENTS.

The Anglers' Casting Club is engaged on the task of arranging its fly-casting tournaments for the winter. As in previous years, a liberal supply of trophies is available, and interest in the doings of the State's champions will be livelier than ever. Plenty of practice on the rivers during the open season has been engaged in, and additional proficiency in accuracy and delicacy is sure to be shown. Distance casting is a matter of dexterous practice, and follows upon a display of strength and physical fitness. At the top of the list of the State's fly-casters stand Dr. H. L. Maitland, Mr. C. H. Gorrick, and Mr. H. R. Anderson, but other men are improving each season, and there is no knowing when the other parts of the Commonwealth will bring forth someone capable of giving them a severe test. Skill in tournament casting comes from frequent practice, under expert tuition. In this respect the Anglers' Casting Club sets a very bright example. The members of the society are ever ready to instruct the novice showing adaptability, and the lagoons of the Centennial Park are frequently the scene of schools of fly-casting.

At the last meeting of the A.F.A., Mr. H. E. Eastway detailed some of the experiences of Mr. Thomas Dick in the bar-harbour of Port Macquarie. Mr. Dick and his brother own oyster leases in the area, and have supplied themselves with a diver's plant in order to secure oysters on the stone ballast thrown overboard by vessels during past years. Mr. T. Dick goes below with a metal weapon to prise the oysters from their resting places, and is able to observe the habits of many fishes while down. The fish, according to his narrative, soon recognised him as a friend, and devoured the oysters which were inadvertently broken open during operations. Black-bream frequently swam about the diver, and flathead and bull-rout often had to be disturbed because they were in his road. Mr. Dick states that sea fish are very tame, and he has had no trouble at all with sharks.

Mr. Toomis and party had an Easter trip to Wreck Bay, south of Jervis Bay, and during 16 days' stay caught 230 good fish. The black-bream were very fine, the largest weighing 3¼lb. Whiting were also plentiful, and other fish suitable for smoking were caught, salted, and smoked, in order to bring them back to the city. One member of the party out for schnapper caught 16 one day, all of large size.

The recent disappearance of trout from the ponds at Prospect was reported to the Fisheries Board by Inspector G. Glading, who has done so much good work in connection with trout propagation in the State. Mr. Glading was in charge of the hatchery operations during the last season for hatching out the eggs, but is not responsible for the safety of the stock fish during the rest of the year. No blame, therefore, attaches to him for the disappearance of the fish.

Mr. E. Quirk, in dealing with the statement of the chairman of the Fisheries' Board that if sly-netting was continued in Narrabeen Lake he would be prepared to recommend the opening of the lake altogether to netting, said that such a determination would be about as justifiable as permitting thieves to operate on shops and dwellings in King-street because a couple of law-breakers were able to thieve without being caught. The argument of the president of the Warringah Shire Council was a good one, but Mr. Farnell said that the board had not the funds to put special inspectors on to watch such a small fishery. Other people think that if the fines inflicted upon closure-breakers were made heavier the cost of inspection would be covered.

Many black-bream fishermen have been out for their special quarry latterly with highly gratifying results. February is generally the best month for bream at the entrances to the coastal inlets, but shoal movements occur during the autumn, and men who know the grounds, and have light tackle and a good burley, generally get plenty of the fighting fish. No salt-water sport is more fascinating than fine line black-breaming. Places that have yielded good fish lately are Shell Harbour, Jibbon, Wattamolla, Jervis Bay, Fairy Bower, Middle Harbour, Lang's Point, Cape Three Points, Currel Bay and Terrigal.

During an Easter trip to the Nepean for perch in his motor launch, Mr. R. J. Geddes found the fish very quiet. His experience of the fish in his aquaria is that perch lie dormant a good deal in the winter. On that account he considers the closure to perch fishing during the season regarded by the Fisheries Board as that for spawning of very little use.

Cod-fishers are beginning to take a vital interest in rod-fishing with spinning baits. Many years ago Mr. R. Blossome, then president of the Water and Sewerage Board, declared that cod would rise to the fly and spinner, but men were slow to believe the statement. They therefore stuck to fishing with worms, birds, small fish, yabbies, and fresh-water mussels, until professionals and amateurs about Narrandera proved that a large spinner was easily the best bait to attract cod and yellow-belly during the late summer and autumn. Now many anglers are using the artificial baits trolled from a moving boat or punt about thirty yards behind it on a strong rod and large reel, and catching magnificent fish. So deadly are some of the spinners that it is to be feared some of the stretches of river will soon be fished out. It is the manifest duty of all the country angling clubs to join the Piscatorial Council, of which Mr. A. W. Cleary is the hon. secretary, in order that the Government may be induced to establish cod-hatcheries as well as trout-hatcheries throughout the State.

The recent southerly closed Narrabeen Lake to the sea again. A nice lot of fish came in during the opening, and when the prawn supply is somewhat lessened by the hungry sea fish sportsmen should be able to catch them on worms and prawns.

Queenfishing may be looked for about Dobroyd, at the entrance to Middle Harbour, on calm days, also at Port Hacking, Broken Bay, and off Botany. La Perouse visitors provided with rods and tackle suitable for the game should be able to do well now outside the historic bay amongst the king-fish.

The Narrandera and Manly Amateur Angling Clubs have joined the Piscatorial Council, whose temporary headquarters are 79 Pitt-street, Sydney.

Catches.—The following reports show where fish may be expected: The Laman Brothers, at Port Stephens, between Nelson's Bay and the lighthouse, caught in two days' fishing 10 schnapper, weighing in all 249lb, on 27 cord lines and 6.0 hooks; H. Laman's fish weighed 32, 26, 25, and 21 lb, and his brother's 30, 28, 25, 24, 21, and 19. The fishing at this fine harbour is too little known. Mr. H. K. Anderson reported to the A.F.A. that at the request of Mr. Franklin, of Brindabella, he fished a pool below a fall on one of the feeders of the Goodradigbee, in order that the water above the fall might be stocked. A man waiting with a bucket carried the 24 fish which were secured by the angler on the fly to the water at present unstocked, and so another stream has been supplied with yearling fish. The trout when liberated above the fall headed straight up stream. Mr. Anderson secured three at one cast on two occasions, which shows how marvellously well-stocked the lower water was with trout. Mr. Burnham, at Dark Bay (Port Hacking), 20 blackbream; Mr. Tanner, at Middle Harbour, a nice haul of blackbream; Messrs. S. White and J. S. Holloway, at Port Hacking, two blackbream, weighing together a little over five pounds, some smaller ones, and other good quality fish; Mr. Millard, at Watson's Bay, 22 blackbream. Messrs. W. D. Scott, A. W. Scott, and C. M. Pitt, at Tuggerah Lakes, during 10 days, averaged five dozen whiting, flathead, blackbream, and sand-mullet daily. They also caught three jewfish, weighing 18, 15, and 12 lb, and during an hour and a half of one day secured 10½ dozen whiting from a few ounces up to 1½lb weight. Anglers at Manly have been getting large groper and drummer, and hauls of black-fish all along the coast are too common to excite interest. A few schnapper have been taken on long lines near the Spit, at Middle Harbour, lately, and more may be expected as the weather grows colder. Messrs. E. C. and S. N. Stewart, fishing the Big Badja, near Numeralla, caught two dozen trout, the largest weighing 8½lb, and measuring 27 inches long, and 17½ inches girth. Another fish was 8lb 5oz, and two others 4lb each. Most of these fish were taken on the Cochabumbu fly. Messrs. J. E. Paterson and H. Joseland, joint hon. secretaries of the Rod-fishers' Society, near Kiama at Easter time caught nine perch, weighing 14lb, on the fly. The largest weighed 4lb. The A.F.A. has an outing to Woy Woy on April 10, and the Leichhardt-Petersham and District A.F.A. one to Berowra, on the same date. Mr. R. Beattie and party, off North Head (Sydney Harbour), a mixed basket, including schnapper. Messrs. Maddison and Rogers, at Brisbane Water, near Simmons's, and the Half-tide Rocks, caught plenty of flathead, bream, and jewfish, the largest flathead weighing 10½lb. Mr. A. Urquhart, at Jerusalem Bay (Cowan), caught a schnapper weighing 10lb, three jewfish about 8lb each, and three dozen bream. Mr. Beveridge, at the same place, caught several blackbream and some schnapper kind.

BOXING.

TOMMY BURN'S EXHIBITION.

This afternoon Tommy Burns, who is matched to meet Bill Lang, of Victoria, for the white heavyweight championship of the world on Monday night next, will give an exhibition of training and physical culture at the Stadium. As Burns invariably gives an attractive display at these exhibitions, it is only fair to assume that a very large number of spectators will avail themselves of this the last opportunity of seeing him in action before next Monday. His contest with Lang will in all probability be his last appearance in Australia, as he has accepted an offer made him to meet Sam Langford, the American coloured heavyweight boxer, in San Francisco on Labour Day. Ladies are invited to this afternoon's entertainment, and will be admitted free of charge. A frequent service of trams will run from the foot of Erskine-street to the gates of the Stadium. Burns will appear in the ring at 3 o'clock sharp.

CHAMPIONSHIP OF AUSTRALIA.

BURNS-LANG CONTEST.

On Monday night Tommy Burns, the ex-heavyweight champion of the world, will meet Bill Lang, the local heavyweight champion, at the Stadium, in a contest limited to 20 rounds. Burns has now quite recovered from his late indisposition, and states that he will enter the ring in the very best of condition. He will weigh slightly more than when he met Johnson for the championship of the world; but regards the extra weight in the light of an advantage. Special arrangements have been made to handle the large crowd which is expected to attend. The contest will start at 8.30 p.m. sharp.

PROFESSIONAL TOURNAMENT.

FINALS TO BE CONTESTED.

The best winners of the first round of the professional featherweight tournament promoted by Mr. Hugh D. McIntosh will meet in the semi-finals on Wednesday night next. On the same night the final will be contested, so spectators will have the opportunity of witnessing three ten-round contests on the same evening.

THE WRECKED PERICLES.

PLIGHT OF PASSENGERS.

RETURN BY THE KYARRA.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

A number of passengers from the wrecked Pericles arrived at Port Adelaide by the Kyarra on Thursday, en route to the eastern States. Most of them joined the Kyarra at Fremantle devoid of any luggage, and several did not even possess a hat. Mrs. Doulton, wife of Captain Doulton, marine superintendent for Howard Smith and Co., Ltd., who was bound for London, managed to save her valuables, but lost all her clothing, except what she was wearing at the time of the disaster.

On Wednesday evening the passengers on the Kyarra gave a concert in aid of a fund which has been started in Western Australia for the relief of the distressed, and £14 was collected.

There was a large crowd at the wharf to meet the Kyarra, and hearty cheers were given for the Pericles passengers, a number of whom were met by friends from the eastern States. Those who returned by the Kyarra were:—

For Melbourne: Mrs. Doulton, Mrs. Lithgow, Mrs. Abrahams and child, Mr. Heath, Mr. J. Wilson, and Miss Russell.

For Sydney: Mrs. Carlson, Mrs. Hicks, Mrs. Ellis, Mrs. Crump, Mr. Radford, Mr. R. E. Lewis, Mr. Fernandez, Dean Tanner, Mr. W. Curry, Mr. Fenson, Mr. Ellis, Mr. E. G. Dean, Miss Day, and Misses Wilson (2).

For Brisbane: Mr. S. Shepherd.

SUCCESSFUL SALVAGE.

PERTH (W.A.), Friday.

In the run from Fremantle to Albany the steamer Monaro on Wednesday encountered a veritable sea of wreckage 12 miles south-south-east of Cape Leeuwin, and as far as the eye could see the water was full of broken woodwork, cases of butter and apples, casks of cocoanut oil and tallow, and ship's fittings, which were rushing in a southerly direction. Steam was shut off, and three boats lowered, and in 6½ hours, while daylight lasted, 300 boxes of butter and 17 casks of tallow and cocoanut oil were salved. The butter was in excellent condition. This was a mere fraction of what was seen. The wreckage covered an area of from two to three miles, and thousands of pounds' worth was drifting south, beyond all recovery. The fact that floating material was moving south interested Captain Neal, of the Monaro, particularly. While drifting the Monaro, which was drawing 17ft of water, moved in a northerly direction, and she had repeatedly to steam back to remain in attendance on the boats. From that fact it was evident a submarine current set inshore to the north, while the surface current set south, and took the wreckage with it.

In all directions sharks were visible, lying idly near the surface, but from their listless attitude it was evident that they were not in want of food. The ship's officers worked from the gangway, and as the ship moved the sharks were often taken under water. The Monaro landed the recovered cargo at Albany.

The steamer Strathleaven has reported having sighted large quantities of cargo south of Alourn Islands. The master of the steamer Una, despatched by the underwriters to the scene of the wreck, reported last night having recovered butter and tallow to the approximate value of over £1000.

MISSING WARATAH.

THE WAKEFIELD'S SEARCH.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The charter party in connection with the steamer Wakefield, which left Durban on February 25 in search of the missing steamer Waratah, arrived by the last mail from England. After perusing it, the Lord Mayor (Colonel Burston), as chairman of the search committee, is surprised to find that an extension of the time of departure of the Wakefield from Durban had been altered from the end of January to not later than February 12, and also that the islands of Amsterdam and St. Paul's had been included in the charter, without any authority from the search committee. However, in order to satisfy the English contributors to the fund, and to get the steamer despatched with all speed from Durban, instructions were given to carry out the search in accordance with the charter, which means that the Wakefield is to search the Prince Edward and Marion group of islands, the Crozets, Kerguelen Group, St. Paul's, Amsterdam, Heard, and M'Donald islands, and then take a zig-zag course to Melbourne. The Wakefield is due to arrive in Melbourne on or about May 25.

PARRAMATTA DISTRICT.

PROGRESS ASSOCIATION.

The monthly meeting of the Parramatta Progress Association was held on Thursday evening, the president, Mr. J. W. Hill, in the chair. Alderman Jago referred to the desirability of approaching the Fisheries Department and asking that the freshwater portion of the river be stocked with young carp, perch, and, perhaps, Murray cod. After discussion, a resolution to that effect was carried. It was resolved to write to the Railway Department, asking that more accommodation be placed on the 5.16 and 6.16 p.m. Baulkham Hills trams. It was decided that next meeting should be specially set aside for the discussion of railway disabilities with a view to taking steps to try to procure better facilities for the town.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE GRAND OPERA SEASON.

The opening of the grand opera season at the Theatre Royal has exceeded every expectation, the second week of "Madame Butterfly," which forms a crucial test of popularity, closing to consistently large audiences. Much of this success is due to Signor Hazon, who controls his orchestra with the happiest results, and to the fact that the alternate casts are fairly balanced. Both prima-donnas give pleasure, and tenors and baritones show differences just sufficient to stimulate, without weakening, the general interest. This evening, Monday, Wednesday, and Friday next Mlle. Bel Sorel will sing, with Miss Amy Castles on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, and Miss Edy Barnato at Wednesday's matinee.

CRITERION THEATRE.

"As You Like It," which is drawing packed audiences at the Criterion Theatre, now enters upon its last six nights, with a final matinee on Wednesday. It may be years before a further opportunity is afforded of seeing this great comedy, now so beautifully presented by Mr. Oscar Asche and Miss Brayton.

Sir Rupert Clarke, Bart., who has been in Melbourne during the week inspecting the production of "The Arcadians," has again resumed direction at the Criterion.

"COUNT HANNIBAL."

Count Hannibal, adapted from Stanley Weyman's historical romance by Oscar Asche and Norreys Connell, will be produced at the Criterion next Saturday, with splendid scenery by Joseph Harker, and the most elaborately correct costumes and armour designed for the English production just before the company left England. The new play deals with the massacre of the Huguenots in August, 1572, during the supposed reconciliation of Catholics and Protestants by the marriage of Margaret, sister of Charles IX., to Henry King of Navarre. Mr. Asche will play the name part as Count Hannibal de Tavannes, who forces the Huguenot maiden Clotilde (Miss Lily Brayton) to marry him, and fights a great duel with his rival Tignonville (Mr. Gerald Kay Souper). A long cast will include Mr. Herbert Grimwood as Charles IX., Mr. Caleb Porter as Father Pezeley, and Miss Elfrida Clement as Mme. St. Lo. Applications for first night seats by letter close to-day, as on Monday the plan will open at Elvy's in the ordinary way.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

There will be the usual extra matinee of "Aladdin" at Her Majesty's Theatre at 1.45 to-day. The new pantomime continues to draw immense audiences, and is doubtless entered in the public mind for a long run. Mr. Harry Phydora's "Top Note" duet, and dialogue with the lisping tenor who "thinks in deep water," is one of the popular events of the evening, whilst the list of spectacular features comprises the Australian Bird Ballet, the Living Flag of Australia, the resplendent "March of Flowers," and the sensational Fire Ballet.

THE "FLORODORA" CHARITY MATINEES.

The dress rehearsal of "Florodora" took place at Her Majesty's yesterday, and proved a miniature of the Royal Comic Opera Company. Mrs. J. C. Williamson, who is tendering the benefit matinees to the Royal Alexandra Hospital for Children and the Hospice for the Dying, Darlinghurst, has spared no pains to have the scenes carried out to the designs with which theatregoers are familiar. The young performers have been word perfect for several days in their parts. There is only one boy in the cast, the rest of the characters having been assigned to girls. Miss Minnie Hooper has trained the ballet corps excellently. One of the features of "Florodora" will be a burlesque of "A Waltz Dream." The first matinee will be next Monday, when the family of his Excellency the Governor-General will attend. The other representation will be on Tuesday. Excellent booking is recorded at Paling's for the novel attraction.

PALACE THEATRE.

The last six nights of "Woman and Wine" are announced at the Palace Theatre, where Messrs. Allan Hamilton and Max Maxwell will follow up the popular success achieved by the above by producing "In London Town," another of the Bland Holt series, next Saturday. "In London Town" will be elaborately staged, and to prepare for it adequately it will be necessary to omit the usual matinee next Wednesday. In the meantime "Woman and Wine," with its strangely contrasted characters and beautiful scenery, is certain to draw large audiences.

MESSAGE FROM MARS COMPANY.

Mr. Allan Hamilton is forming a company to tour the provincial towns of New South Wales and Queensland with the excellent comedy drama "A Message from Mars," of which Mr. Hamilton holds the sole Australasian rights. The tour will commence at West Maitland on April 28, with the principal towns of New South Wales and Queensland to follow.

TIVOLI THEATRE.

This afternoon and evening, at the Tivoli Theatre, Mr. Harry Rickards' company will be headed by Houdini, whose mystifying trunk act and extraordinary struggle with a strait-jacket help to fill the house. The last three nights of the Wille Brothers are notified, the Two Bells reopen on Monday, and Happy Tom Parker rejoins Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Fred. Bluett, Brown and Robinson, Miss Lillie Langtry, Allan Shaw, Ted Kalman, and many other artists will assist.

NATIONAL AMPHITHEATRE.

At the National Amphitheatre, where the usual matinee will be given to-day, the new central attraction will be Jules Garrison, an American player, and his two Roman Maids. There will be reappearances of Florrie Ranger, Stella Ranger, the Driscoll Brothers, and Wally Ricardo, and more than a score of other artists, with new moving pictures by the miorama. Brown and Wilmot, a star sketch team and dancing duo, will arrive from America April 23.

GLACIARIUM.—WEST'S PICTURES.

At the Glaciarium, both at the matinee and in the evening, Mr. T. J. West's new star films will comprise Pathe Freres' latest success, "Cleopatra," in a series of scenes with Mme. Madeleine Roche in the name-part, "A Bear Hunt in the Rockies," showing the hunters on the mountain trails and forest tracks and the great beast at bay, "Belgian Cavalry," "Buried Alive," and "Forgotten Watch." Mr. De Groen's Vice-Regal Band will play.

LYCEUM.—SPENCER'S THEATRESCOPE.

At the Lyceum, where the customary matinee will be held to-day, the new programme will include the second star series of the historical "Life of Moses," the dramatic story "For the Honor of the Family," the melodramatic episode "The Last Deal," the comedy incident of "The Forgotten Watch," the tale of the Western prairies, "Daughter of the Sioux," and the scenic subject "A Trip on the Rhine," all with music and incidental effects.

BIJOU THEATRE PICTURES.

At the Bijou Theatre, both afternoon and evening to-day, the new programme will present "Figure-skating on the Ice," the dramatic story "Pauli," realistic episodes in "Hunting the Polar Bear," the second illustrative series of "The Life of Moses," the dramatic "Why the Mail was Late," and a long list of humorous and scenic themes.

WIRTH BROTHERS' CIRCUS.

This afternoon and evening there will be performances at Wirth Brothers' circus, spaciously and commodiously situated at Prince Alfred Park. Seven shows are here covered by one admission-ticket, namely, circus, menagerie, museum, vaudeville, hippodrome, elephant herd, and Oriental pageant. A magnificent collection of wild beasts and beautifully trained horses are supplemented by a strong party of tamers, expert equestrians, acrobats, and variety artists, and large audiences are the result.

ROYAL STANDARD THEATRE.

At the Royal Standard Theatre this evening Mr. Harry Clay's vaudeville company will vary their programme with new artists, song, stories, and dances, as well as with a change of moving pictures. New artists will be Wally Dawson, comedian, Olive Britwell, serio and dancer, and others. The suburban circuit next week will be Petersham (Monday), Parramatta (Tuesday), Newtown (Wednesday), Ashfield (Thursday), and North Sydney (Friday).

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.

There will be matinee and evening entertainments at the renovated Alhambra Theatre, where the new vaudeville company includes a numerous group of variety artists in every branch, comic, acrobatic, and musical, under the stage management of Mr. Wal. Cottier.

THE SYDNEY SKATING RINK.

At the Sydney Skating Rink, Prince Alfred Park, three sessions are being held daily, and many lovers of the sport move gaily to and fro to the music of the band. A smooth floor and the best pattern of ball-bearing skates are announced by the management.

THE BONDI SKATING RINK.

The Bondi Skating Rink, near the tram terminus, is now attracting visitors, the improved floor and other details that enhance the comfort of patrons having again brought this rink into vogue.

SYDNEY LIEDERTAFEL CONCERT.

The Sydney Liedertafel will give their 132nd concert in the Town Hall next Wednesday evening, when Mr. W. Arundel Orchard will conduct various new pieces, including the "Walpurga" of Hegar, and a "Night Song" by Wickenhauser. Several favourite part songs will render attractive a programme, to which solos will be contributed by Miss Josie Miles, Mr. Cyril Monk, and Mr. Maurice Chenoweth.

MISS ELSA FISCHER'S FAREWELL.

On Thursday evening next Miss Elsa Fischer will make her farewell appearance at the Y.M.C.A. Hall, her intention being to sail for London shortly thereafter in order to continue her studies under Mme. Minna Fischer, a famous teacher and near relative. In addition to her own solos, the soprano will be assisted by Miss Gertrude Palmer, Messrs. Philip Newbury, Lawrence Phillip, Griffin Foley, Lionel Lawson, A. L. Cropp, A. Blanchard, E. Lewis Scott, and Tornillo. The plan is at Nicholson's.

STUDENTS' CONCERT AT REDFERN.

The students of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. E. Pople will give a concert entertainment in the Wesley Church, Regent-street, next Thursday evening, when some 33 gold and silver competition medallists will appear, and will be further assisted by Misses Valerie Kingsbury, Bessie Grace, Mr. E. Pople, jun., and Master Francis Pople.

MISS RUBIE HENRY'S CONCERT.

On Tuesday, April 19, Miss Rubie Henry, a soprano from the Garcia School of Music, who was heard with pleasure at the Y.M.C.A. Hall last January, will make a welcome reappearance at a concert of her own in the same music chamber. The plan will open at Nicholson's on Wednesday next.

"SAMSON AND DELILAH."

The Sydney Philharmonic Society's next concert at the Town Hall on Thursday, April 21, will derive importance from the first production in Australia of Camille Saint Saens' famous operatic cantata, "Samson and Delilah." Mme. Georgina Delmar, an operatic contralto newly arrived in this country from Europe, has been specially engaged, with Mr. Walter Whyte as Samson. Mr. Andrew Black, the eminent English baritone, will sing the music of the High Priest, and Mr. Percy Hetford that of Abimelech. Mr. Joseph Bradley will conduct the united forces. The plan will open at Paling's on Wednesday next, as notified.

PIANO-VIOLIN-VOCAL CONCERT.

Misses Margaret Edson, Ethel Liggins, and Leslie Harbutt will be associated in a classical concert at the Y.M.C.A. Hall on Monday, April 25. Beethoven's "Sonata in G Major" and Alfred Hill's "Scotch Sonata," both for violin and piano, will be prominent items in an attractive programme. The plan opens at Paling's on the 18th.

THE THELMA HANLON CONCERT.

Miss Thelma Hanlon, whose beautiful voice was welcomed at Mr. Laurence Godfrey Smith's concert on Wednesday, will give her own concert in the Y.M.C.A. Hall on Thursday, [illegible]. Her solos will include Gounod's "Plus Grand dans son Obscurite," and Bathe's canzone, "O Nuit." Miss Hanlon will be assisted by that favourite pianist, and Mr. Anton Tschaikov, the Russian violinist, will be heard for the first time since his return to Sydney.

SYDNEY MADRIGAL SOCIETY.

The opening concert of the Sydney Madrigal and Chamber Music Society is to take place on Thursday, April 28. The programme will include a piano quartet by Dvorak and a trio by Schumann. Mr. F. Mowat Carter's quartet has also been engaged. The society, which has been rehearsing for many weeks, will render a programme of new part songs and madrigals.

THE MYRA GRESTY CONCERT.

As a result of her successful concert in the Y. M. C. A. Hall a few weeks back, Miss Myra Gresty will essay a concert of a broader character in the Town Hall on Thursday, May 11. Among the assisting artists will be Herr Anton Tschaikov. Signor Vincenzo de Giorgio will also make an acceptable reappearance.

BOYLE'S SINGING CLASS.

A new term of Mr. Boyle's singing class is announced to commence on Wednesday evening next, at the Hunter-street studios. A special division will be opened for adult beginners. Particulars will be found in our advertising columns.

TRINITY COLLEGE, LONDON.

Entries will close next Saturday for the theory diploma and art of teaching examinations of Trinity College, London, to be held next July. Attention is drawn to an additional grade in the practical division. This is the "higher local" pianoforte examination, and is intended to serve as a link between the senior division and the diploma of associate. The requirements are duly set forth in the current syllabus, to be obtained from the local secretary, Mr. G. de Cairos-Rego, 16 Paling's-buildings.

INSTITUTE OF JOURNALISTS.

A smoke concert held under the auspices of the Institute of Journalists at Aarons' Exchange last night, attracted a large attendance of pressmen, and, thanks to the efforts of Mr. Andrew Black and other gentlemen holding established positions in the artistic world, proved a most enjoyable function. Mr. Black, who was in splendid voice, sang four songs. Mr. Allan Shaw, for whose help the institute was indebted to the kindness of Mr. Harry Rickards, performed several sleight of hand tricks, and Mr. J. Hinchey, another member of Mr. Rickards' company, sang a couple of songs, to the great pleasure of the audience. Mr. Harry de Roebeck, a recent arrival from London, gave a taste of his undoubted quality as an artist possessed of exceptional gifts as a humorous entertainer. Other contributors to the programme included Messrs. Mankey and Nott (cornet duo), Mr. H. Campbell, Mr. Geo. Hawksley, Mr. Monahan, and Mr. F. Hogue (songs), Mr. Tebbutt (piano solo), and Mr. Oliver Hogue and Mr. George Wynne (comic recitations). Mr. Bert Rache acted as accompanist.

TOWN HALL ORGAN RECITALS.

The City Organist, Mr. Ernest Truman, will give a popular programme this evening at the Town Hall. The items will consist of "Rienzi" (Wagner), Le Cygne (Saint Saens), Paraphrase, "Faust" (Gounod), Liebestraum (Liszt), Pasquinade (Gottschalk), "Zampa" (Herold).

At the usual matinee at 3.15 to-morrow Mr. Ernest Truman will play Sonata Rheinberger, Op. 181 (first performance), and pieces by Rubinstein and Dvorak.

VICTORIA HALL.

The Victoria Hall Picturescope Company announce their usual change of programme this afternoon and to-night, including "How I Won the V.C.," "Building a Transcontinental Railway," "Gambling with Death," "A Lesson in Domestic Economy," "Why Girls Leave Home," etc. On Saturday next, April 16, the management announces the special engagement of Deave's Merry Manikins, a genuine and amusing novelty.

POLICE BAND REUNION.

The fifteenth annual reunion and dinner of the Police Band was held in the New Masonic Hall last night. The programme suited the occasion, starting with a band selection entitled "Episodes in a Policeman's Life." The episodes included musical representations of the police reporting at their stations, the roll being called, and the men marching off to their beats, the sounds of dancing and a serenade, a cat duet by night, interrupted by a pistol shot, and a carnival party returning home before daybreak. Superintendent Sherwood presided, and Superintendents Day, Mitchell, Roche, Inspector M'Vane, Sub-inspectors Baxter, Childs, and Jones were also present.

THE JAPANESE WARSHIPS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Rear-Admiral Ijichi, together with his staff officers and other officers of the Japanese warships, Aso and Soya, were to-day officially welcomed at the Town Hall. Speeches were delivered by the Lord Mayor, Minister for Customs (Sir Robert Best), and the State Premier (Mr. Murray).

The speakers referred to the value of the alliance between Great Britain and Japan. Mr. Murray said he thought that before long Melbourne would be able to establish her claim as being one of the most beautiful cities in the world.

Rear-Admiral Ijichi said that this was his fourth visit to Melbourne. He was amazed and gratified at the evidences of prosperity and progress on every side, when he compared Melbourne of to-day with that of the past. He believed that the very rapid growth which he could not but admire, was owing to the courage and energy of the people. He hoped that the mutual regards and goodwill so happily established might become more firmly rooted between the two great allied nations of Great Britain and Japan to the benefit of both.

The Governor and Lord Mayor to-day returned the visit of Rear-Admiral Ijichi on the Aso. The Rear-Admiral, his staff, and captains, were to-night entertained at dinner by the Governor, at State Government House.

ALLEGED RETENTION OF DOCUMENTS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The case was concluded in the County Court to-day in which John Hopkins, of Collins-street, Melbourne, solicitor, sought to recover from Walter William James Forster, typist, certain original documents in the action of Ronald v Harper, which are essential to the appeal to the High Court by the plaintiff in the action. Defendant admitted that he had the documents referred to, but he contended that he held them as security for certain sums which were owing to him. He counter-claimed the sum of £163 for work and labour done in typing an appeal book for the appeal to the Full Court, and preparing copies of an appeal book for the High Court.

Judgment given for plaintiff, and the documents were ordered to be handed over within 24 hours. On the application of defendant's counsel the documents were handed over to the Registrar of the Court, pending an appeal within four days.

THE SUGAR COMMISSION.

DELAY IN STARTING.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Some slight delay is likely to occur in the Sugar Commission commencing its duties. It appears that there is some difficulty in Mr. Justice Cohen, who was mentioned as chairman of the commission, undertaking the duties immediately, and as a consequence it is not likely that anything further will be done in connection with the Commission until after the elections are over.

THE QUEENSLAND FLOODS.

BRISBANE, Friday.

In connection with the floods in the western districts it is stated that the heaviest rainfall of the flooded area was only about 17 points; but many inches must have fallen in Tambo and Carnarvon ranges to bring such roaring floods down the Warrego, Angellala, Langlo, Maranoa, Bungeworgorai, and Bungil rivers. The railway traffic manager and party found near Bungeworgorai that the flood waters had washed away the ballast, leaving the sleepers and rails hanging. Further west, where the water was rising, thousands of rabbits were making for higher ground, and hawks were darting down on them. The rabbits appeared to be panic-stricken, and many ran under the train and were killed.

AN ABORIGINAL'S DEATH.

SUSPICION OF MURDER.

PERTH, Friday.

On Tuesday last the body of an aboriginal woman, subsequently identified as "Jinny," was found 30 miles from the township of Bulong. The body was brought into Bulong, and after making a post-mortem examination a medical officer gave it as his opinion that the woman had been murdered. An inquest was opened, and adjourned for the police to make investigations among the blacks in the locality.

THE BEATTY WILL CASE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

In connection with the charges of conspiracy arising out of the Beatty will case, application was made before Mr. Cresswell, P.M., at the City Court to-day for the remand to Sydney of Frederick Ash, James Priestly, and Sarah Jane Beatty. Following upon the decision of the State Full Court on Monday last in the case of John Heslop, the application was granted. Defendants were remanded to appear at the Water Police Court, Sydney, on April 18. Bail was allowed in one surety of £300 in each case.

PUBLIC OPINION.

LABOUR POLITICS IN LANG.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—My Labourite opponent, Rev. T. S. Crawford, though extremely touchy and sensitive to the most casual references to himself or criticisms of his party, does not hesitate to take the widest latitude in attacking me at his meetings and in articles contributed to the local press.

Nor, in doing so, is he over particular on the score of accuracy, as I have shown on several occasions.

His personal reference to me as a "political weakling," as reported in your columns this morning, is certainly not sustained by the quotation from my financial speech, by which he pretends to justify it.

I have quoted extracts from the speech at many of my meetings. And the whole speech simply goes to show that in my opinion the Commonwealth was getting a better deal than the States, and while I would have been prepared to assist the States in getting a stronger guarantee that the one they accepted—yet as a representative of the Commonwealth—if they were content with the indeterminate period—I saw no reason to cavil at it from the Commonwealth standpoint.

Mr. Crawford's desperate attempts to manufacture spurious political capital out of such an unmistakably clear and logical attitude on my part reveal the real weakness of his own cause. And my own strenuous active political work inside and outside of Parliament furnishes the most complete and effective answer to his cheap sneering reference to me as a "political weakling."

"All politics, no scruples!" is the doctrine of the party, according to an article published in the leading column of the Melbourne official Labour political organ, the "Labour Call." It is a doctrine well sustained by my opponents in the Lang contest, and takes the form of persistent misrepresentation of facts, political and personal—howling down my meetings—hanging in effigy women workers on my committees—insulting and threatening those who display my election signs where they cannot be torn down; removing or covering over my election advertisements, and circulating personal slanders. All these tactics presumably are intended as illustrations of the "humanitarian ideals," "uplifting influences," and "ethical underlying bases," of the Labour-socialistic movement. I am, etc.,

THE HUME CONTEST.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—If there is one phase which more than another seems to enter into the contest for The Hume it is that of "conspiracy of silence." We are told in the sympathetic language of the press that Sir William Lyne, acting on the advice of certain medical gentleman, dares not risk the turmoil of public speaking, and these same medical gentlemen were thoughtful enough to convey their opinion to the electors per medium of a woman. It is an incident worth noting.

Meanwhile, Sir William, himself an astute political campaigner, has taken an early opportunity of repudiating even his Henty utterances, which he facetiously terms "a quiet conversational chat."

I venture to say that, with all Sir William's past called into review, his alleged steadfast adherence to principles, his tacit understanding with the forces of Labour, and his callous departure from the Deakin ranks, he can accomplish just as much by the insidious influence of "a quiet conversational chat" as he could by bellowing aloud with all the force of a rogue elephant the long list of platitudes with which some 30 years' public life has supplied him.

The electors are able, from the events of the past few weeks, to see how the cards are being played. They can see who are Sir William's friends, and how he ingratiates himself into their good counsels. Terribly ill, and his chances of recovery almost despaired of, he can visit race meetings, hustle among his friends, and quietly converse with them, and drink an occasional glass of "good cheer."

From being a picturesque figure in the Australian Parliament he has descended to the level of a factionist. Allegedly true to the principles of a lifetime, he has allied himself with the socialists, who would remorselessly tax unfortunate land-owners just emerging from the ordeal of fighting an invading army of rabbits, a drought pitiful and heartrending in its severity, and bush fires so terrible, so appalling that graziers were almost driven into the very vortex of despair.

Doubtless, Sir William has been well advised to remain silent. He, of all men, can least afford to make extravagant utterances. His political career furnishes more than one instance of rash assertion, and more than one instance of personal explanation and public apology.

If Sir William has not altered his political principles, why is he allied to the Labour party? If he is the same political "Oom Paul" that he would have us believe, where are his erstwhile followers? And whose lieutenant is he? And, lastly, if his health is so decrepit, his sphere of usefulness so nearly at an end, why does he thrust a worn-out frame against the mental activities and the eager progressive thought of a free and enlightened electorate such as The Hume?

"STATE DEBTS" REFERENDUM.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—If you will be so good as to answer the following questions, it will assist myself, and, I hope, many others, to come to a decision as to how to vote on what is known as the "State Debts" referendum.

1. Is the clause at present contained in the Commonwealth Constitution regarding the taking over of the State debts as existing at the date of the Federation permissive only?

2. Will the clause as amended or added to, should the impending referendum be carried, still be permissive only, in its effect of enabling the Federation to take over the debts in part or as a whole at any time?

3. If the referendum is decided in the affirmative, to put it into operation will it not be necessary for legislation to be passed in both the Federal and State Parliaments setting out the terms on which the debts are to be taken over and handed over respectively?

4. Supposing the Federation and the States collectively or any one State individually, are unable to come to terms upon which the transfer of debts would be mutually acceptable, will not the power remain inoperative until they are able to do so?

I am, etc.,

April 6. F. J. HENRY.

[(1) Yes. The Commonwealth "may" (not "must") take over £200,000,000 of State debts. (2) Yes—there will be no compulsion. (3) Taking over the debts cannot add to the States' liabilities, but they must continue to pay the interest. The power of taking over the debts, however, will still be with the Commonwealth. (4) There can be no question of coming to terms.—Ed. S.M.H.]

LOYALTY AND THE LABOUR PARTY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In to-day's issue of your paper appears a letter signed "T. S. Crawford" referring to the meeting held by Mr. Johnson at the Masonic Hall, Dulwich Hill, on March 24. What your correspondent has to say about Mr. Barton or Mr. Johnson is no business of mine; but he states that the suggestion has been avoided that the Inspector-General of Police should call for a report from his officer. As one who attended that meeting I say if such suggestion had been acted on, and such report handed to Mr. Crawford, he would have got such a shock as would settle him for all time on account of the language used by some who are professing to follow him.

LAND MONOPOLY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The Labour party still continue to talk of the curse of land monopoly. In one breath they say there is no land for the people, and in the next there is no increase in the lands under cultivation.

Since I wrote you a year ago private subdivisions have increased and multiplied, until many of the recent subdivisions have not gone off so well, showing that the supply to some extent has satisfied the demand. The Government resumptions have been most successful, notably Goonoo Goonoo, Walhollow, and Pine Ridge. Walhollow was applied for six times over.

One great reason why cultivated land does not show a greater increase is the scarcity of labour. Many a farmer would have lost his crop last season only for the strike putting so many men out of work in the cities, and they went out harvesting. Every immigrant that arrives in Sydney is over applied for and hurried off to the country.

Another reason why more land is not cultivated is that wool and sheep prices are, and have been, high for some years, and that as it is easier and less trouble to run stock and no labour required, except that of their own families. This will explain the multiplicity of small flocks, as quoted by Mr. Wade at Inverell, that congest the saleyards at Homebush, and prolong the wool season.

These men, when labour is more plentiful, will increase their area of cultivation, for they are not likely to keep land earning only 5s an acre when they can easily make 20s to 40s an acre at present prices for wheat or chaff.

There has been an enormous development from Albury to Wagga lately, the subdivision of Table Top, Wallandool, Benambra, all going off at high prices, and now the balance of Walbundrie is to be offered at auction.

The reason why this district is so popular is that good Victorian and South Australian farmers, who have sold out at probably £10 to £12 an acre, can get better land at £4 to £6 close to Albury, where they can rail their wheat to Melbourne, and not be subject to the disgraceful delays on the New South Wales railways owing to bad management in not having enough trucks.

There is a growing demand for branch lines and feeders. Some must be made, but I say we must duplicate existing lines first and settle the country, and close down trunk lines. Take the country from Blayney to Trangie, which we may take as the present limit of the wheat area. There are miles and miles of virgin forest only awaiting labour and capital to develop it right up to railway fence on each side. But what is the use of it all? No wonder men won't grow wheat when they may not get labour; and, if they do, they can't get produce hauled to market.

Argentine is a network of railways, but they are owned and run by private companies. They have pierced the Andes, and now offer the route Sydney to Valparaiso, across to Buenos Ayres, thence to London, a 28-days trip. We want more ports, say Port Stephens and Jervis Bay, and not drag everything to Sydney; and also adopt a uniform gauge, say 4-8½, to Melbourne, and not attempt to draw wheat and wool 500 miles to Sydney that should go to Melbourne in 250 miles or less.

These are real federal questions. The interests of the great producers have never had proper consideration in New South Wales, and I trust that every man with an estate in the land will record his vote for the Liberal party, both for federal and the next election for the State Parliament.

April 6. I am, etc., FRANCIS BACON.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The proposals of the Labour party for progressive land taxation are backed up by so numerous a following as to show that the much-vaunted aphorism, "Trust the people," may be a foolishness.

The proposals are so vague it is hard to say if the owner who has £5000 worth will be taxed for the lot, and the owner who has £4900 worth will be let off the lot. Why £5000 should be regarded as the figure which spells land monopoly is hard enough to say. Certainly one man who has only £5000 worth of land in some parts of this big island called Australia may be no land monopolist, and another man who has less than £5000 worth in another part may be a land monopolist. A man with £5000 worth of land in the city of Sydney is no monopolist. He might in parts own 100ft of George-street or Pitt-street, so he would leave a fair slice for the rest of mankind. Another man, who had £4000 worth of the only land in some small country town might be a land monopolist. If it were not for the bedouinism the proposal covers, its crudeness would be grotesque enough to satisfy the world's greatest humourist.

Fortunately for Australia's honour, so far a majority of the people has seen that the "bursting" up system of taxation is robbery under another name, and has voted it out of sight. What the value of land is going to be by the time the Commonwealth has taxed it and the State may tax it and the shire or municipality does tax it one can hardly conjecture. The State of Queensland owns some millions of acres of land, for which it should certainly pay a tax if its citizens are to pay individually. It is just as fair to say that the State of Queensland is a land monopolist, because it cannot place its land in private hands on terms which it thinks suitable, as to say that a private land owner is a land monopolist because he cannot sell his land to other private persons on terms he thinks suitable. Fixing upon some particular figure and expressing it in sovereigns, and applying it as a standard to the whole Commonwealth shows the casual "good enough" policy which the Labour party desire to plant upon Australian politics. £5000 may touch land monopoly in one part and not in another.

The honest way to "burst up" is to classify the estates first which are clearly monopolies, and have them valued and sold for the benefit of the holders. Buyers have to be found to produce the actual "bursting" up, and if the State considers its interests injured by the non-sale of certain areas for which it has buyers, let it take action in that way. Even about that method there is an unseemly arbitrarism, but taxation for confiscation involves a principle so dangerous that the nation which adopts it will soon discover by a bitter experience that descent is as easy as ascent is difficult.

Price does not necessarily spell monopoly, and the relation between it and area is too unstable for price to be selected as the standard. In a country the size of Australia it cannot have universal application. Taxing land for revenue may be good enough, though why it and income should both be taxed is not very clear. If revenue is wanted it must be got, so land taxation may be adopted; but land taxation differentially for "bursting up" people who have acquired what they own honestly and often by purchase direct from the State itself is vindicative and dishonest. In the case of the "bursting up" tax it is doubly dishonest, for if it succeed the holder of the land at the time pays the whole of the tax. The new buyer to whatever value he may buy deducts the capital value of the tax from the price of that upon which he may be liable for this taxation.

STATE DEBTS QUESTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Notwithstanding that much has been said and written on the above question, I have not so far seen any statement as to what is intended being done to give the Federal Government an asset should it take over the State debts to meet the interest bill.

I take it that the greater portion of the New South Wales debt was due to rail and tram construction, and other revenue-producing public works. Now before voting on this question I would like to know, is it proposed to hand over, with our debt, our rail and tram systems to the Federal Government? If so, I am going to vote against the proposal, because should the Federal Government get control of these there will be no end of trouble. The Postal affairs have been in a state of semi-chaos since they were taken over, and why? Because the department has not kept pace with the growth of business. So we cannot afford to surrender our principal means of development—the railways—into the same hands. Mr. Wade is in favour of the proposal, and I have a very great respect for his judgment; but would like to know, first, "what is what" before following it. This information may have been given, but if so I have missed it, and others also, seemingly. I am, etc.,

Jemalong, March 31. DAVID HANNAH.

[There is no suggestion anywhere that the States shall hand over their assets. They will simply pay the interest as before, if the Commonwealth takes their debts over, the only difference being that the Federal Government will hand the money over to the State creditors.—Ed. "S.M.H."]

THE CHURCH AND JOAN OF ARC.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In Monsignor Long's first letter on the above subject he contended that the facts were against "making the Church responsible for the Maid's death;" but in his second communication, published in your issue of the 30th ultimo, he says "it was only a provincial section of the Church that condemned Joan of Arc."

His statements are quite insufficient to meet the circumstances. I submit that he has not made out his case, and I leave your readers to judge whether I have been guilty of a single paradox of absurdity in this controversy.

The persecution of (subsequent) saints has always savoured of there having been an eye to the future day when the halo would be substituted for the faggot. Will Monsignor Long attempt for one moment to deny that the University of Paris (a provincial institution, according to him) had a world-wide clerical influence, and that, among hosts of other things that it did, it made Alexander the Fifth Pope of Rome? It belonged to the Church, had the Pontiff's highest protection, he going so far as to make its rules of study, and acting as its agent to intervene in civil disputes.

That this University of Paris, the Bishop of Beauvais, Cardinal Beaufort of Westminster—dreamer of the triple Crown of Rome, also commander of an English army—and Jules Lemaitre, Vicar of the Inquisition, should be bracketed together as a provincial section of the Church is a reductio ad absurdum. The cremation of ordinary individuals may be an advantage, but the annihilation of saints is a mistake. Can anyone see what posible good has accrued to Joan of Arc through making her a saint? Many, no doubt, will regret that her poor body was reduced to ashes—for she was not merely burnt, but roasted to death—leaving not even a single valuable relic, in the shape of a bone, behind. Her execution may have been Catholic; who will dare to assert that it was Christian? I am, etc.,

April 7. HISTORICUS.

There were three things necessary for an after-dinner speech, Admiral Sir C. Penrose Fitzgerald declared at the annual dinner of the Chamber of Shipping. The first was to be able to stand up, the second was to be able to speak up, and the third, and perhaps the most important of all, was to be able to shut up.

VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The charge of perjury against Isabella Newman was heard at the City Court yesterday. Accused recently appealed successfully against a decison of the Coburg Court in connection with the adoption of a child. The present proceedings were taken as the result of evidence given by Mrs. Newman at the Coburg Court, and also during the hearing of her appeal. Accused, who pleaded not guilty, was committed for trial.

The State Ministry has decided to appoint Mr. Justice Cussen a Royal Commission to investigate and report upon the claims made against the Railway Commissioners by Mr. Peter Rogers in connection with his contract for the construction of the new central railway station at Flinders-street.

HEAVY DAMAGES.

BRISBANE, Friday.

The retrial of the action brought by Mrs. Mary O'Brien, widow of the late John O'Brien, who was knocked down by a motor cab in Brunswick-street and fatally injured, against the Canada Cycle and Motor Company, Ltd., employers of the cabdriver, was concluded in the Supreme Court on Thursday. Mrs. O'Brien, who sued on her own behalf and on that of her son, a minor, claimed £2500 damages. At the first trial the jury was unable to agree, and the proceedings proved abortive. A new jury was impanelled for the second trial, and they came to a verdict to-day. They found that the accident was caused solely by the negligence of the cabdriver, and awarded damages against the company amounting to £1500. The Chief Justice, who expressed his entire agreement with the verdict, entered judgment for that amount, with costs of both trials.

TASMANIA.

THE BRANXHOLME RAILWAY.

HOBART, Friday.

The Royal Commission which is inquiring into certain transactions alleged to have taken place with regard to the Scottsdale-Branxholme railway extension resumed its proceedings on Thursday before Commissioner W. Dickson.

Walter Scott, a trustee of Scott's estates, portions of which Sir John Dodds purchased, said he had three interviews with Sir John Dodds in his chambers with reference to the character of the land on the estate. About September, 1909, Mr. Jensen called on witness, and witness made the following statement to him in writing:—"On several occasions before the sale of portions of the above estate Sir John sent for me, and questioned me as to the value and quality of parts of said estate, and also he wanted a reduction made in the value of some of the land. He also warned me I was not doing my best as a trustee for the estate in not selling the land to him at the price offered. Sir John eventually bought the greater portion of the estate. I have Mr. Scott's consent as a co-trustee to give this information, and do so voluntarily." Witness admitted in further cross-examination that it was true Sir John Dodds had sent for him and questioned him, and eventually bought the greater part of the estate.

Mr. Keating (for Mr. Jensen): And you ask the commission to believe that with those two exceptions your whole statement was untrue?—Yes, and I told Mr. Jensen so.

Witness said that the statement was made voluntarily, and with the consent of the co-trustee his mother was put in because Mr. Jensen made him do it. He also stated that he wrote the statement in his own house, and Mr. Jensen had no influence whatever over him.

The commission adjourned until next day.

CREMORNE TRAM SERVICE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Your correspondent "A Resident," whose letter on the above subject appears in your issue of to-day, charges us with being somewhat illogical in our letter on the same subject, which you favoured us by publishing in your issue of yesterday's date. If we are illogical in the statements that we have made we venture to think that your correspondent "Resident" is still more so, and not only illogical, but has mis-stated facts.

We again repeat that the consensus of opinion is that the western side of the promontory is undoubtedly the best side for the new wharf, but this at once raises the question of a direct service from there to Sydney, and this raises the further question where are the ferry boats engaged in such service to land the passengers on the Sydney side. It is admitted on all hands that the congestion of traffic at Circular Quay will not admit of any additional ferry boats being run there, because there is no accommodation for them. Then again, if the Sydney Ferries do not see fit to put on a direct service, who is going to cater for the public?

It has been said that the Government should step in and run the service themselves; granted that they are willing to do so, where are they going to run the boats to? They cannot land their passengers on any of the wharfs at present in occupation, because they are all leased, and they cannot interfere with them. It was stated at the North Sydney Council meeting on Tuesday last by one of the aldermen that it would be only necessary to call for tenders for such service and we would find plenty of people willing to cater for it; granted that this is also correct, but they would be in the same predicament as the Government as regards landing their passengers on the Sydney side. The congestion of the traffic from Mosman and Neutral Bay does not apply to the ferry boats so much as it does to the tram service. Your correspondent "Resident" says if we were frequent travellers by the boats during the busy hours of the day, when the seating accommodation is not available for a section of the passengers, we might consider it as undesirable and even more dangerous to add to this condition of affairs than to further crowd the trams." We may say at once that we are very frequent passengers indeed by the boats during business hours of the day. We have travelled on the boats from 8 to 10 a.m., and between the hours of 4 and 6.30 p.m., and we have never yet seen such congestion of traffic on the boats, but that any passengers, if they saw fit, could find seating accommodation.

So far as we have learnt the complaint of congestion is menacing both to life and limb, and discomforting in every sense, not on the boats, but on the trams. The trams are so crowded during these hours that numbers of women and children are compelled to stand, notwithstanding that the majority of the men who travel on those trams are most courteous in surrendering their seats to the ladies. Not only is this so, but we know that the Tramway Department is a big loser by reason of the fact that the tram conductors are utterly unable to collect all the fares on the trams. This, however, is not a question with which we have to deal: the thing patent to everybody is that relief to the tram service must come, and that speedily, more especially as we stated in our previous letter, that this traffic is going to be very largely augmented by the additional traffic which will very soon be passing through Mosman by reason of the Manly tram now being constructed.

We do not desire to be understood as in any way advocating the convenience of the Sydney ferries; as a matter of fact, we realise that pressure cannot be brought upon them to construct the wharf on the western side of the point. That they will have to do so sooner or later goes without saying, but if they do not choose to do so at once neither we nor the majority of those who use the tram-service to-day see why this question should be raised to hamper the Government in undertaking the immediate construction of this much-needed tram, which is apparent to fully 75 per cent. of the residents in this district. We do not blame those who are advocating the construction of the wharf on the western side for bringing the matter prominently before the notice of the Government, but they in effect say if you don't build the wharf on the western side you needn't construct the tram at all.

So far as we know, or have been able to ascertain, those who are advocating this side are not by any means the most constant travellers to and from the city, and it is a well-known fact that, so far as the residents of Cremorne proper are concerned, they have no desire for the tram at all, and some have gone so far as to say that the present agitation for the construction of the wharf on the western side has been raised by the advocates thereof, not so much because they, with others, consider it the best site, but that they fear the loss of the present Cremorne wharf, which would entail upon them the inconvenience of having to walk to the new wharf if erected on the eastern side, because it has been stated that if the new wharf is built on the eastern side those passengers residing on Cremorne proper would have to use this wharf instead of the present one. We again repeat that the question of the wharf may well be left to the decision of the Government, who we feel sure, now that the discussion has taken place through the medium of your valuable paper, will see to it that the best site is selected, all other things being equal, but the factor which appeals to the majority of the residents and travelling public here is the immediate construction of the tram, regardless of the wharf site, and this work, we again say, cannot be put into operation a day too soon.

CASUALTIES.

A HAWKER'S MISHAP.

Early yesterday morning a hawker named George Gordon, living in Elizabeth-street, was wheeling his barrow along the street, when he took a fit and rolled under a cart, which passed over one of his legs. He was taken to Sydney Hospital by the Civil Ambulance, and admitted by Dr. Brown, suffering from a fractured thigh.

A CUT THROAT.

DUNGOG, Friday.

Michael Linnane, aged 42, employed on the railway line at Wallarobba, committed suicide by cutting his throat with a razor. Deceased, whose behaviour had been erratic for some time, was found by another workman, lying at the door of a tent with a razor lying close to the body. An inquest was held at Dungog on Thursday. Evidence was given to the effect that deceased had been depressed for some time, and spoke of giving himself up to the police as a lunatic. A verdict was returned to the effect that death was due to a self-inflicted wound.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

COLLARENEBRI, Friday.

Leslie Pugh, eldest son of the proprietor of the "Chronicle," accidentally shot himself through the body while cleaning a rifle last night. The medical officer has hopes of pulling him through.

LOSS OF EYESIGHT.

GOSFORD, Friday.

A MINER'S DEATH.

BROKEN HILL, Friday.

Samuel H. Manuell, who was injured while working in the South mine on March 17, died at the hospital this morning. He was about 60 years of age, and leaves a widow and grown-up family.

FATAL BLASTING ACCIDENT.

KALGOORLIE, Friday.

An inquiry into the death of a miner named John Shepherd, who was killed as the result of a premature explosion at the Kalgurli mine on March 31, was concluded yesterday. A verdict of accidental death was recorded. A rider was added that in all accidents, fatal or otherwise, a doctor's attendance is necessary, it being shown that when a doctor was told a man had been killed he said he could do no good, and advised the police to be sent for.

CHILD BURNED TO DEATH.

KALGOORLIE, Friday.

A burning fatality occurred at a dwelling in Federal-road, in the vicinity of Whippet Grounds, last night, when a boy, 6 years of age, named George Walsh, son of Thos. Walsh, a greengrocer, was burned to death before the eyes of his parents and a large crowd of people who collected in the vicinity. The circumstances of the sad occurrence show that but for the fact that in the excitement and confusion it was thought that the child had been rescued from the burning building, his life might easily have been saved.

A SERIOUS FALL.

FORBES, Friday.

Mr. George G. Eddy, cordial manufacturer, met with a serious accident on Thursday night, through accidentally falling down the cellar of his factory in Brown-street. When picked up it was noticed that his neck was dislocated, but whilst being carried to his residence near by, the bone slipped back into position. He is now recovering.

CHILD BURNT TO DEATH.

YASS, Friday.

At Weejasper on Wednesday evening a little girl, named Mona Hillier, was burnt to death. She was playing about a fire when her clothes caught alight.

In reporting the death of Mr. W. H. Carter, of Dapper, who was killed near Gilgandra by a falling tree, it was stated that deceased left his home on January 25. The date should have been February 25.

TOUR OF CADETS.

OFFICIAL RECOGNITION WITHHELD.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Difficulty has arisen in connection with the proposal that a number of Australian mounted cadets shall pay a visit to Great Britain and Europe. The proposition, which was originated by Captain Rushall, in Melbourne, was that a party of about between 20 and 30 cadets from the different States should leave Melbourne by the R.M.S. Orvieto on May 18 and spend some months in gaining experience in Great Britain. The boys were to pay their own expenses. The Minister for Defence was asked for official recognition of the undertaking. This included a letter to the High Commissioner, and permission to wear uniform and to attend camps of training in England. On consideration, however, the Minister for Defence is not prepared to recommend that approval be given. It is stated that arrangements had been made and accommodation secured on the steamer for the boys before any official recognition was asked for. The military board, to whom the letter was referred, does not think it would be wise to identify itself with the movement, in view of the recent experiences of the American boys in Australia. Negotiations between the Defence Department and Captain Rushall are still proceeding, and further representations will be made to the Minister with a view to inducing him to reconsider his decision.

COUNTRY SHOWS.

BATHURST.—The show was concluded on Friday, and was one of the most successful held for years. There was a large attendance on the last day in spite of counter attractions. The number of people who visited the show was the second largest for 12 years. The latest development of trade unionism came into prominence by most of the side shows displaying a placard, "To patronise unionism." The showmen have succeeded in forming a union. The trotting was interesting and attractive, especially the show handicap, which was won by Denver Huon in 3m 25s. In an exhibition trot Denver Huon did the mile in 2m 18s. P. N. Shea's Signal repeated his performance in the Hunters' Plate by winning the local hunters' contest. The same horse and Desmond had a battle royal with the high jump, Signal winning at 6ft 7½in. MUNICIPAL CONFERENCE.

A representative conference of municipalities with large areas and disproportionately limited finances was held at the Canterbury Town Hall last night, in order to consider the position of the councils under the Local Government Act in respect to finance. The Mayor of Canterbury (Alderman M'Culloch) presided, and the following councils were represented:—Prospect and Sherwood, Cabramatta and Canley Vale, Rockdale, Kogarah, Auburn, Bankstown, Campbelltown, Hurstville, Canterbury, Enfield, and Granville. After debate, it was decided, on the motion of Alderman Stinson, seconded by Alderman Gibson,—"That it is advisable that a deputation be arranged to interview the Minister for Works, with the object of obtaining an amendment of the Local Government Act, first, so that municipalities should be divided into three classes, and, second, so that municipalities in transformation from shires should not be called upon to go cap in hand to the Government for money, but should be granted a statutory annual endowment by Parliament during their early struggling years."

Lieutenant Etherton, of the Garwal Rifles, Indian Army, has just arrived in London after achieving a journey via Kashmir, Gilgit, Hunza, the Pamirs, thence along part of the little known Yarkand River, and continuing through Chinese Turkestan, Mongolia, the Altai Mountains, and Siberia to the Trans-Siberian railway. This is a feat never before accomplished.

THE FITZROY EXPLOSION.

INQUEST ON THE VICTIM.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

An inquiry was initiated to-day into the circumstances of the death of John William Crabtree, grocer, 69 years of age, who was injured in an explosion at his shop in Brunswick-street, Fitzroy, on March 19. His assistant, Charles Shaw, who is under remand on a charge of having set fire to the premises with intent to defraud, was present at the inquiry.

Jane Ennis, residing at Lygon-street, East Brunswick, stated that John William Crabtree rented a loft from her at the rear of her premises on March 8 at a rental of 2s 6d per week, stating that he required it for the storage of eggs. He wanted her to buy potatoes at 4s 3d a bag, and also other goods, which he brought to the loft; but witness told him she did not require any of his wares. He said he bought the goods at auction sales.

Margaret Mary Ennis, 18, daughter of the previous witness, stated that she saw Mr. Crabtree driving to the loft, and depositing goods there three times a day for about 10 days from March 8. She saw a young man with him once, and she believed he was Charles Shaw.

Thomas Blair, insurance inspector for the Manchester Fire Office, stated that his company did a good deal of business with John William Crabtree in February of this year. On February 6 he insured his stock and household furniture for £620, and also took out a policy for goods stored at a stable in Hanover-street for £67 10s. Eventually, with the cognisance of the fire office, Crabtree removed his goods from the stable in Hanover-street to an address in Coburg.

The inquiry was adjourned for a week.

HABERFIELD, HABERFIELD,
"THE PLACE OF BEAUTIFUL HOMES."
HABERFIELD, HABERFIELD.
profitable investment is a modern residence in Sydney's modern Suburb—
HABERFIELD.

IT IS NOT A MATTER OF SPECULATION, but a "straight out" business proposition. For every pound spent at Haberfield you obtain more than its equivalent. Solid bricks and mortar on good land do not deteriorate, and when situated in Haberfield, every year—every month, in fact—their value increases.

IN A FEW YEARS HABERFIELD has progressed from a large area of uncultivated land, bound on one side by the Summer Hill Railway Station and the Parramatta River on the other to the most up-to-date and finest suburb of Sydney. Such rapid development does not come by mere chance.

THE PROXIMITY OF HABERFIELD to the City, its bracing atmosphere, fine views, and delightful neighbourhood, account partly for its phenomenal growth. The position lends itself admirably to the formation of a suburb that is now distinctive for its well-built, well-kept homes, nicely arranged gardens and parks, recreation grounds, etc., enabling folk of cultured tastes to obtain the best enjoyment out of life.

BUT THE HIGH STANDARD of excellence both in construction and style that characterises every Haberfield Cottage is the most important factor that has made possible the success of this gigantic scheme.

SOON EVERY AVAILABLE ALLOTMENT will be taken up. There is no time to lose. If you would invest your money so as to gain the greatest benefits you must act now.

72 HOUSES ARE PUT UP EVERY YEAR, and, considering there are 400 beautiful Homes already erected at Haberfield you must realise that every month you delay the opportunities are fast slipping away to reside in this beautiful suburb, in a home of your own, built just as you desire.

WITH OR WITHOUT DEPOSIT we will build to your order. Our terms are most liberal—our methods open to your investigation. We hide nothing, and thus can easily convince you that a Haberfield Residence is money spent to the best possible advantage.

FROM THE LARGE STOCK OF WELL-SEASONED material always on hand, which we obtain direct from the source of supply, and with a large permanent corps of competent workmen controlled by skilled architects and experienced clerks of works, we erect Villas fitted with every modern convenience at the lowest possible cost, without any delay or trouble to you.

A TALK ON THE MATTER places you under no obligation. Open daily from 9 till 6. On Saturday afternoon all our salesmen assemble at the Haberfield Offices, and our Cottages are left wide open for your inspection. Ask for our Illustrated Booklet, "Haberfield, Sydney's Garden Suburb."

If anything is worth having, it's worth hurrying up for.
The only favour that a man needs (who wants to make money) is an opportunity.
The difference between the man who succeeds and the one who fails is that the first gets up early and secures the bargains, whilst the second sits around waiting to be hunted up.
The man who reaches the summit of success is the positive man—the man full of energy and push that forges his way to the front—the man possessed of oneness of aim, intent, desire, and ambition. And this the man who acquires one of

SHORTHORN STUD CATTLE,

FRIDAY, APRIL 15, 1910.

Owing to the Property having been Sold.

EDWARD TRENCHARD and CO. (in conjunction with PHILLIPSON, NEWMAN, and CO.) have received instructions from Mr. DAVID MITCHELL to hold a CLEARING SALE at GOORAMADDA PARK, RUTHERGLEN, VICTORIA, on FRIDAY, 15th APRIL NEXT, at eleven a.m. sharp, when they will SELL the whole of the MARIBYRNONG STUD of SHORTHORN CATTLE, Numbering 67 FEMALES and 15 BULLS.
This Herd was founded by the late Mr. C. B. Fisher in the year 1854, and is therefore one of the oldest established in the colonies. It is almost entirely descended from Stock introduced from England by him from tribes of acknowledged excellence, tracing back to the most fashionable lines of Bates blood, and the stock possess the true characteristics of this favourite strain in an eminent degree, being massive, heavily-fleshed animals of fine quality, with abundance of hair and strong constitutions.
The Herd has been carefully looked after, and fresh blood has been introduced by the purchase of Stud Bulls from the Bolindavale and Mr. John James's herds, and seven sires have been secured at a great cost from the late Mr. J. H. Angas, Collingrove Herd, S.A.
The satisfactory prices realised in the sale-ring for the annual drafts of young Bulls and Females, as well as the prizes won by them in the show-ring, in natural condition, not specially prepared for show, prove that the herd still maintains its position as being one of the best in the Australian States, and that the system adopted is a successful one, and meets with the approval of buyers.
A number of the young Bulls have been purchased by Milking Shorthorn Breeders for use in their herds, and with very excellent results to them, which was only to be expected, as most of the Cows in the herd have abundance of milk and of rich quality.
Also,
2000 CROSSBRED EWES, CATTLE, HORSES, PLANT, etc.
Owing to Mr. Mitchell having disposed of the property, the whole of the Stock will have to be sold, and the Auctioneers can therefore advise buyers to attend.
Catalogues can be obtained on application to the Agents.
Conveyances will run from RUTHERGLEN on the MORNING OF THE SALE, and Buyers arriving from New South Wales by the Sydney Express that morning will travel from Albury by 8.17 a.m. train, alighting at Chiltern, where they will be met, by giving notice to the Agents.

DARLING POINT.

That well-known Family Estate,

so long owned by the late T. S. Mort, Esq., and occupying one of the most select positions in the above favourite suburb, with large frontage to Ocean-street, and entrance from Main Darling Point-road, the through depth being extensive. The building is of stone, commodious, recently renovated, and tenanted by Mrs. H. C. White; and with its domain of land could be still utilised as a high-class residential property; or, on the other hand, considering the contour of the area, it could be subdivided to serve for a series of villas, which would command ready purchasers or let advantageously. Thus the double feature of a Home and Speculation are presented to the buying public.

Not often is such a property in the market, and with the convenience of transit now established by the Electric Tram, which is close by.

Preliminary Notice. Particulars again.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH, Ltd., have been instructed by the Executors of the late Thos S. Mort, to offer this valuable property for Sale by PUBLIC AUCTION on an early date, of which due notice will be given. (5111)

We have in stock Renault Commercial Vehicles, to carry loads from nineteen to forty-five cwt., and other sizes are arriving. We can on application give statistics as regards cost of upkeep.

THE SILENT RUNNING BELSIZE.

BELSIZE CARS are not experiments in fads, design, own tried novelties, but are a sound and tested proposition, which one expects when buying a car. They are honestly constructed for use over the roughest roads in N.S.W., which roads were inspected by the Belsize Company's Representative Engineer, who visited Australia three years ago.

Every part of the Belsize is of British Manufacture, and their lasting qualities and freedom from repair have been proved by actual use their owners have given their cars.

THERE IS A BIG DIFFERENCE

BETWEEN A MOTOR BUGGY

and a Motor Car. If you want speed get a Car, but if you are satisfied with a moderate pace, and want low cost of upkeep, get the genuine

"HOLSMAN" MOTOR BUGGY.

It is half the weight of other makes, and about one-third the number of mechanical parts. The result is simplicity, low cost of tyre and naphtha consumption, and very little to get out of order.

OUR ONE ARGUMENT IS ACTUAL EXPERIENCE OF USERS.

Mr. W. F. Gessard, the well-known Contractor, writes:—

46 Pacific-street, Newcastle, March 23, 1910.

We are pleased to inform you that our 15.20 that we purchased from you last December has given us the greatest satisfaction. On Good Friday we left Newcastle for Rydal. We made Glenbrook on Friday night a distance of 160 miles from Newcastle by road. Between Lithgow and Rydal we put a record for hill-climbing. We had occasion to go to a farmhouse off the main road, the grade being one in three, our "STAR" Car being the first to climb the hill without the aid or horseflesh. That is what the residents told us. Several cars had tried the hill, but failed, and had to be towed up by horses. We arrived in Sydney after a very pleasant run of 600 miles, only having one puncture. We are very pleased with our "STAR" Car. I may mention that we had five passengers and driver the whole way.

IMPORTANT TO CYCLISTS.

The B.S.A. trade mark of the "THREE PILED RIFLES" is now recognised the whole world over as the HALLMARK of CYCLE CONSTRUCTION, and every cyclist should insist upon his bicycle bearing this mark on EVERY PART, just as he would require to see the hallmark stamped on a gold watch.

The presence of the B.S.A. mark upon every part of a bicycle is in itself an UNEQUALLED GUARANTEE of the very HIGHEST QUALITY, and as such should be the first and principal item in your specification when ordering your new bike. Additional security can be obtained by having the B.S.A. TRANSFER affixed, as these can only be affixed to cycles BUILT THROUGHOUT OF GENUINE B.S.A.

If you are a road rider, you will want the EADIE COASTER HUB fitted. It has proved itself beyond question the most perfect form of combined freewheel and brake possible, and is specially adapted for B.S.A. Cycles, being now made in the same factory. Over 100,000 in daily use in Australasia.

SMARTNESS IN SKIRTS.

THE SMART SHAPE and CORRECT FIT of a Skirt is dependent upon the Cut.

A Skirt may be well made, of good material, and be correct in size, but if it is not well cut it will not fit well nor look well.

In the endeavour to produce a cheap article the Cut is usually sacrificed in order to get the largest number of Skirts out of a piece of Cloth, this explains why it is so hard to get a really good-fitting, smart-shaped Skirt.

IN WATERS' SKIRTS the Cut is the most important feature. No matter what price you pay you will get a smartness of Cut which is absent in most Ready-made Skirts, and which ensure a Good Shape and Fit.

If you have not had a Waters' Skirt before, buy one to-day, and you will see how different it is to those you have been in the habit of wearing.

EVERYBODY WHO WEARS GLASSES

They are an immense improvement on the ordinary flat lenses.

They are curved and hollowed like a spoon, thus conforming to the shape of the eye, and giving a very increased range of vision.

Another advantage is that they sit closer to the eye, and have a neater appearance.

You can effect a considerable improvement, and secure comfort for your eyes, if you allow us to convert your present glasses into Toric Lenses. We can do so without interfering with their power, and at a very moderate cost.

CALL AND HAVE THE TORIC LENSES EXPLAINED.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS.

Does it not strike you as pretty conclusive evidence that after offering £100 Reward to anyone who has a Remedy other than my own (which no one has claimed) for the Total Destruction of Superfluous Hair, there are no other remedies? And that it is immaterial what you buy, it is useless as far as superfluous Hairs and their destruction are concerned. No one has accepted my challenge, nor has one of the thousands of clients treated by me claimed the reward because "their hair had grown again." This must forcibly impress on you that there are no other Specialists who can remove this distressing disfigurement.

FREE TRIAL TREATMENT.

For further proof, I am willing to remove a few Hairs for you free of charge. Absolutely no charge will be made, nor will this trial treatment commit any lady to subsequently come to me for treatment. A Book on "The Truth About Superfluous Hair and Moles and other Facial Blemishes" is posted free of charge on application to
